St. Hilaire Spectator.

VOLUME IX. ST. HILAIRE POLK COUNTY, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, OCT. 15, 1890. NUMBER 12.

GONE TO HIS REST.

Justice Miller of the United States Supreme Court at Last Succumbs.

The End Comes Without a Struggle and Apparently Without Pain.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Justice Miller died to-night at 10:42 without a struggle and apparently without pain.

A few minutes before he died the phlegm in his throat gradually accumulated and his frame quivered. It was evident that the end was fast approaching, and the members of his household who were not in the sick room were hastily summoned to his bedside. Besides Mrs. Miller and her son Irvine, there were present Dr. Cook, J. W. Woolworth, an old friend of Justice Miller, who had just arrived from Omaha, the family servants and Chief Clerk McKenney, of the supreme court.

Soon after death the face of the justice, which had been somewhat drawn during the last day of his illness, changed to a perfectly natural condition, and he looked as if in a quiet sleep.

No arrangements for the funeral will be made until to-morrow, but it is certain that his remains will be removed to his home at Keokuk, Iowa, where they will be interred in the family burying ground.

To-morrow the supreme court will meet as usual at 12 o'clock, and after the announcement of the death of Associate Justice Miller by Chief Justice Fuller the court will adjourn. The justices will then consult with Mrs. Miller as to the time of the burial and the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Touzalin and Miss Corkhill, the daughter and granddaughter of the justice will reach Washington to-morrow.

A TRIBUTE TO HIS MEMORY.

The Star to-night says editorially of Justice Miller:

Of Pennsylvania stock on his father's side and North Carolina blood on his mother's—a native of Kentucky and a citizen of Iowa at the time of his appointment, Justice Miller has united all the characteristics of strength, solidity, intelligence and conscientiousness that characterize the peoples from which he sprang. Appointed to the associate justiceship of the republic's supreme court in the midst of the giant struggle of the Union for existence, he was one of the foremost figures of the federal judiciary in the settlement of the important questions growing out of that contest. A sincere and earnest Republican from the Fremont campaign in 1856, he supported the policy of that party in those measures which firmly established its supremacy and determined the course of the reconstruction.

Among the opinions written by him at this great period was that in the New Orleans slaughterhouse cases, which maintained the validity of the national powers under the new constitutional amendments. In the twenty-eight years of his service on the supreme bench Justice Miller has delivered opinions in a large number of cases involving high questions of government, and his lucid and weighty words have settled them perhaps permanently. In the Kilbourne-Thompson case the delimitation of legislative power and personal rights of the citizen was most clearly made. The right of the national legislature, however, was upheld by him and the court of which he was spokesman in the matter of interstate railroad transportation.

So clear cut have been many of his judicial and unofficial utterances in favor of the constitutional rights of the States in the Union that by some states' rights' men, even of an extreme school, Judge Miller has been regarded as the firmest friend on the supreme bench of the "reserved rights of the several states." On the other hand his position on the electoral commission of 1877 gave more satisfaction to Republicans than Democrats. But to those who have watched the career of the stricken justice, his impartiality has seemed as conspicuous as his common sense and legal ability.

One of the longest in service on that great tribunal, he has been excelled by none in dignity, in faithfulness to his trust and in all that makes up a consummate judge. He was eminent, like Bushrod Washington, for his practical judgment, and, if not so learned as Story, was as luminous, wise and judicious as any of the great men who have adorned the bench from the days of Jay, Iredell and Ellsworth to the present time. Twice considered for the place of chief justice, if the strong reasons advanced had operated for his promotion he would have been a worthy successor of Chase or Waite. A great jurist, there was no position in the world of jurisprudence he would not have adorned.

EXPERT TESTIMONY

A Doctor Charged With Crooked Work in a Murder Case.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Detective Sergeant Reilly this morning arrested Dr. Walter M. Fleming of this city, who arrived yesterday with his wife on the steamer City of Rome. Dr. Fleming is under two indictments of grand larceny, charged with accepting money from Mrs. Josephine Stephani, a wealthy Cuban widow, to give expert testimony as to the insanity of her son Alphonse, who is under indictment for the murder of ex-Judge Clinton G. Reynolds on May 15. Fleming was appointed on a commission of lunacy to examine young Stephani, and a verdict of insanity was brought in. Later Mrs. Stephani claimed that she had paid various sums of money to Gen. Milton S. Littlefield, a contractor of this city, and Dr. Fleming. Gen. Littlefield was arrested and held in $7,500 bail. Judge Martine to-day fixed bail for Fleming at the same amount, which was furnished.

HURRICANE AT PORT ARTHUR.

The Worst Storm in the History of the Place Raged Yesterday.

PORT ARTHUR, Special Telegram, Oct. 14.—The worst gale in the history of the town has prevailed for the last eighteen hours. The wind from the northeast has attained a velocity of thirty-eight miles per hour. Houses and tools, boiler plate and material for the breakwater have been all washed away, and considerable of the superstructure has been torn away by the waves. The men who lived there were rescued early this morning by the Kakabeka, which for the first in five years was unable to make her daily trips to Fort William. The Alberta arrived at 2 p. m., having made good weather of it. It was impossible to light up the lighthouse to-night.

Made an Assignment.

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 14.—Wallace Waggoner & Co., wholesale grocers, made assignment to-day for the benefit of their creditors. Liabilities, $300,000. No schedule of assets has yet been made out, but it is believed they will equal liabilities.

Reconsecration Service.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The bishop of London to-day performed a special reconsecration service in St. Paul's cathedral to purge the edifices from the defilement caused by the suicide which occurred in the historic building on Sept. 28. According to old traditions of the church the shedding of human blood in a place dedicated to God deprives the building of its sacred character, which can only be restored by a new consecration. A service similar to the one performed to-day is unprecedented in the history of the cathedral.

GEN. BELKNAP DEAD.

Grant's Secretary of War Found Dead in His Bed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Gen. William Belknap, ex-secretary of war, was found dead in bed this morning in his room in the Evans building in this city. The room in which he was found joined his office rooms and was only occupied by the general during his wife's absence from the city. Gen. Belknap was last seen alive on Saturday night about midnight when he was on his way to his rooms.

The autopsy disclosed the fact that the immediate cause of death was inflammation of the inner lining of the heart. For some years past Gen. Belknap has been an almost constant sufferer from gout, and in February last he had so severe an attack that he hardly left his room for three months or more. During that time he lost in flesh between thirty and forty pounds, and since then he has been in poor health. In consequence of his long illness his business has suffered and this had worried him at times.

As soon as the death of Gen. Belknap was known at the war department Acting Secretary Grant ordered the flag on the building to be put at half-mast in honor of the ex-secretary, and gave directions that the building be draped in black for the customary period. As soon as the funeral arrangements are completed an order will be issued, closing the department on the day of the funeral.

Gen. William W. Belknap was the son of W. G. Belknap, of the United States army, and was born in Hudson, N. Y., in 1831. He graduated at Princeton college in 1848 and, adopting the profession of law, settled at Keokuk, Iowa. He was elected to the Iowa legislature in 1849, and at the beginning of the War of the Rebellion, in 1861, he entered the military service as major general of volunteers. He fought in the battles of Shiloh and Vicksburg, and was with Gen. Sherman in his great campaign, and for bravery and gallant service he received successive promotions, until he was given the command of a division as major general. After the War he was appointed a collector of internal revenue, which position he held until he entered President Grant's cabinet Oct. 13, 1869, as secretary of war. This office he retained during Gen. Grant's second administration until March, 1876, when in consequence of charges of official corruption he resigned. He was impeached and tried before the senate for receiving bribes for the appointment of post traders and was acquitted on the technical ground of want of jurisdiction.

GOING TO PARIS.

A Report That Dillon and O'Brien Are in France.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The Paris correspondent of the Chronicle says that a private telegram received there from Havre states that Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien have landed on the coast of Brittany and are journeying to Paris.

It transpires that the visit of Messrs. Deasy and Lane, members of parliament, to the steamship Umbria yesterday was made simply for the purpose of taking farewell of a departing friend. The suspicions of the police that the visit was in some way connected with the escape of Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien are groundless.

THE TIPPERARY COURT.

TIPPERARY, Oct. 13.—On the opening of the court this morning medical evidence was submitted corroborative of the statement made on Saturday by Dr. Conway, one of Mr. O'Mahoney's physicians to the effect that his client's condition was such as to make his daily attendance in court dangerous. Mr. Ronan, of counsel for the crown, then questioned the witness closely and with so much sharpness that the defense denounced his conduct as barbarous. After a sustained discussion between counsel, the court adjourned until to-morrow, by which time Mr. Ronan said he would be able to suggest a course whereby the cases might be proceeded with despite the illness of Mr. O'Mahoney.

NORTHERN PACIFIC DIRECTORS.

A Plan for Their Election for Three Years Instead of One.

NEW YORK, Special Telegram Oct. 14.—The expediency of electing the new board of Northern Pacific directors for three years instead of one year is under consideration. The charter provides for such a tenure of office. Heretofore the whole of the directors have been chosen annually.

It is likely that the next dividend on the preferred stock will be at the rate of 5 per cent per annum instead of 4 per cent, and the matter of the division of the surplus which belongs to the preferred stockholders will also come up. This surplus, which amounts to about $3,000,000, belongs to the preferred stockholders as of right under the plan of reorganization. This fact has always been recognized, and it was officially put on record at the last annual meeting. The only thing to be decided is the time and the form of the dividend.

It has not yet been decided who will go into the board in the place of the late Frederick Billings, but there is not likely to be any important change. Mr. Billings was counted as a neutral man and was not dependent upon either the Villard or the Harris following.

Conflicting Reports.

LISBON, Oct. 14.—Conflicting reports have been received here regarding the situation of affairs at the mouth of Zambezi river. One report alleges that one of the British stern wheel gunboats attempted to pass up the river, to prevent which a line of Portuguese gunboats had been anchored across the mouth of the river with instructions to passively resist the passage of the British vessels and that she ran down and sank one of the Portuguese warships. Another report says that the British gunboats have not yet started from Zanzibar. The officials at the admiralty and the foreign offices discredit the first report.

Punished the Natives.

MADRID, Oct. 14.—An official dispatch received here from Manila gives news of the expedition sent by the Spanish government to Pomape to punish the natives for their recent massacre of Spaniards. The Spanish warships shelled the village of Mitlans, causing great consternation among the people and doing considerable damage. A column of troops was then landed, and the soldiers stormed the natives' position, carrying everything before them. The Spaniards' loss was seven killed and nineteen wounded. The native loss is estimated at 150.

Will Exclude American Products.

MADRID, Oct. 15.—It is announced that the Spanish government will request the United States government to admit the admit the products of Spanish possessions in the West Indies, especially tobacco and sugar without the recently imposed tariff restrictions. In the event of a refusal, Spain, it is stated, will exclude American products, especially breadstuffs.

Father Mathew's Memory.

DUBLIN, Oct. 14.—A procession numbering 50,000 persons marched through the streets of this city to-day in honor of the memory of Father Mathew, the apostle of temperance. The lord mayor, the members of the corporation and various trade and temperance societies were in the procession. The Presbyterian moderator, Sir Wilfrid Lawson, Archbishop Plunkett and other prominent persons were present at the luncheon which was subsequently given at the Mansion House. The day was generally given up to festivities by the citizens.

MERRIAM WILL WIN

A Careful Review of the Situation Assures the Republicans of Success.

Merriam Will be Elected by a Majority of Over 15,000.

The Republicans are Sweeping Everything Before Them.

The Signs.

As the campaign progresses the signs become more and more propitious. The Alliance-Labor movement grows weaker as the people of the State learn more definitely of its processes and purposes. It is being gradually discovered that the two elements comprising the newest political movement are like oil and water, and cannot be made to mix. What suits the so-called farmers is naturally and inevitably disliked by the so-called working men. The former have a chronic disposition to "shake the railroads over hell," but the labor element—that section of it which works with its hands—has discovered that a large proportion of the work which gives to it its daily bread proceeds directly or collaterally from the railroads. Hence antagonisms are being developed, and the new party is falling to pieces of its own weight. Meantime the paid advocates of the English free trade movement, and the tin-horn statesman tooting for momentary notoriety, continue to traverse the cow-paths of the back country districts and preach about the overwhelming disasters to the agricultural interests—disasters that never materialize. From the Fifth district—the section where the farmers' movement early in the campaign promised the largest results—there is one continual stream of reports that the fourth party ball is rapidly losing its momentum. Men who were formerly active in the Alliance movement are returning to their allegiance to the old parties. The leaders have given up the fight before the real battle was fairly begun. Mr. Lind in the Second district, reports gun. . Mr. Lind in the Second district, reports the same condition of affairs and asserts that there is no break in the Republican part of the Southwestern portion of the State which need create the slightest uneasiness. All of our members of Congress and both Senators have taken the stump and each one is doing yeoman service for the election of the whole ticket. Without exception their reports are to the effect that the solid Republican phalanx from the North Star State in Congress will remain unbroken. It is even asserted that Charlie Gilman in the Fifth has no possible chance for election, and that the farmers of the Second are not showing a vast amount of agricultural enthusiasm for General Baker. Everywhere, from the horizon to the zenith, the skies are bright, and it only remains for the leading Republicans in every county to do their duty by getting out the full vote to insure a more complete triumph than the old party has known in an off year during the past generation. Only three weeks remain in which to perfect the party organization. These twenty-one days should be a period of sleepless activity on the part of every man—young and old—who believes in the triumph of Republican principle. Especially are the principles of protection and reciprocity on trial in Minnesota this year. Republicans all over the North have their eyes fixed upon this State. They must not be disappointed. The verdict of this great agricultural commonwealth must be spoken in no half-hearted way. The season of assured material prosperity now dawning for the whole country must not be postponed by any reactionary movement in the great and growing Northwest. The Republican party, here, is assured of victory to-day, but it must be something more than a victory of a lean and lank majority of a few paltry thousands. Our success must be corpulent—portly with a spontaneous plurality reaching well in the thousands, so that when we enter upon the campaign of 1892 there will be a panicky feeling pervading the ranks of the common enemy. A great victory is within our grasp. Let us reach out and take it with courage.—Northfield News.

A Cheering Outlook.

The latest information from the numerous corps of correspondents enables the Pioneer Press to take this view of the situation:

There is reason for satisfaction with the Republican outlook in Minnesota. Some disaffection was expected, and some disaffection there has been. But it reached its height, we believe, a week or more ago, and is now decreasing and will continue to decrease until the day of election. The Republican campaign has only just begun. It will be a manly, straightforward and not a defensive campaign. The state administration needs no apology. It is its own best advocate. The affairs of Minnesota have profited by having in the governor's chair a man of high business and executive ability, and at the heads of departments men of probity and in harmony with the people. What could any administration do which this has not done? What better fortune could Minnesota ask than a continuance of the regime that has advanced her interests and helped to make her people at least more prosperous than any others similarly situated? It is questions such as these that voters begin to ponder as soon as the first hurrah of a campaign is over; and issues such as these that weigh with them as the time for casting their ballots draws near.

Nothing has so helped the Republican cause as the now open and avowed fusion between the Democracy and the Farmers' Alliance. As long as these two bodies bore the semblance of independent organization's even confident Republicans confessed that the situation had its serious features. There is no fact of politics better established than the power of a party name. The Democratic party, as the Democratic party, could hold the vote of almost every man who had ever belonged to it. Its ranks would be steady. The Farmers' Alliance, by virtue of the name, would capture a considerable vote in the agricultural communities; and, in the nature of things, this vote would be drawn more liberally from Republican than from Democratic sources. If the defection became considerable, there might be danger. But this prospect was so alluring to the Democracy itself, and the advantages of a secret collusion between it and the Alliance were so evident, that it could not keep itself within bounds. It proceeded to the further step of a regular offensive and defensive union with the Alliance, and thereby forfeited the very advantage it had hoped to gain. It is a loser from that time forth.

The Republican farmers who were getting ready to vote the Alliance ticket are not Democrats by any means. They were being beguiled into support of the Alliance only because it represented to them a new and separate movement; and, as between two old parties, they are Republicans every time. Now that they see the Alliance movement to be but a cover for the Democratic attack, they have changed their base. An Alliance ticket means a Democratic ticket, and that they will never vote. In this way, the announcement of the fusion is turning back to the Republican lines every day a number of voters who would otherwise have left them. It is working equally unfavorably to the Democrats in the opposite direction. The Democratic farmer reasons in the same way. He had intended, after the manner of his kind, to vote the regular party ticket, though the Alliance movement made a strong appeal to him, as a farmer, and caused him to almost waver in his party allegiance. Now he is taught that it is all the same thing; that the Democratic candidate and the Alliance candidate represent one object and purpose, and he yields to his inclinations and goes with the Alliance. This is not a fancy picture, drawn from hope or desire instead of from real life. It is what is actually happening in the state at large. Events like the withdrawl of Wilkinson in the Second district, on a bargain for a similar course by the Alliance candidate in the First, show the public that the Democratic-Alliance party is what they have to fight. And this has retained many a Republican vote that would otherwise have gone to the Alliance poll, just as it is demoralizing the Democratic line. That party will now learn, what political experience in other states ought to have taught it, that the habit of straight party voting and the reliance upon party right or wrong makes a successful fusion of two organizations during a campaign a far more difficult and hopeless business than swapping horses while crossing a stream. The reception accorded to Republican speakers everywhere shows that party interest and enthusiasm are awake and growing. We do not believe that the fourth of November has any surprises in store for the people of Minnesota.

The Book Trust.

It is not the Roman Catholic who is the great enemy of the American public school system and popular education. Neither of those classes who favor or oppose the reading of the Bible in the public schools are the dangerous enemies to universal education. The danger most to be feared today and the one to be taught against and conquered is the school book trust. Every book used in the schools of Minnesota to-day costs from fifty to seventy-five per cent. more than it should and the surplus goes into the pockets of the meanest and most heartless gang of piratical speculators ever known. The man who would rob the State school fund would be sent to the penitentiary followed by the hearty execrations of every citizen in the State, good or bad. And yet the people of Minnesota submit without protest to a species of robbery just as contemptible, just as open, just as inexcusable as though the State Auditor should take a half million from the school fund and decamp to Canada. Do the people of this state know that one school book publishing house has sent into retirement three millionaires during the past twenty years, and that the same house is still piling up wealth at the rate of more than a million a year? It is generally known to the people that the PECKSNIFFS who publish the books used by the school children of Minnesota have become one of the most demoralizing elements in every community in the land—that they bribe legislators with one hand while they pick the pockets of the poor with the other? There is only one way to kill this soulless and conscienceless trust. The State must buy the text books used in all the public schools and in the State University. Then, if the State cannot get those books at a fair price it can establish a State printing office and print them. The school book trust must follow the binding twine trust into the darkness of oblivion.—Northfield News.

Good News From Headquarters.

For the first time since the present campaign commenced the Republican state central committee has made an estimate of the strength of the Republican state ticket, and yesterday Chairman Heatwole gave it out that the present governor of the state will be re-elected by a majority of 15,000 or more votes.

"You may give this out straight from me," said he, "and the only reason I do not make a close estimate is because I do not know to-day how many votes Gov. Merriam will gain between now and Nov. 4. But I put down 15,000 as the minimum." This estimate is based upon the reports made by the chairmen of the county committees and others who attended the big committee meeting on Tuesday. These reports show also that there is every probability of the re-election of the five Minnesota congressmen and that, despite the special efforts which are being made by the Alliance and the Democrats, the Republicans will in all probability have a majority of the members of the next legislature. The returns from the country seem to indicate that the scheme of the Democrats, while ostensibly working for the whole state, congressional and legislative tickets alike, is really to sacrifice the state and congressional tickets in the interest of the legislative candidates, with a view to the election of a combination Democratic-Alliance United States senator to succeed Hon C. K. Davis. There is good evidence also that the Democratic and Alliance managers who have so far been working in conjunction with each other, are getting jealous of each other, and that there is likely to be an open rupture before election day.

Tom Wilson as a Barrator.

Maj. Edwards, of the Fargo Argus, says he knows a thing or two about Minnesota politics. In a late issue he refers to the report of Judge Wilson's speech at Fergus Falls in which the fickle candidate said among other things, in defense of his conduct as a railroad attorney:

The only case I argued at Washington while I was a member of congress was one against the Northern Pacific Railroad company, brought by one of its employes who had been seriously injured. I had tried the case in the courts below, and while I was in congress in the United States supreme court to which it had been appealed by the railroad company. I argued it against the company and had the judgment in favor of my client affirmed, on which I collected from the company a little over $28,000.

The Argus tells a thing or two about this case in these words, written in the major's peculiar style:

This particular case is familiar to the Dakota lawyers. It is true the "employe was dangerously injured," and that the judge's statement—on the face—looks well. But when it comes to be known that the case was "taken on shares"—and the poor "employe's" share amounted to very little—the glossy fabric woven together by the immaculate spellbinder, who admits himself to be without blemish, sinks beneath the statutory provision that barratry is one of those things that is described as stirring up litigation, and may be construed as a charge against a lawyer who will go in to rob a railroad, provided he gets the most of the divy.

Tom Wilson a Decoy uDck.

Midway News: No, Tom Wilson is not a "salaried" railroad attorney. He is a friend of the dear people, who, when clients come to him with prosecutions against the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, does all he can to discourage action, but if suits are instituted against that company in this state, defends it every time. No he is not "salaried;" he is only a decoy duck, retained on the quiet, not only in and out of court, but in and out of the legislature, congress the church, everywhere.

Lind the Poor Man's Friend.

Slayton Gazette: Congressman Lind is just now the recipient of much praise on account of his able efforts in championing the interests of the farmers in the Northwest in congress. He was raised on a farm until an accident disqualified him for such labor. In his law practice as well as in congress he has championed the cause of the poor against the aggressions of corporations. He is a man wholly in sympathy with the masses.

15,000 Majority for Merriam.

Martin County Sentinel: The Republican state central committee is making a vigorous campaign. Gov. Merriam is gaining ground daily, and we should not be at all surprised if he rounded up 15,000 majority. The more the people, especially the farmers, search his record the better they are pleased with it and they consider the state fortunate that its affairs are in the hands of such a careful and economical business man.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

MINNESOTA.

John Kopp, an old resident of St. Cloud, committed suicide at Sauk Rapids by shooting himself through the head.

An offer for an option at $1,000,000 has been made for the Anderson iron property, south of Ely, by an English syndicate.

S. Levalle, a tobacco dealer of St. Cloud, has skipped for parts unknown, leaving numerous creditors in the lurch.

E. S. Hall, a Benton county farmer, lost six stacks of grain and two stacks of oats by fire, amounting to $1,200. His hired man smoked a pipe.

The Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of St. Paul have resolved not to patronize stores violating the early closing agreement.

By the breaking in two of Conductor Johnson's train near Brandon his brakeman, John McCarty, received injuries from which he cannot recover. He is from St. Cloud.

The special election to vote on changing the county seat of Sibley county from Henderson to Gaylord resulted in a victory for the former place, the vote standing 1,532 for Henderson to 1,528 for Gaylord.

Mrs. J. L. Noyes, superintendent of the school for the deaf at Faribault, lies in a critical condition from injuries received by being knocked down and run over by a farm wagon.

A deaf mute named Peterson was caught on a bridge near Henning, on the Northern Pacific branch, by a pile driver engine and cut to pieces. He had no relatives or friends in the neighborhood.

Prospecting for iron ore, which was commenced some years ago in Pierce county Wis., across the river from Red Wing, is to be resumed, a new company having been organized for that purpose.

During a quarrel at Huron Lake, Joe Golda stabbed Alois Sontag in the eye with a jackknife, inflicting a wound which resulted in death. Sontag was a farmer living near the town and leaves a large family. Goda is in jail.

The bodies of two unknown men were found lying beside the Great Northern track near Barnesville. They had evidently been struck by a train and killed. Their clothing indicated that they were workingmen, and each had a ticket in his pocket for St Paul.

Four granary thieves were arrested at Fergus Falls, and bound over to the grand jury. Their names are Wallace Moon, Lovell Spaulding, Squire L. Kidder and Chauncey Kidder. They were caught in the act of selling the wheat.

The state treasurer's statement shows that $20,000 was paid last year for wolf bounties, which is far in excess of the legislative appropriation for that purpose. There is a suspicion that some persons are reaping a rich harvest by raising wolves for their scalps.

There are in the state institutions of Minnesota 3,425 inmates. When the state was organized, thirty years ago, there were but sixteen inmates in the state institutions. In 1870 there was one inmate for every 1,033 inhabitants; in 1890 one for every 626, and in 1860 there is one for every 423.

Prof. D. N. Harper of the state experimental farm at St. Anthony Park, has begun a series of experiments at the Trout Brook Sugar works near Red Wing, with sugar beets raised in Goodhue county, with a view of determining their adaptability to the manufacture of of beet sugar.

Richard Caton, a Mankato shoemaker standing high in religious circles, was compelled to leave that city rather suddenly the other day, it having been discovered that he had a wife and family living in England, while he was living in Mankato with another woman whom he claimed was his legal wife.

The greater portion of Lawrence township in Grant county has been devastated by prairie fires. Dozens of farmers lost all their crops, houses, farm buildings and machinery, and are in an impoverished condition. It is estimated that the loss will aggregate $40,000 or $50,000. The fire started from cinders dumped on the railway by a farm engine.

Three brothers named Donehower, together with Frank Glidden and George Young, are in jail at Winona, charged with robbing the Milwaukee and St. Paul freight cars at Richmond, Winona county. The robbery had been reduced to a system and had been carried on for a long time, much to the annoyance of the railroad company.

The Goodhue county wheat crop will average 25 bushels to the acre and be of good quality, while oats are yielding from 35 to 40 bushels to the acre. Barley is good, with an average yield of 40 bushels, and flax is of first quality, with a yield of from 15 to 20 bushels. The oat crop this year has been the biggest surprise that the farmers have had for some years.

The coroner's inquest at Heron Lake, disclosed that the instrument causing the death of Alois Sontag had penetrated the brain to the depth of an inch inside of the right temple. The skull was also crushed. The coroner's jury brought in a verdict that his death was caused by the instrument in the hands of Joseph Golda. Golda surrendered, and waiving examination, has been held to await the action of the grand jury for manslaughter in the first degree.

NORTH DAKOTA.

By the hydraulic process of drilling it is claimed an artesian well can be sunk in fifteen days.

R. J. Pratt's general merchandise store at Grandin, was burglarized of $200 worth of clothing. The thief was captured.

Two highwaymen are under arrest at Fargo. They, with six others, sandbagged a couple of men on the bridge between Fargo and Moorhead, and robbed them of $25.

A commercial man by the name of Gorden was robbed the other evening at Mayville of a mileage ticket, gold watch and $85 in currency. It is believed that the guilty party is under arrest at Grand Forks.

Prof. Stoltsbridge has arrived from Indianapolis and taken charge of the Fargo Agricultural college and experimental station. Rooms have been rented for the present in the building of the Congregational college. A course of lectures will be given this winter, and a class may also be instructed.

The Fargo college, belonging to the Congregational church, was dedicated at Fargo with appropriate services. The sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Vorgin of New York city. Then followed short addresses, Gov. Miller and State School Superintendent Clapp being two of the speakers.

W. A. Gray, an artesian well contractor, is of the opinion that the main source of supply for the artesian basin underlying the Jim river valley is in the Black Hills. He reaches this conclusion from observations of the strata passed through, and the depth of different wells he has bored in all portions of Dakota, including those in the Missouri valley from Bismarck to the south line of the state.

N. W. Nutting, the preacher who has stirred up such a sensation in North Dakota by assuming the role of a Lothario, was at one time practicing physician in Iowa City. He has a wife, but recently eloped with a young lady named Mills from Jackson, Mich. The real Mrs. Nutting declares that her erring husband is a bigamist and that she is afraid he will kill her, as he has often threatened to do.

The United States court opened at Fargo with Judge Tom as presiding. There are some important postoffice cases, including that of Bayley, the Mandan train robber, the young man charged with opening letters in the postoffice, and Fulton, the former postmaster at Casselton. Several cases against the Northern Pacific brought up from Jamestown will have a hearing.

Injunctions were served some time ago on the saloon men to stop the sale of liquor, and the matter was argued before Judge McConnell as to whether the injunction should be made perpetual or not. At Fargo Judge McConnell rendered a decision modifying the original injunction in that it allows the sale of liquor in original packages. The city council took action looking toward issuing some sort of a license to such houses.

It is reported that Mrs. Haskins, of Terraville, thought she heard burglars around her house the other night, so she hid her pocketbook, containing $200 in currency in the kitchen stove, and the next morning built a fire in the stove, but forgot all about the pocketbook until the smell of burning leather reminded her of it, but it was too late, as the purse and contents were burned to a crisp.

The barrel had evidently been there for years. Schneider took his treasure inside the saloon and the bar-keeper took it to look at and kept it. Schneider has brought suit to recover the money.

Four were democrats—hailing from North Carolina, Kentucky and Indiana.

The railroad commissioners have decided that when freight trains carry passengers they must stop at station platforms for the convenience of the latter. This has not been done, the roads specifying to passengers that, in consideration of being permitted to ride upon the freight, he did not insist upon being landed at the platform. It is expected that passengers will be excluded from a number of freights that now carry them.

At Oskaloosa, little Richard Levi Taylor, the albino child born of full blooded African parents, died at the age of 7 months. He was a remarkable baby, and, had he lived, would have developed into a wonderful albino man. At the time of his death his head was covered with a dense growth of curly hair as white as snow, and his eyes were of a bright pink color. His skin was of a milky whiteness, and he was a perfectly formed child in every way.

Making an Ocean Cable.

October Scribner: Let us first see what a submarine cable is, and how it is made. To do this a visit must be made to the enormous factory on the banks of the Thames, a few miles below London. Here the birth of the cable may be traced through shop after shop, machine after machine. The foundation of all is the conductor, a strand of seven fine copper wires. This slender copper cord is first hauled through a mass of sticky, black compound, which causes the thin coating of gutta-percha applied by the next machine to adhere to it perfectly, and prevents the retention of any bubbles of air in the interstices between the strands, or between the conductor and the gutta-percha envelope. One envelope is not sufficient, however, but the full thickness of insulating material has to be attained by four more alternate coatings of sticky compound and plastic gutta-percha. The conductor is now insulated, and has developed it to "core." Before going any further the core is coiled into tanks filled with water, and tested in order to ascertain whether it is electrically perfect, i. e., that there is no undue leakage of electricity through the gutta-percha insulating envelope.

These tests are made from the testing room, replete with beautiful and elaborate apparatus, by which measurements finer and more accurate than those even of the most delicate chemical balance may be made. Every foot of core is tested with these instruments, both before and after being made up into cable, and careful records are preserved of the results.

After the core has been all tested and passed, the manufacture of the cable goes on. The core travels through another set of machines, which first wrap it with a thick serving of tarred jute, and then with a compact armoring of iron or steel wires, of varying thickness according to the depth of water in which the cable is intended to be laid. Above the armoring, in order to preserve the iron from rust as long as possible, is applied a covering of stout canvas tape thoroughly impregnated with a pitch-like compound, and sometimes the iron wires composing the armor are separately covered with Russian hemp as an additional preservative against corrosion.

An Anecdote of Sheridan.

The October Century: While the United States was engaged in the great civil war, France and Austria took advantage of our comparatively helpless condition to attempt the conquest of Mexico, with a view to construct an empire there under Maximilin. Gen. Grant was strongly opposed to this policy, and after Appomattox sent Sheridan with an army to the lower Rio Grande to observe the movements of the foreigners and to be in readiness to intervene whenever congress gave permission.

An orderly woke the colonel soon after daylight one morning and urged him to go down to the bank of the river, as something remarkable was going on there. The colonel did so, and had the gratification of seeing a combat—it could hardly be called a battle—between the national troops, the adherents of Juarez, and the Mexicans who were serving under the banner of Maximilin and who were in possession of Matamoras. The object of the Juarez troops was, of course, to drive the enemy from Matamoras and hold the place, as, owing to its proximity to the United States forces, it was a very important point. Each side seemed to be fortified, and was engaged in a contest at long range, which was neither very exciting nor destructive. The next morning the orderly came again to wake the colonel, assured him that he would see some genuine fighting. The colonel hurried down to the bank and there he saw the Juarez men leave their intrenchments, advance with the utmost intrepidity, storm the works at Matamoras, and drive the adherents of Maximilian through the town and far beyond out into the open country. Of, course Sheridan could not send a force to the other side of the river without the authority of congress and the war department. That would have been an unheard-of proceeding. What he did do was to give one of his brigades a leave of absence, and that settled the question so far as Matamoras was concerned.

A Preventive of Seasickness.

New York Herald: A new medical discovery has been made which is simply invaluable. It is a sure method of preventing seasickness, and it will be hailed by the disciples of Hahnemann as a new truth of homeopathic principle. All one has to do in order to cross the Atlantic without an abdominal pang is to produce artificial seasickness on the shore previous to making the passage. For two weeks before going to sea it is necessary to take continual doses of some emetic—say ipecacuanha. Rev. Chapman has returned from the M. E. Conference and has been assigned to this place for another year. He wishes us to announce that church services will commence here after at 7:30 p. m. Sunday evenings instead of eight.

Fergus Falls Journal: Mr. Owen doesn't seem to have a very good impression of Judge Wilson as the farmers friend, for in his speech he said: "Judge Wilson, the Democratic candidate, says it is useless and pure demagoguery to rail at the railroad. Now I have a high respect for Judge Wilson and his personality and he is all right in saying this. It is simply the opinion of a paid attorney for the corporation who employs him. He would be foolish not to say it."

The train was two hours late again last Friday. This is getting to be entirely too frequent and, for no reason except that the crew is compelled to do work at Crookston. The Great Northern is fast approaching the "for revenue only and public be damned" policy.

"Farmer" Owen the Alliance candidate for governor, evidently don't intend to lose anything in his campaign. He refuses to speak at any place unless the people give him $50 or more for his services. As this is about all he will get out of the campaign it is easily seen that he has a great head.

Mankato Free Press: And now Judge Wilson is getting jealous. He sees the Democratic State Central committee giving more support to Owen than to himself, and he has called the bosses down with the plain intimation that if they do not rally to his defense they may have to fill a very large vacancy on the ticket. Evidently the committee of which Campbell is chairman has lost its head in fixing the deal with the Alliance. A "cold deck" from an under-the-table shuffle is what is making Wilson wheeze.

Fergus Falls Journal: We are sorry to learn that some of the leaders of the new political party which has nominated Mr. Owen for Governor are advising their followers not to read any papers which do not favor the movement, nor to attend political meetings where the speakers favor the other parties. This is about as serious a charge as could be made against a party in an enlighten country like this. Must the followers of the independent movement be kept in ignorance in order to make them vote the independent ticket? Don't these men dare to have the issues fairly discussed?

The Minnesota farmer is to be congratulated upon the partially successful efforts of Senator C. K. Davis to reduce the tariff on binding twine. In his great tariff speech delivered in the senate about one month ago, Senator Davis showed that binding twine was controlled by one of the most insolent trusts in the nation—a trust with millions of money back of it, and with one of the meanest lobbies ever in Washington behind it. In the face of this corrupt force Mr. Davis succeeded in reducing the tariff on this farmers' necessity from 2¼ cents to 7 mill per pound.—News.

Some writer has described the following as a party life in this topsy turvy world. No man is satisfied. One man is struggling to get justice, another is flying from it. One man is saving to build a house, another is trying to sell his building for less than cost to get rid of it. One man is spending all the money he can make in taking a girl to the theater and sending her flowers, in hopes eventually to make her his wife, while his neighbor is spending all the gold he has to get a divorce. One man escapes all the diseases that man is heir to and gets killed on the railroad. Another goes through a dozen wars without a scratch and dies with the whooping cough.—Ex.

Northwestern Agriculturist: Most of the Alliance platforms adopted are not simple enough. Instead of making a simple platform covering the points in which farmers are vitally interested and on which all who sympathise with labor can stand consistently, an attempt is usually made to cover the whole field and reform everybody and everything, thus frightening away many who differ in opinion on matters that do not vitally interest the farmer any more than other classes. To succeed in politics requires votes it is good politics to concentrate and not waste strength on side issues. In concentration on reforms of vital importance to the farmer and in the absolute justice of the cause lies all hope of the success of any Alliance party or ticket.

Pioneer Press: It was a curious spectacle presented by the Mormon church conference, yesterday, when President Woodruff made an official declaration forbidding plural marriages and the ten thousand Mormons present unanimously accepted the manifesto as authoritative and binding. Furthermore they declared that they would not henceforth antagonize the laws of the land or resist the constituted fedral authorities. Well may the press dispatch relating these proceedings pronounce this action "the most important step taken by the church for more than a quarter of a century." This is the nominal, if not the actual, end of the warfare which has for long years been waged between the church of Brigham Young and the friends of morality and decency, represented by the legislative and executive powers of the government. It is possible that the Latter Day Saint are sincere in this surrender to the inevitable, this abandonment of the unholiest article of their faith. But it is not impossible that they are simply biding their time and that the renunciation of polygamy is only an artful stroke of policy designed to strengthen themselves before the people until the time is ripe for a rescision of the good resolution of yesterday. Time only can tell. Meanwhile the fact that these gentry, like Joey Bagstock are "de—vilish sly," should not be lost sight of.

BARNSTORMING THAT PAID.

Ludicrous Experience of a Stock Theatrical Company in the Northwest.

Charles Arnold used to belong to a stock company up in Montreal some years ago, and during the summer months the members of this company would make commonwealth trips through the far Northwest on their own hook. It was a good company, too, including such well known actors and actresses as Mark Smith, E. A. McDowell, J. H. Gilmour, Fannie Reeves, Annie Russell, Felix Morris and Arnold. They used to go to Winnipeg and play several weeks to fine business, and one summer the manager was approached by the mayor of a small town about sixty miles from Winnipeg. He said they had never seen a show there and would turn out well. There was no hall or theatre, but they could play in a bonded warehouse in the town. Finally, after the mayor of the place had virtually offered the company a guarantee for two nights, they decided to accept.

When the place was reached it was found to be but a mere village of less than 1,000 inhabitants. The bonded warehouse had been fitted up as a temporary theatre, and a stage had been erected at one end. A dollar a head was charged for the reserved seats, and they were soon occupied. Many were looking in at the windows, and Arnold went outside before the show and collected a half dollar each from these. It was willingly paid. Every one came on horseback, and the prairie round about looked like a horse sale. But there was good big money in the house the first night, and "Rosedale" by the company appeared to give wonderful satisfaction.

On the second night the house was larger, if anything, and after the first act the mayor asked the company to stay another night. They were obliged to leave for Montreal the next day and could not. The mayor urged them to remain, and finally Arnold said that they would give a performance of "Pinafore" after they had finished "The Shaughraun," if the audience would stay. This announcement he made before the curtain at the mayor's request, explaining that they could not stay another night. There were cries of "Go on," "Play all night," etc. It was arranged that the gentlemen should leave the place after the first performance, giving the ladies enough to pay their second admission. After this had been collected the gentlemen would be readmitted, paying for themselves as they came in. At 10:45 p. m. "The Shaughraun" was finished, and at 11 p. m. the curtain went up on "Pinafore," with a melodeon as an orchestra. The house was but $2 less than the first one, two men having been called away. At 1:30 a. m. the final curtain fell and the company packed up and left for Montreal at daybreak. It was barnstorming, said Arnold, but it was profitable and there was lots of fun in it.—Chicago Herald.

The Goose and the Farmer.

A farmer in Cheshire had a flock of geese, one of which showed a great partiality toward him. Whenever he went to the mill, to the blacksmith's shop or through the bustling streets, the bird stalked after him, so that when he wished to go out alone he was obliged to fasten the bird up. When the farmer was at the plow the goose did not walk with the waddling pace of his tribe, but with a firm step, with his head raised and his neck erect, a short way before his master in the line of the furrow, frequently turning round to look at him. When allowed, he would mount on his lap as he sat by the fire after dark and nestle his head on his bosom. When the farmer went out shooting the goose was at his side, following him wherever he went, getting over the fences, as the master said, better than he could. All this was without any encouragement on the part of the farmer, who rather opposed it. Wonderful as this attachment was it had a very sad end; the man could not understand it, he thought it foreboded some evil to him, and in a moment of alarm he killed this faithful companion.—New York Mail and Express.

Ants and Plants That Harbor Them.

In a paper read before the British Scientific association on the Humboldtia laurifolia as an ant harboring plant, Professor Bower observed that the peculiar relations between plants had been the subject of considerable observation from time immemorial. The literature on the subject could be traced as far back as 1750, and Captain Cook, in describing his voyages, distinctly alluded to the matter. In one place he said that he had seen on a certain tree a number of black ants, which perforated the twigs, and, after eating out the pith, formed a lodging in the cavity, and yet the tree continued in a flourishing condition. In tropical climates there were many plants pre-eminently associated with ants. The Italian botanist Picari contended that the relationship was advantageous alike to the plants and to the ants. The former afforded shelter to the latter, and in some cases supplied them with food.

Great Seal of the Confederacy.

The state of South Carolina has recently been presented with a valuable historical relic—the seal of the Confederate States of America. It is made of polished bronze and is about three inches in diameter. On one side is an equestrian statue of Washington and on the other the inscription: "Confederate States of America, 22d February, 1862. Deo Vindirece." It was made in England and reached Richmond only a few days before the evacuation. In the general tear up which followed it was overlooked and afterwards fell into the hands of William E. Earle, of Washington, D. C., by whom it has been presented to the state of South Carolina.—St. Louis Republic.

(In the conservatory) Reginald—Now that we are alone, Claire, I can ask you a question that I have been burning to ask all the evening.

Claire (overcome with emotion)—Oh, Reginald!

Reginald—Ever since I entered the ball room I have felt that my necktie was slowly creeping over the back of my collar, and the thought of my appearance made me miserable. Tell me, Claire, is my necktie all right?

Whereas Johannes Johanneson Haride an unmarried man, did on the 30th day of November 1883 duly execute and deliver to Caroline A. Wells as mortgagee, his certain mortgage bearing date on that day, whereby he mortgaged to said Caroline A. Wells the following described lands situate in the county of Polk and state of Minnesota to-wit:

The East half of the South East quarter of the Section Thirty (30); and the West half of the South West quarter of Section numbered Twenty-nine (29) in Township One-hundred-fifty-four (154), North of Range numbered Forty-four (44) West, containing One-hundred-sixty acres, to secure the payment of his certain promissory note bearing the same date as said mortgage for the sum of Three-hundred-fifty dollars with interest payable annually at the rate of ten per cent per annum, said note being payable to the order of said Caroline A. Wells on the 30th day of November 1888; which said mortgage was on the 30th day of November 1883 filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds of said Polk county, at 3.10 o'clock p. m. in Book N of mortgages on page 204.

And whereas the said Caroline A. Wells for a valuable consideration did on the 15th day of August 1885 duly sell, assign, transfer and set over the said note and the said mortgage securing the payment of the same to Severin L. Demen of said county, which said assignment was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county on the 21st day of August 1888 at 11 o'clock a. m. in Book 36 of Mortgages on pages 526 and 527 inclusive and whereas default has been made in the conditions of said mortgage by the ommission to pay the said sum of Three hundred-fifty dollars which became due and payable on the 30th day of November 1888 together with the interest from the day of execution of said note and mortgage and taxes on said land paid by the assignee of said mortgage amounting to the sum of Forty-nine dollars and seventy-five cents and interest thereon, and whereas there is claimed to be due and is due upon the said note at the date of this notice the full sum of Five-hundred-eighty-six dollars and twenty-eight cents (586.28) together with the sum of Forty-nine 72-100 dollars paid for taxes on said land as aforesaid with interest thereon from the payment of the same; and no suit or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover said sum so due or any part thereof.

Now, therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged premises which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk county at the front door of the Court house in the City of Crookston in said County and State on Saturday the 18th day of October 1890 at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day at public auction to the higest bidder for cash to pay the sum due on said note and the interest thereon with the taxes paid, assessed and levied on said premises together with the costs of this proceeding including the sum of twenty-five dollars stipulated in said mortgage to be paid in case of foreclosure thereof.

Poverty and Conceit.

I have heard a great many things said in my time against poverty, but never till the other day, when a clever woman made the suggestion, did it occur to me that poverty tends to make a man conceited. Her argument was as follows: A poor man has to earn his living, and the mere fact that he does so leads him to think highly of himself, whereas the rich man, who lives on the interest of money acquired originally by an ancestor near or remote, makes no living, is not even certain that he could make one, and consequently remains in a humble, or at least in a modest, state of mind.—Boston Post.

The Cowcatcher Not Patented.

It is said that the common cowcatcher attachment to locomotives is about the only article of universal use that has never been patented. Its inventor was D. B. Davies, of Columbus, who found his model in the plow. Red lights on the rear of trains, it is further said, were adopted at the suggestion of the late Mrs. Swisshelm, after a railway accident in which she had a narrow escape.—Parker (Kan.) Pilot.

Iceland fishermen now carry oil regularly as a means of smoothing the waves and enabling them to continue at work in weather in which heretofore their boats could not have lived.

Red Glass.

A new red glass is being made in Germany. It is utilized for bottles, goblets and vases of various kinds, and in photographic, chemical and other laboratories. By melting together fine sand, red oxide of lead, carbonate of potash, lime, phosphate of lime, cream of tartar, borax, red oxide of copper and bioxide of tin, a transparent red glass of very fine quality is obtained.

Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of all symptoms of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular. For sale by Justus L. Johnson.

LINCOLN'S MELANCHOLY.

His Sympathetic Nature and His Misfortunes.

Those who saw much of Abraham Lincoln during the later years of his life, were greatly impressed with the expression of profound melancholy his face always wore in repose.

Mr. Lincoln was of a peculiarly sympathetic and kindly nature. These strong characteristics influenced, very happily, as it proved, his entire political career. They would not seem, at first glance, to be efficient airs to political success; but in the peculiar emergency which Lincoln, in the providence of God, was called to meet, no vessel of common clay could possibly have become the "chosen of the Lord."

Those acquainted with him from boyhood knew that early griefs tinged his whole life with sadness. His partner in the grocery business at Salem, was "Uncle" Billy Green, of Tallula, Ill., who used at night, when the customers were few, to hold the grammer while Lincoln recited his lessons.

It was to his sympathetic ear Lincoln told the story of his love for sweet Ann Rutlidge; and he, in return, offered what comfort he could when poor Ann died, and Lincoln's great heart nearly broke.

"After Ann died," says "Uncle" Billy, "on stormy nights, when the wind blew the rain against the roof, Abe would set thar in the grocery, his elbows on his knees, his face in his hands, and the tears runnin' through his fingers. I hated to see him feel bad, an' I'd say, 'Abe don't cry;' an' he'd look up an' say 'I can't help it, Bill, the rain's a fallin' on her.'"

There are many who can sympathize with this overpowering grief, as they think of a lost loved one, when "the rain's a fallin' on her." What adds poignancy to the grief some times is the thought that the lost one might have been saved.

Fortunate, indeed, is William Johnson, of Corona, L. I., a builder, who writes June 28, 1890: "Last February, on returning from church one night, my daughter complained of having a pain in her ankle. The pain gradually extended until her entire limb was swollen and very painful to touch. We called a physician, who after careful examination, pronounced it disease of the kidneys of long standing. All he could do, did not seem to benefit her until we tried Warner's Safe Cure; from the first she commenced to improve. When she commenced taking it she could not turn over in bed, and could just move her hands a little, but to-day she is as well as she ever was. I believe I owe the recovery of my daughter to its use."

Mind-Reading Fifty Years Ago

R. Alexander Johnston is a "mind-reader" who is astonishing the people of Chicago by his performances. The achievements of Bishop and Johnstone, remarkable as they seem, appear insignificant, says the Washington Critic, when, compared with the really wonderful accomplishments of Alexis Didier, a mind-reader, or clairvoyant who lived in Paris before the 50's. Didier was only 17 years old when he attracted the attention of Lord Normanby, the English ambassador. The ambassador had expressed doubt as to the truth of the stories told of Didier's power, and a meeting was arranged at which were present Lord Normanby, another English nobleman, Lord Fitzclarence, Didier, and Marcillet, his friend, and several other persons. Normanby asked Didier to describe the former's country house in England. After a little reflection a correct and detailed description of the situation and grounds was given, and the house and its furniture accurately described. A young lady present asked Didier a question and he told her name and that she was a dame d'honneur to the queen, which was true. Lord Normanby took a book, and, having stated the number of a page, Didier immediately repeated a sentence in it, Normanby not having put the book out of his hands, and the experiment was repeated several times with success.

Lord Fitzclarence here took the hand of Didier, and, pointing to one of the company, said: "Tell me how I was employed day before yesterday with that gentleman?" Didier replied: "I see you both going to the Rue Lazon in a carriage; then you take the train and travel to Versailles; you then get into another carriage which conveys you to St. Cyr. You visit the military school, the other gentlemen having been educated there. You return to Versailles; you go to a pastry cook's. Your companion eats there little cakes; you take bread. You return to Paris on the railroad by the left bank." Didier's statement was corroborated by Fitzclarence as being correct in every detail. The second time Normandy saw Alexander Didier he said: "In this box I have placed something; can you tell me what it is?" Didier replied: "It is a bracelet with a portrait. The likeness is of Queen Victoria." And his lordship, as might be supposed, was astounded that Didier should have hit the truth exactly.

These are only a few of the deeds accomplished by Didier. The simplest of these surpass anything performed by the mind-readers of the present.

St. Jacobs Oil cures Back Aches, Headache, Toothache, and all ACHES PROMPTLY

It Was a Surprise.

A guest at one of the mountain resorts who was charged ten cents for a glass of lemonade made a prompt and vigorous kick, saying:

"This is nothing short of highway robbery, and I won't submit to it."

"My friend," said one of the clerks who had been called on to adjust the matter, "what do you suppose our object is in keeping this hotel?"

"To accomodate the public, of course."

"Exactly, but that's not all. We intend to make money at the same time."

"You do?"

"Of course we do?" We must have a profit even on our beer."

"Then I'll pay my bill and go! I like to see everybody get along, but when the clothing store in my town sells a suit of clothes for half off I'm not going away from home to pay somebody full figures and a little more on top of them."—Sun.

A Heiress' Fortune.

A gentleman waiting to have his portrait taken had handed to him an album of photographs. Hardly had he opened the book when he shrieked and fell insensible to the floor. The album contained a photograph of his daughter, whom he had lost sight of for twenty-one years. She was traced and found to be earning a precarious livelihood by teaching music. She is now sole heiress to a fortune of several millions.—London Tid-Bits.

THE LADIES DELIGHTED.

The pleasant effect and the perfect safety with which ladies may use the liquid fruit laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions make it their favorite remedy. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, gentle, yet effectual in acting on the kidneys, liver or bowels.

A Synopsis of the New Tariff Law Recently Passed by Congress.

All the Provisions and Important Charges Outlined.

Bradstreet's gives the following synopsis of the new tariff law, which will be found useful not only for present information, but to be utilized in the future:

Only a very brief mention can be made of the changes in the chemical schedule. On several of the acids reductions are made. Sulphuric acid, however, is taken from the free list and made dutiable, at ⅛c per pound. The rates on alcoholic perfumery and alumina and alum compounds are retained. The rates on ammonia and its compounds are changed from ad valorem to specific. On camphor the rate is increased from 4c to 6c per pound. The duty on chloroform is reduced from 50c to 25c per pound. There are decreases on glycerine, iodine, iodoform, licorice, magnesia and morphine. On drugs generally the rates remain the same. Under the head of oils, cotton seed and croton oils have decreased rates, cod liver oil is changed from 25 per cent ad valorem to 15c per gallon, and olive oil is changed from 25 per cent to 35c per gallon. The rate on opium for smoking is increased from $10 to $12 per pound. Under the head of paints, color and varnishes there are a number of changes from ad valorem to specific rates. The changes on medicinal preparations are not very important.

EARTHENWARE AND GLASSWARE.

Under the earthenware and glassware schedule the rate on fire brick not glazed is changed from 20 per cent ad valorem to $1.25 per ton. On tiles and brick other than fire brick not ornamented the rate is increased from 20 to 25 per cent ad valorem. The rate on Roman and other hydraulic cement is changed from 20 per cent to 8 cents per 100 pounds; the duty on lime is changed from 10 per cent to 6 cents per 100 pounds, and that on plaster of paris, ground, from 20 per cent to $1 per ton. There is some increase in the rates on common brown earthenware, but the rates on china, porcelain, etc., remain substantially unchanged. On flint and lime-pressed glassware the rate is increased from 40 to 60 per cent ad valorem. On engraved glassware the rate is increased from 45 to 60 per cent. There are increases ranging from 15 to 20 per cent on a number of other kinds of glass, such as thin-blown and heavy-blown glass, porcelain and opal glassware, spectacles and lenses. There is a reduction on burr stones from 20 to 15 per cent, and the rates on building stone, except marble, are doubled.

METALS AND MANUFACTURES THEREOF.

In the metal schedule the additional rate on iron ore containing more than 2 per cent of copper is reduced from 2½ cents to ½ cent per pound. Sulphur ore as pyrites, or sulphuret of iron in its natural state, containing in excess of 25 per cent of sulphur, is made free. There are slight reductions on round and square bar iron. Beams, girders and other structural shapes of iron or steel are reduced from 1¼ cents to 9-10 of a cent per pound. Boiler or plate iron and steel are newly classified, and varying rates are substituted for the rate imposed under the previous law. Plate iron or steel thinner than No. 10 wire gauge is to pay duty as sheets. There is a slight reduction on forgings, with the provision that no forgings will pay less than 45 per cent ad valorem. There are some slight reductions on hoop, band and scroll iron and tagers' iron. Railway bars are reduced to 6-10 of a cent per pound. Tin plates are to pay ⅞ of a cent per pound more than sheet iron until July 1, 1891, after which date they will pay 2 2-10 cents per pound. After the same date manufacturers of tin will pay 55 per cent ad valorem, and after Oct. 1, 1897, tin and terne plates lighter in weight than 63 pounds per 100 square feet are to be admitted free of duty unless the aggregate quantity of such plates produced in the United States in any year in the intervening time shall equal one-third the amount of such plates imported in any one fiscal year. On steel ingots, blooms, slabs, billets, etc., there are some increases and some changes from ad valorem to specific rates. On wire there are some reductions. In manufactures there are reductions upon anchors, axles, hammers, crowbars, bolts, cast iron pipe and vessels and chains. Cutlery and table ware are newly classified, and varying rates are substituted for the previous uniform rates. On the finer kinds of files rates are reduced. On firearms a specific duty is added to the previous ad valorem rate. On nails and spikes there are some reductions. Aluminum is made free. Copper rates are reduced except in the case of rolled plates, sheets, rods, pipes and sheathing. Gold leaf rates are increased from $1.50 to $2 per package of 500 sheets. On nickel the rate is reduced from 15 cents to 10 cents per pound. Quicksilver is changed from 10 per cent ad valorem to 10 cents per pound. Block tin, at present free, will after July 1, 1893, pay a duty of 4 cents per pound, but it will be made free after July 1, 1895, unless the product of the mines of the United States will exceed 5,000 tons in any one year prior thereto. Type metal is changed from 25 per cent to 1½ cents per pound for the lead contained therein. Zinc in blocks or pigs is increased from 1½ cents to 1¾ cents per pound. Old and worn-out zinc is reduced from 1½ cents to 1¼ cents per pound. Iron and steel bars which are cold-rolled, cold-hammered or polished in any way in addition to the ordinary process of hot rolling or hammering are to pay ¼ cent per pound in addition to the rates provided in the act, and the same additional rate is to be paid by plates which are subjected to similar treatment.

THE WOOD SCHEDULE.

The wood schedule shows several reductions. The rate on timber is reduced one-half. There are reductions also on clapboards and shingles. After March 1, 1891, paving posts, railroad ties and telegraph poles of cedar are to pay 20 per cent ad valorem.

SUGAR BOUNTIES AND DUTIES.

The provisions of the act relating to bounties for the production of sugar are as follows:

"225. That after July 1, 1891, and until July 1, 1905, there shall be paid, from any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, under the provisions of section 3,689 of the Revised Statutes, to the producer of sugar testing not less than 90 deg. by the polariscope, from beets, sorghum or sugar cane grown within the United States, or from maple sap produced within the United States, a bounty of 2 cents per pound; and upon such sugar testing less than 90 deg. by the polariscope, and not less than 80 deg., a bounty of 1¾ cents per pound, under such rules and regulations as the commissioner of internal revenue, with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, shall prescribe.

"The producer of said sugar to be entitled to said bounty shall have first filed prior to July 1 of each year with the commissioner of internal revenue a notice of the place of production, with a general description of the machinery and methods to be employed by him, with an estimate of the amount of sugar proposed to be produced in the current or next ensuing year, including the number of maple trees to be tapped, and an application for a license to so produce, to be accompanied by a bond in a penalty, and with sureties to be approved by the commissioner of internal revenue, conditioned that he will faithfully observe all rules and regulations that shall be prescribed for such manufacture and production of sugar.

"The commissioner of internal revenue, upon receiving the application and bond hereinbefore provided for, shall issue to the applicant a license to produce sugar from sorghum, beets or sugar cane grown within the United States, or from maple sap produced within the United States at the place and with the machinery and by the methods described in the application; but said license shall not extend beyond one year from the date thereof.

"No bounty shall be paid to any person engaged in refining sugars which have been imported into the United States, or produced in the United States upon which the bounty herein provided for has already been paid or applied for, nor to any person unless he shall have first been licensed as herein provided, and only upon sugar produced by such person from sorghum, beets, or sugar-cane grown within the United States, or from maple sap produced within the United States. The commissioner of internal revenue, with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, shall from time to time make all needful rules and regulations for the manufacture of sugar from sorghum, beets or sugar-cane grown within the United States, or from maple sap produced within the United States, and shall, under the direction of the secretary of the treasury, exercise supervision and inspection of the manufacture thereof.

"And for the payment of these bounties the secretary of the treasury is authorized to draw warrants on the treasurer of the United States for such sums as shall be necessary, which sums shall be certified to him by the commissioner of internal revenue, by whom the bounties shall be disbursed, and no bounty shall be allowed or paid to any person licensed as aforesaid in any one year upon any quantity of sugar less than 500 pounds.

"That any person who shall knowingly refine or aid in the refining of sugar imported into the United States or upon which the bounty herein provided for has already been paid or applied for, at the place described in the license issued by the commissioner of internal revenue, and any person not entitled to the bounty herein provided for, who shall apply for or receive the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall pay a fine not exceeding $5,000, or be imprisoned for a period not exceeding five years, or both, in the discretion of the court."

Sugars above No. 16 Dutch standard are to pay a duty of one-half cent per pound, and will pay one-tenth of a cent additional when exported from, or the product of any country that shall hereafter pay, directly or indirectly, a bounty or premium on the exportation of such sugar. Machinery purchased abroad and erected in beet sugar factories for the production of raw sugar from beets produced in the United States are to be admitted duty free, until July 1, 1892, and any duty collected on any of such machinery imported since Jan. 1 last shall be refunded. Sugar candy and confectionery made wholly or in part of sugar valued at 12 cents or less per pound are to pay a uniform duty of 5 cents per pound. No change is made in the rate on other confectionery. Glucose or grape sugar is changed from 20 per cent ad valorem to ¾ cent per pound. The provisions of the act relating to the importation of sugar and to the payment of bounties on the production thereof are to take effect on April 1, 1891, but between March 1 and April 1, 1891, sugars may be refined in bond without the payment of duty, and may be transported in bond and stored in bonded warehouses at such points of destination as are provided in existing laws relating to the immediate transportation of dutiable goods in bond.

Washed wools of the first class pay twice the rate of unwashed wools, and scoured wools of the first or second classes pay three times the rate of unscoured. The duty on noils, shoddy, top waste and other wool wastes is increased from 10 cents to 30 cents per pound. The rates on woolen and worsted yarns and cloths show heavy increases. On woolen and worsted cloths, knit fabrics and manufactures of every description, made wholly or in part of wool or worsted, the rate is increased from 10 cents per pound and 35 cents ad valorem to a duty ranging from 33 cents per pound and 40 per cent ad valorem to 44 cents per pound and 50 per cent ad valorem. The bill takes effect Monday, but it is provided that imported goods deposited in bond prior to Oct. 1 may be withdrawn for consumption at any time prior to Feb. 1, 1891, upon the payment of duties at the rates in force prior to the passage of the act. Merchandise deposited in bond in bonded warehouses may be withdrawn for consumption within three years from the time of original importation on payment of the duties and charges in force at the time of withdrawal. Articles manufactured wholly or in part by convict labor in any foreign country are not entitled to entry at any of the ports of the United States. What the effect of the act on the revenues of the government will be cannot be forecast with any degree of accuracy. It was estimated by the conferrees, however, in their report that the aggregate reduction of the revenues by the bill would amount to about $66,000,000. What will be the average rate of duty under the bill is also an open question. Senator Carlisle, an opponent of the act, estimates that the rate will be about 60 per cent, while Senator Aldrich, one of the principal advocates of the measure, thinks that the rate will be considerably lower, about 44 per cent. These are matters which can be determined only by experience under the act.

Gone to England.

New York Press: Miss Elizabeth Bisland, celebrated for many things, but most of all for her flying trip around the world, has taken up her permanent residence in England, so those say who appear to know her whims and vagaries, for it must have been a whim which made her suddenly decide to reap English harvests with her pen instead of American ones. Certainly no longing to wear a foreign title could have allured her, and yet she is so attractive and charming, who knows what may happen?

Five or six years ago Miss Bisland lived on a plantation in Louisiana. Her parents, who were once possessed of a fortune, had been obliged from lack of means to retire from worldly pleasures, and, although their family had been well educated and carefully nurtured, they were obliged to endure the silence and oblivion of country life. Miss Elizabeth, or Bessie, as she was most familiarly known among her friends, early developed a talent for writing, and one day she sent a contribution to a New Orleans newspaper. It was accepted, with the result that she was soon established in the city, having made a department for herself on the Times-Democrat. Each Sunday there appeared a column devoted to items of special interest to women. But her energy and ambition suggested new worlds to conquer and she came to New York, soon making for herself an honorable position here.

During the voyage around the world she met some pleasant English acquaintances and they tempted her to visit them early in the summer. She accepted the invitation, which promises to lengthen into something more than a visit, but not without first establishing several other members of her family in her pretty apartment on Fourth avenue. A younger sister is snugly quartered first in one and then another of the several editorial chairs left vacant by herself. Miss Bisland's personality probably has quite as much to do with her success as her ability to write. She is one of the most fascinating creatures whom men all down and worship and women adore. She has dark eyes and pretty brown hair, which she wears in a Grecian knot.

Her face is interesting, both when animated and when in repose. Indeed, her repose and grace are probably her most charming qualities. She is above medium height, and when she walks into a room, although her dress may be inconspicuous and her demeanor most modest and unassuming, she soon pervades the entire place and you forget that there is any one else present.

Mirror Lake, Yosemite Valley.

Harper's Weekly: Mirror Lake is small and not especially impressive as a body of water, but its grand surroundings, and the absolute stillness of its surface, make it perhaps the most perfect acqueous mirror in the world. The bunches of grass in the middle of the lake, the trees lining its borders, and the bold mountains in the background are reflected so clearly and so vividly that in a photograph it is difficult to tell which is the real picture and which the image, the water itself appearing like a thin sheet separating the two antipodal views. It is under the guidance of Mr. Galen Clark, superintendent of the valley, that the lake is seen to best advantage, as he knows all the best points of view, and is armed with a slightly concave looking-glass, which makes the scene doubly a mirror lake. No oil painting could equal in beauty the miniature views of subaquatic landscape shown in this glass in all the natural colors—the blue sky resting on the gray and white rocks, and the dark green trees showing every branch and every needle with perfect distinctness. The climax comes when the sun begins to peep from behind the mountain summits, which here hide it an hour longer than in the lower valley. In Mr. Clark's mirror it looks like a large electric light, whose dazzle throws the mirror views of sky, mountain and forest into a gloomy shade, making the scene like a dream of the lower world. We had to keep on the move constantly to keep the sun in view yet not too high, and I never before realized of Harriet Waters Preston—these few examples are typical of the determination and concentration of woman's work at the present day. We notice in each new issue of a magazine the well-known specialists. Miss Thomas has given herself to the interpretation of nature, in prose as in verse; "Olive Thorne" Miller to the loving study of bird life, Mrs. Jackson the most versatile of later writers, possessed the rare combination of versatility and thoroughness in such measure that we might almost copy Hartley Coleridge's saying of Harriet Martineau, and call her a specialist about everything; but her name will be associated with the earnest presentation of the wrongs of the Indian, as that of Emma Lazarus with the impassioned defense of the rights of the Jew."

He Was Honest.

London Truth: John Brannon, a man bearing a good character, found a check at the Edinburgh exposition. He could not read, and the friends to whom he showed it advised him to keep it and look out for a reward. This he did, buying the Edinburgh papers for a month, at the end of which time he handed over the check to the police. He then got his reward.

He was prosecuted for not giving up the check within the prescribed time after finding it, and was brought before Bailie Walcot, who, although "he did not think there was any intention of theft," imposed a fine of £1 or two days' imprisonment, "it being too serious an affair for his lordship to pass by." The bailie, therefore, expressly finds that the man was not a thief. Why, then, the sentence? Evidently as a punishment for honesty, since if the man had destroyed the check instead of delivering it to the police he would never have got into trouble.

Johnstone's "Sixth Sense."

New York World: An Eastern scientist figures out that Mind Reader Johnstone's "sixth sense" is akin to the faculty which animals possess in greater perfection than men, and which has familiar illustration in the faculty that enables a cat that has been carried many miles in a closed bag to find its way home by the most direct route. It is hardly probable that Johnstone will submit to the indignity of a similar test, or, even if he were, to find his way home after being tied up in a bag, what will it prove save that the proud human being is on a level with a cat, and that is far from being what the mind reader is a ter.

Result of the Conference.

"Barthleson," inquired a fellow reporter, "what have you been doing in the managing editor's room?"

"Been holding a consultation with him."

"What about?"

"About the management of the paper."

"Any change in its policy contemplated?"

"Yes. That's what the consultation was about."

"What was decided upon, if you don't mind telling me?"

"It was decided," said Barthleson, twisting his mustache gloomily, "that the paper didn't need me on its pay roll any longer."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Scrofula Humors

"My Daughter's Life was Saved"

"In regard to my little daughter, whose life was saved, as we believe, by Hood's Sarsaparilla, I would say that before she was six months old scrofula sores began to appear on different parts of her body, and in a short time she had 7 running sores. Two physicians were called but they gave us no hope. One of them advised the amputation of one of her fingers, to which we refused assent. Our attention was called to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and we began giving it to her. A marked improvement was noticed after she had taken only one bottle, and by continued use of it her recovery was complete. And she is now, being seven years old, strong and healthy. The other members of my family have been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I recommend it as an excellent blood purifier." B. C. JONES, Alma, Lincoln Co., Me.

R. G. Peters of Manistee, Mich., has assigned to A. M. Henry of Detroit. It is the largest financial crash in the state for years, and comes from a source least expected. Mr. Peters was the leading spirit in a score of big enterprises, And was a baron in the lumber and salt trade. The engagement of Miss Winnie Davis, the "daughter of the confederacy," to Alfred Wilkinson of Syracuse, N. Y., which was announced less than six months ago, and which created so great a surprise in all parts of the country, has been broken. Miss Davis has not been in good health for some time, and she went abroad for the purpose of recruiting her health. Her trip was beneficial, but did not restore her fully to health. Her mother and her intimate friends felt that under these circumstances it would be best that the engagement should be broken, and this step was most reluctantly taken by Miss Davis. On the other hand some of Mr. Wilkinson's friends are of the opinion that the recent reverses of his family, his moderate income, and the still more recent burning of the old homestead, had some weight in shaping Miss Winnie's decision.

COMMITS SUICIDE.

A. B. Mullett Ex-Supervising Architect of the Treasury Commits Suicide.

Despondency, the Result of Long Sickness and Financial Troubles the Cause.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—A. B. Mullett, one of the best known architects of this city, and for many years supervising architect of the treasury department, shot and killed himself this evening at his residence. He had been in poor health for a long time, suffering from rheumatic and other complaints, but it is thought financial trouble was the chief cause of Mr. Mullett's act.

Later in the evening the coroner was summoned, and after an examination of the body gave a verdict of death from suicide due to melancholia. The remains of Mr. Mullett will probably be taken to Cincinnati for interment. The funeral arrangements, however, will not be settled definitely until Mrs. Mullett hears from a brother of Mr. Mullett's who is at present in Kansas City.

Mr. Mullett was fifty-six years old and was well known all over the country. He designed many of the public buildings that have been erected in different cities, among them being the New York city postoffice, the St. Paul postoffice building and the imposing state, war and navy department building in this city. Since his retirement from the office of supervising architect of the treasury Mr. Mullett has devoted most of his time to professional business in Washington.

Mr. Mullett leaves a family of five children, four of whom are in Washington and one in Kansas City. His mother, two brothers and two sisters also reside in Kansas City.

Mr. Mullett had a severe case of the grip last winter, from which he still suffered. For the past few months he has been at times despondent and gloomy. He had built several houses recently that he could not dispose of, and this preyed upon his mind. Mrs. Mullett is completely prostrated by the severe shock and is under medical treatment.

TAR AND FEATHERS.

A Reformed Gambler in Chicago Fantastically Adorned.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—A curious and desperate assault was made upon an ex-gambler named P. J. Quinn to-night in Union Park. Two men suddenly confronted Quinn on Lake street, a lonesome thoroughfare which forms the park's northern boundary.

Quinn was compelled to hurriedly strip to the waist, an argument in the shape of a 38-caliber revolver greatly assisting in accelerating his movements. A small tin bucket of tar was quickly poured over him and a handful of feathers added by way of adornment. Then Quinn's assailants knocked him down, kicked him repeatedly in the small of the back and in the pit of the stomach, rendering him insensible for over an hour. He was found by some people who were strolling through the park, and the police were notified, but there was no trace of the assailants.

Quinn has lately been posing as a "reformed" gambler, writing a book on gamblers' methods, and is supposed to have incurred the enmity of the fraternity.

STUCK TO HIS POST.

An Engineer Killed in an Accident in Montana.

LIVINGSTON, Mont., Special Telegram, Oct. 21.—The east-bound freight train that was due in this city this morning, was derailed about nine miles from here. The engine was turned over and twenty cars wrecked. The fireman jumped from the cab and was not hurt. The engineer remained at his post, had some of his ribs broken, one of his legs broken in two places and was terribly scalded. He died two hours afterward. His name was James Theroux and he had lately come to Livingston from Sprague, Wash.

Just as the east-bound through freight was passing the outskirts of the city last night, it ran into an open switch, the engine turning over and dumping the cars. No lives were lost.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

An Iowa Youth Kills His Sweetheart and Ends His Own Life.

CHARITON, Iowa, Oct. 21.—Elmer Oliver, aged twenty-one years, arrived here Saturday from Kansas. He became intoxicated, hired a livery team and drove to the little town of Freedom, twelve miles south of here. He immediately went to the farm house of Mr. Tuttle and requested to see his daughter, with whom he was in love. After the two had conversed for a few minutes the young man requested the girl to marry him. She refused, saying she was too young. He then drew a revolver and shot the girl through the temples, causing instant death. He then turned the weapon upon himself and fired a ball through his head in exactly the same place he had shot the girl. He lived in an unconscious condition until this morning, when he died.

He killed five people on Horse creek, and all efforts to find him have hitherto been fruitless. He has been identified by a man who knew him well.

An Addition to Sioux City.

SIOUX CITY, Special Telegram, Oct. 21.—An election was held here to-day on the question of annexing the new manufacturing suburb of Leeds, which embraces a tract of 6,400 acres. There was a very small vote cast, 401 votes being for and 5 votes against the annexation. The annexation will bring nearly $50,000 into the treasury in the way of taxes.

Natural Gas in a River.

MADISON, Wis., Special Telegram, Oct. 21.—Natural gas has been discovered arising through the river water in the neighboring city of Stoughton. It is highly combustible.

TOO MANY HUSBANDS.

For That Reason an Iowa Judge Secures a Divorce From His Wife.

SIOUX CITY, Special, Oct. 21.—The marriage of Judge John R. Zuver and Jessie Zuver was annulled and set aside at the last term of court. They were married about ten years ago, and until a few weeks since lived together as man and wife, when, according to the petition of the judge filed in court, he discovered that his wife had another husband living, from whom she had never been divorced. The facts were shown in court and a decree at once entered in accordance with the prayer of the petition. Judge Zuver also gave the defendant some valuable real estate in this city and $50 in cash. He at once left for the West, and is now living in Boulder, Col.

Judge Zuver sat on the circuit court bench in this district for more than ten years, his circuit embracing all of Northwestern Iowa. He is well known in legal circles, and has considerable property.

About six years ago, just before the circuit court was abolished by law, he was thrown from a carriage and suffered an injury to his head, which incapacitated him from work on the bench, and since that time he has lived in enforced quiet, a good share of the time on a farm near this city.

FRANCE'S TARIFF.

A New Bill Introduced by the Minister of Commerce.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—M. Roche, minister of commerce, introduced in the chamber of deputies to-day a general customs tariff bill. It provides a maximum tariff applicable to products imported from countries not conceding commercial advantages to France and a minimum tariff reserved for countries consenting to customs regulations calculated to benefit French trade. Agricultural products figuring exclusively in the maximum class will not be considered in any arrangement with powers. Among raw materials those will be exempt from duty which are indispensable to great manufacturers. The products thus admitted free include raw silks and wools, raw hides and raw cotton.

M. Deroulede created a scene by forbidding M. Reinach, whom he described as "that lackey of all administrations" to interrupt him. President Floquet demanded the withdrawal of the objectionable words. Deroulede refusing to withdraw them, the chamber censured him. Afterward Reinach challenged Deroulede to a duel, and the challenge was accepted.

A BOOMERANG.

Lord Granville's Opinion of the McKinley Tariff Bill.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—In a speech at Newcastle to-day Lord Granvelle said that the Tories pretended that they were confident of the result of appealing to the country, yet they delayed dissolving parliament as long as possible. Referring to the new American tariff, he said:

> Exaggerated language has been used with regard to the McKinley tariff, which will not injure us as much as was expected. It is certain to be more injurious to America herself.

He added that the measure would tell against American farmers and artisans, and eventually against American manufacturers. He supposed that America still desired to export, but she could only get her exports paid for by imports. But for Canada's protective duties it would be impossible to prevent wholesale smuggling. The speaker said he wished, particularly to express the opinion that the new law was not enacted out of hostility to England.

After generally censuring the government for its policy toward Ireland, he strongly condemned the practice of "shadowing," from which, he said, even a felon in England is exempt.

WORK OF REBUILDING.

The Sutphin Cattle Yards to be Put in Operation Again.

WEST SUPERIOR, Special Telegram, Oct. 21.—J. B. Sutphin of Duluth, owner of the old Powder River Cattle company yards, located on the Omaha road about seven miles south of the city, is rebuilding the sheds and barns which were destroyed by fire over a year ago. About three years ago these yards were owned and operated by the Powder River Cattle company, a corporation composed of English capitalists and which owned large cattle ranches in Montana, Wyoming and British Columbia. The failure of the ranges to support the cattle caused the company, after a year or so, to discontinue its operations, and its plant was purchased by J. B. Sutphin of Duluth, who made use of the buildings until they were burned, since which time the yards have been abandoned. Mr. Sutphin is making extensive improvements in the shape of building for storing feed, sheltering sheds, barns, etc., and will operate the plant on a large scale.

CONCERTED ACTION.

Liquor Dealers Organizing to Legalize the Sale of Original Packages.

FORT DODGE, Iowa, Special Telegram, Oct. 21.—A systematic scheme on the part of the liquor men of Iowa to bring back the original package to legal life was discovered in this city to-day. A number of the men who were openly engaged in the original package business last summer received circulars purporting to come from the secretary of "The State Original Package Dealers' association." The name signed to the circular was that of a prominent Council Bluffs liquor dealer in the name of the newly formed association. Every saloonkeeper was urged to contribute liberally to a fund to be used in an attempt to secure an injunction restraining Iowa courts from prosecuting original package dealers under the old prohibition law. It is claimed that the recent Kansas decision gives good grounds for such an action.

RAILWAY TRAINMEN.

Opening of the Seventh Annual Convention of the Brotherhood.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 21.—The seventh annual convention of the National Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen opened today, the majority of the railroads of the United States being represented. There has been organized during the year sixty-three new lodges, making a total of 307 now in existence. The report of the grand secretary will deal at length with the recent conference of the Federation of Railroad Employes to consider the strike on the New York Central and will justify the decision arrived at in favor of non-interference.

Eight Men Lost.

PORT HURON, Mich., Oct. 21.—The steamer Annie Young, of the Lake Superior Transit company, took fire and burned to the water's edge off Lexington to-day. The steamer Ed Smith went to the rescue and took thirteen of the crew off and brought them here.

The balance of the crew, eight men, took to the yawl boat and were drowned. Their names were M. Manark, J. Donnelly, J. Crosby, J. Gallagher, J. Connelly and three deck hands, names unknown. The Young had a cargo of coal and merchandise. The boat was valued at $30,000. Insurance unknown.

In his history of his famous trip to the northwest in 1828, when he attempted to find the north pole, Sir John Franklin makes reference to the birth of a son of one of his rescuers. McVicar. He is 63 years of age.

A young man named John Springer, who teaches school sixteen miles south of Hastings failed to appear at the school house, and on search being instituted his dinner pail was found turned up by the roadside. The dirt was torn up as if there had been a scuffle, and in a muddy spot near by were found foot prints and a revolver trampled into the mud. At 3 o'clock in the morning the section boss, who was his room mate, came in, crawled over the dead body of Lipp and went to sleep, not noticing anything wrong.

Milton Wyckoff, of Wheatland, is having more misfortune than should be any one man's lot, in one season, at least. Last summer his wheat was nearly all cut down with hail, and then some one set fire to about twenty-five tons of hay in stack and the whole was consumed.

The shock threshing season is about closing and stack threshing about to begin. Wheat and oats are furnishing a fairly good yield on the "divide." Barley is poor and of small yield.

Charles Bailey, indicted as one of the men who held up the Northern Pacific train at New Salem last Summer and who is charged with robbing the mails pleaded guilty in the United States court, at Fargo and was sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary. Some very interesting developments were expected if this case had come on for trial. Charles Youngman was indicted for tampering with the United States mails in the Fargo postoffice and abstracting money from letters.

The Jandell horse ranch, near Jamestown, had a narrow escape from losing the range by fire. Dick Brown, one of the men on the ranch, got caught in a corner by the fire while back-firing, and before he could escape was badly burned on the face, neck and other parts of his body. His feet were burned through his boots. It seems that the unlucky man got into an extra heavy clump of grass, and flames eight feet high surrounded him before he could escape. He is at the Grand Central hotel doing as well as could be expected.

Dr. Langdon, state veterinary surgeon, returned to Fargo from an inspection trip to the western part of the state to investigate the charge that scab existed among sheep there. He found the disease in sheep brought in from Washington, and has written the governor advising him to quarantine the sheep in Stutsman, Kidder and Logan counties; also that sheep coming into the state be thoroughly inspected, and none shipped out unless they have a clean bill of health from an inspector. He also advises the owners how the disease can be exterminated, and hopes by this early and prompt action to prevent it spreading.

Farmer Burton, of Burleigh county, tells the following story of his farming operations: This country is all right. I can make money here. I had twelve acres of wheat of my own and rented 175 acres, receiving one-half the crop. I was out nothing except my time and feed for a month and three days. I had 1,748 bushels. There is some money in that, ain't there? When I came here in 1883 I had just 35 cents—my folks back in the east without anything. I now have machinery and stock and grain and nothing against 'em. This country is good enough for me. Sold sixty-nine bushels of potatoes for 55 cents a bushel. My brother is in Illinois—in a great apple country. I wrote him I would trade potatoes for apples—bushel for bushel. He wrote back "no apples and no potatoes—both a failure here." I guess my brother will not find any more fault with this country.

For several years a band of horse thieves have existed in Grant county, and it has been their custom to hide stolen animals on the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indian reservation, adjoining Grant county. Shait, the Aberdeen shoe man, on a recent visit to Chicago, sold to Marshall Field, the great merchant prince of Chicago, 720 pairs of the papoose moccasins he is manufacturing. He says Mr. Field was much amused at the idea of buying for his house, one of the largest in Chicago, a stock of goods from Aberdeen. At the same time he was much pleased with the goods, and considered that he had an article that would please his customers. The thieves who robbed St. Paul freight cars at Richmond have been ferreted out. The gang was composed of eight or ten boys, but the authorities have succeeded in getting only five, but they are satisfied that they have the leaders. Their ages run from 18 to 21. Besides robbing cars the boys have been engaged in robbing chicken roosts, ice boxes and cellars in the vicinity of Richmond and La Moille, and storing their plunder in caves.

Ensilage in Canada.

The following points regarding the use of ensilage in Canada are reproduced from the report of the Ontario agricultural college:

First—The hay and straw crops have been factors so important for the economical wintering of cattle that if they happen to be light and short a scarcity of cheap feed has been experienced. A part of a corn crop may be planted so late that the farmer can accommodate the acreage to the prospects of a light or large hay crop, an estimate of which can be made with reasonable accuracy by the middle of June in most years.

Second—Two alternatives present themselves to the farmer who depends entirely upon pasture for his cattle during the summer months. He must either stock his fields lighter than their capacity can well support during June and July, or let the cattle suffer for sufficient herbage from which to bite during the hot and dry weather of midsummer. The system of partial soiling enables the farmer to stock his pasture fields during June to the utmost limits of their supporting power. Green fodder may be grown to carry them over a period of scant feed from pastures. While rye, clover, peas and vetches, and peas and oats are admirably adapted for such uses, they give but a small yield per acre compared with what may be obtained from a corn crop.

Third—A cheap winter fodder for cattle is indispensable to the dairyman and cattle feeder who farms for profit in these times of comparatively low prices and keen competition. Cattle can be fed upon fodder corn from a silo at least one-half less per day then when hay is the main ration. That statement will apply to almost every part of the dominion. In seasons which yield but a light hay or short straw crop, corn grows more luxuriantly. Hence it has a specially complementary crop value where large numbers of cattle are to be fed during the winter and summer.

Fourth—From the large quantity that may be obtained from a small area of land, the corn crop will enable the small farmer to engage successfully in animal husbandry. On fifty acres of good arable land a farmer, by a rotation of crops and the growth of ten acres of fodder corn, may profitably feed twenty-five head of thrifty cattle the year round, besides the ordinary complement of young stock. The number may be gradually increased as he is enabled from their droppings to enrich the soil for the growth of heavier crops and larger areas of fodder corn.

Fifth—The summer cultivation of the soil during the growth of the crop has a very beneficial action upon its fertility. The long roots of the plant loosen the soil and by their action and decay liberate some of the constituents required for the growth of succeeding crops.

They also provide for the freeing of the land from obnoxious weeds and the preventing of them from obtaining a new foothold.

M. E. Kirsch, of Crookston, the Democratic candidate for Register of Deeds was in town to-day looking over his political prospects.

Litchfield News-Ledger: If Thomas Wilson is elected we want to suggest a weather vane for the state capitol. A train of cars and across the headlight on the engine the words "Railroads are the Kings, bow down and worship you mudsill of the earth.

Crookston Times: Another old land mark gone. The log building on Main St which was torn down last week has quite a history. It was erected in 1878 and used as a sort of stopping place for about a year when Judge Spendly purchased it, and, with John Christianson used it as county offices. Judge Spendley as register of deeds, and Christianson as county treasurer. There was but one room and they kept their offices separate by drawing a chalkline in the middle of the floor, and neither could do business as an officer, except on his own side of the line,

Editor Spectator;

Dear Sir:—I notice that Mr. J. T. Beaudry, alliance candidate for county treasurer, was in town last week. I have known Mr. Beaudry for the past ten years and know him to be fully capable to take care of the duties of the office notwithstanding the reports to the contrary and I hope to see him elected to the office of treasurer and feel confident that the office will be in safe and honest hands,

Yours Truly
O. F. Buse.

East Grand Forks Courrier: Judge Wilson, democratic nominee for governor, missed the opportunity of his life when he gave East Grand Forks the go by in his recent trip through this part of the state. Here's where simon pure democracy flourishes direct from the root, and if the Judge had seen fit to stop off here and tell us why we should vote for him for governor, his election have been assured by a tremendous majority.

Pine Island Journal: Democratic papers are stumbling terribly over their attempt to make it appear that Thomas Wilson is a foe not a bosom friend of the Northwestern railroad. It is true that years ago he did some good work for the people in fighting the railroads, but that time is past. Since the company could not defeat him and the peoples' cause they bought him up with a nice salery, since which time he has been putting in his "best licks" for the railroad. Oh, no; a railroad attorney is not the individual wanted for governor of Minnesota.

Red Lake Falls News: Vote for S. G. Comstock for congress not alone because he is running on a platform that declares for tariff for revenue only, but because with his experiance he is the best representative we can send to congress. He knows the wants of the people of the fifth district and it was for that reason he voted to protect everything raised by the farmer of Polk county. Read the howl raised by the Canadian farmers because of the protection afforded the American farmer. Congressman Comstock voted this protection—will the farmers of his district show their gratitude and return him to Congress? We think they will.

Ada Index: There are many voters outside of the Republican party who will cast their yotes for Wm. R. Merriam this fall for the reason that they are grateful to him because it was mainly through his efforts that the state legislature was induced to pass the seed wheat law, whereby the needy farmers of Minnesota were enabled to secure a loan from the state to procure seed last year. These farmers believe in showing their appreciation for his efforts in their behalf, instead of injuring him after he has shown himself to be their friend. One good turn certainly deserves another and Gov. Merriams actions speak louder than words of "taffy" by his opponents.

A seven million dollar company is organizing in Baltimore to manufacture tin plate and a company at Chicago is going to manufacture tin plate on a big scale being allied with a corporation which has 25 square miles of tin mines in the Black Hills, where the finest pig tin in the world is found. The company has an army of men at work in the mines and pays them $30,000 per month. The tin plates are to be produced by a process superior to that used in the old world. This is the third large tin plate enterprise announced since the tariff bill was passed. In a few years the country instead of paying $20,000,000 per year for tin plate will undoubtedly be making all that we can consume of a better quality and at lower prices than the imported product. We will save the $20,000,000 and the great bulk of it will go into the pocket of American workingmen. This is one of the reasons why foreigners so furiously assail the new tariff.

Glenwood Oct. 16.—Gov. Merriam, Congressman Comstock, Prof. Gjertsen and Hon. Knute Nelson addressed a large and enthusiastic audiance last night. It was the largest meeting ever held in the county and from 100 to 200 people turned away. Gov. Merriams address was one of good solid facts and was upon the present political situation. He received repeated applause and won votes. Hon. Comstock was the next to speak, and he took up the doings of the last congress, and explained his position on the McKinley bill, and his friends all agree that he was in the right. Prof. Gjertson pleaded with the scandinavians to stand by the Republican ticket and showed them why they should and he was repeatedly applauded, The next speaker to take the floor was the Hon. Knute Nelson who came out in strong words in praise of the administration of Gov. Merriam and asked all of his friends to vote for Gov. Merriam and Congressman Comstock, and said he would consider it a personal favor if they would do so. He claimed while he was in sympathy with the farmers he believed that they could get their trouble adjusted better in the republican party than in the alliance or democratic parties, Mr. Nelson was repeatedly applauded and cries were heard from all over the house to continue. His speech made many friends for the republican party.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Washington, Special Telegram Oct, 17.—The department of the interior has approved a large number of the contracts with Minnesota parties for making the surveys of the Chippewa reservation provided for in the act in the last congress, by which the Indians cede the greater portion of their reservation to the government and take their allotments. Within the past few days contracts aggregating $40,000 have been approved, and the department believes that the work of surveying will speedily be carried to completion. The contracts were made through the surveyor general of the state; John F. Norrish. They were as follows:

A. C. Bailey of Long Lake	$2,630
George A. Ralph of Crookston	2,600
Butler & Burbank of Barnsville	4,500
George O. Burbank Fergus Fols	1,500
Hawley & Goodnow, Minneapolis	7,500
O. H. Case of Fountain City	6,600
V. H. Smith of Minneapolis	6,500
T. H. Crosswell of St Paul	4,500

In addition to these contracts for surveying the Chippewa lands, several thousand dollars worth of work has been contracted for surveying other lands in small sums. The appraisals of timber on the Chippewa lands, which are called for in the act above referred to, will be made as soon as the surveys are completed. The interior department considers the work of closing up the affairs of the Chippewa tribes in Minnesota, so far as the government is concerned, very well under way, and anticipates none of the delays which so often occur when the government undertakes these important transactions.—Pioneer Press.

When the legislature of this state convened in January, 1887, William R. Merriam's principle contestant for the speakership was a farmer from the southern part of the state, and he was the one whom Merriam most feared. But at the caucus Merriam was chosen, and in the makeup of the committees of the house he placed farmers in all the positions they desired and in all his appointments as presiding officer he was very friendly to the agricultural interests of the state, so much so that it was spoken of in very many of the local papers. At the election in the fall of 1888 he was nominated and elected governor and during his whole term he has been and will continue to be in full sympathy with the great agricultural and industrial interests of the country. No official act of his has been detrimental to the farming interests. These facts, taken in connection with his thorough business administration, merited an indorsement at the hands of his party in renominating him for a second term.—Owatonna Journal.

THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

The people of Minnesota ought to be able to vote intelligently upon the two constitutional amendments that come before them for rejection or acceptance on the approaching election day. One of these amendments requires the abolishment of unanimity in a jury, and permits five-sixths i. e., ten out of twelve of the jurymen to find a valid verdict. The unanimous jury would have been abolished long ago everywhere, if there had not been weighty reasons in its favor. It has been the theory and practice of the law that after a jury is once duly selected under scrutiny of all parties concerned, there ought to be no verdict that would convict a man of crime except upon evidence so plain that all men weighing it must agree upon it. In civil cases, where questions of property are at stake between litigants, the situation is different; and there have never been any reasons of highest potency adduced in favor of a unanimous verdict in damage suits and the like.

The proposed amendment will, as we believe commend itself to a majority of the voters of the country. In not a few states and countries the unanimity of juries have been abandoned without objectional results.

The other amendment to be voted upon concerns the method of taxing railroads, The Tribune has always been disposed to regard with favor the present plan of a payment by the roads into the state treasury of a percentage of their gross earnings in lieu of all other taxation, A railroad is not a local affair. Its rolling stock and equipment, which costs often nearly as much to the mile as it costs to build the road, does not pertain to any locality. The plan of assessing railroads in counties and townships like so much real estate is crude and unsatisfactory. The road's franchises have value. One road is enabled by its situation to earn good profits. Another is serving the country through which it passes at a present actual loss, Certainly the former might well be taxed more heavily than the latter. The students of the science of taxation are very generally disposed to favor the exclusive taxation of railroads telegraphs, express companies insurance companies and certain other corporations by the state for the benefit of the whole state; and many of these students would favor an almost total separation of the objects of state and local taxation, leaving the regular property tax so far as possible to be used for the sole benefit of counties, townships and cities. Unless some very good reason is given why the system of railway taxation now in vogue here should be changed, the Tribune must advise others to reject the proposed amendment.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Mr John Keowan, the worthy postmaster at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other." The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of all symptoms of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular. For sale by Justus L. Johnson.

The First Female Preacher.

Mrs. Ella May Bennett was ordained a Universalist preacher at Stony Brook September 25, and she is the first woman preacher ordained on Long Island. She is the mother of seven children, and is a hardworking housewife, and yet she contrives to find leisure for study and the writing of sermons. The advent of women in the pulpit nowadays is not as startling as was the first appearance of women on the dramatic stage a few centuries ago.—New York Telegram.

A famous Washington gambler, it is said, will soon go to preaching. He would have begun ten years ago, but he has just found out a cure for his cough. It is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

"Behold! the world rests and her tired inhabitants have paused from trouble and turmoil, because the customary headache and neuralgia have been cured by Salvation Oil. Price 25 cents a bottle.

The ram does not give a scent if the hound runs off the track.

We call the attention of our readers to the ad of the Van Dusen-Harrington Co. in another column. This Co. succeeds to the commission business carried on for years by G. W. Van Dusen Co. and have every facility known to the trade for disposing of grain consigned to them and are able to secure the highest possible prices. Great care is exercised by them in seeing that grain is properly inspected and weighed. It is a great advantage to shippers of grain to know that they are sending it to a responsible house that will give them fair treatment.

Dogs may not harbor thoughts but they seem to buy them.

Dobbins' Electric Soap does not chap the hands, being perfectly pure. Many people afflicted with Salt Rheum have been cured by its use. Preserves and whitens clothes. Have your grocer order it and try it now.

White Swelling

"In 1887 my son, 7 years old, had a white swelling come on his right leg below the knee, which became very much swollen and painful, and contracted the muscles so that his leg was drawn up at right angles. Physicians failed to help him materially, and I considered him

A Confirmed Cripple.

I was about to take him to Cincinnati for an operation, expecting his leg would have to be taken off, and began giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla in order to get up his strength. The medicine woke up his appetite and soon pieces of bone were discharged from the sore. We continued with Hood's Sarsaparilla, as it seemed to be doing him so much good, and the discharge from the sore decreased, the swelling went down, the leg straightened out, and in a few months he had perfect use of his leg. He now runs everywhere, and apparently is as well as ever." John L. McMurray, Notary Public, Ravenswood, W. Va.

FARMERS AND THE TARIFF.

Figures Showing How He Benefited by Protection.

Our Imports of Agricultural Products—How the McKinley Bill Will Check All This—The Farmer to be Equally Protected with the Manufacturer.

Our farmers are told by reckless purveyors of British economics that the Tariff is framed for the benefit of a few iron, woolen, cotton, silk and chemical barons, and not in the interest of the American farmer. They never tell the farmer that the direct benefits he receives from the present Tariff are far in excess of the benefits received by any other class. They do not tell him that last year the agricultural products imported on which duty was levied aggregated in value over $250,000,000. And yet this is a fact. They do not tell him that our total agricultural imports amounted to nearly $350,000,000.

How many farmers know that the aggregate importation of fruit, hides, eggs and vegetables is about equivalent in value to the importation of manufactures of iron and steel? How many know that the aggregate importation of raw flax and hemp, breadstuffs, eggs, vegetables and wools, all products of the farm, is about the same in value as the importation of manufactures of wool, or nearly $53,000,000? Changing the combination and adding hops and hay to fruit, flax, &c., and we have an aggregate far exceeding the imports of chemicals, while the importation of the last two items would equal in value the annual importation of manufactures of silk.

Is the American farmer ready to calmly listen to attacks on the greedy robber barons who manufacture glass and glassware when the imports of his own protected breadstuffs barely exceeded annually the importation of glass; when the imports of seeds, not medicinal, are about the same as the imports of earthenware?

No! Unless we are very much mistaken, the American farmer has altogether too much hay out himself not to be clever to his neighbor, the manufacturer in the matter of exchanging courtesies. Here is about how the account stands:

IMPORTS OF MANUFACTURED PRODUCTS, 1889.

Woolen goods	$52,000,000
Silk goods	35,000,000
Linen goods	25,000,000
Iron and steel	42,000,000
Chemicals	40,000,000
Cotton goods	27,000,000
Total	$221,000,000

IMPORTS OF AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS, 1889.

Sugar	$93,000,000
Animals and products, except wool	41,000,000
Fibers, animal and vegetable	60,000,000
Fruits	19,000,000
Barley and cereals	9,000,000
Tobacco leaf	11,000,000
Total	$233,000,000

With such an array of important products protected, to say nothing of wool, of hops, of hay, of eggs, of vegetables, of seeds, and of a score of minor products, is it likely the American farmer will give up the Tariff because the Free-Trade shouters are loudly proclaiming against the iron and wool barons? The farmer reads and listens and looks the situation over carefully, and then begins to figure out how much of the product represented by this vast sum of nearly $250,000,000 he might produce at home if the Tariff was only tightened a little.

The manufacturer looks on the other side of the picture, and he begins to cipher out how much of the $250,000,000 of manufactured goods which are annually pouring into our ports could just as well be made at home by American labor if the inequalities of the Tariff were only corrected and undervaluations and fraudulent invoices stopped. The McKinley Tariff bill is intended to meet both the demand of the American farmer and the American manufacturer. And so they are bound to join issues and stand by the Tariff.

Yet Mr. Gladstone says the people of America should grow more corn (meaning wheat) and more cotton, and manufacture less iron and steel and less woolens. And that is the Free-Trade doctrine. Continue our philanthropic mission for the relief of the labor and capital of Great Britain? Is this the only way out? Surely not.

The Never Satisfied Free-Traders.

For months past the Free-Traders have been telling us and our farmers that they have not had sufficient Protection. That, while the manufacturer has been reaping the profits accruing from a high Tariff, the farmer has been fooled and hoodwinked with a Tariff on his products that amounted to little or nothing and afforded him no Protection whatever.

Well, we are always glad to receive points from our Free-Trade friends, and being convinced that our agricultural interests have lacked sufficient Protection to certain products the framers of the new Tariff bill have increased the duty on some and put a duty on others before on the free list. But our Free-Trade friends are no more satisfied than before. They cry now that the necessaries of life are to be taxed, &c. Truly, the Cobdenites and the Clevelandites are hard to please. It would seem that nothing but complete stagnation of our industries and ruination of farm, factory and fireside would bring joy and gladness to the advocates of British Free-Trade.

A Snag For Free-Traders.

There is one Protection proposition that our Free-Trade friends have not been able to demolish. It is found in the following paragraph in a speech made by Senator Morrill in the Senate on July 30: "I do not know of an article that has received Tariff Protection for a series of years that is not now sold for a much less price than it was before it was protected." This little sentence of thirty-four words contains a statement which the Democratic writers have tried in vain to disprove with columns of Free-Trade argument. The facts are against them, and they are invariably compelled to give it up.

The Belief in Immortality.

Prof. J. P. Lesley in the October Forum: The belief in immortality is prehistoric and is perpetual, and it will exist so long as men know with an instinct which can not be felt a visible set of faculties—two sets perfectly distinguishable by young and old, wise and foolish, alike. The idea generates itself in each individual; it is reinforced by alien testimony. It is formulated and illustrated in various ways by traditions and instructions; but it is the plain outgrowth of personal experience, and is consequently a universal property of mankind. It needs no sanction from Scripture. It borrows nothing from logic. It is, in no sense dependent for its origin on moral ideas of right and wrong, reward and punishment. It is vague and fruitless among the ignorant and debased, but can become and does become the most brilliant and fruitful of all ideas for the wise and good. It is capable of cultivation, and it should be cultivated.

Labor and Wages in Germany.

The Effect of a Decade of Protection in that Country.

Previous to 1880 Germany, accepting the British policy of Free-Trade, imported a half million of wool hats per annum. After Protection the English were driven out of the German market, as the Germans imported in 1888 but 80,000 hats, against 500,000 in 1878. Linen manufacture has increased in Germany 800 per cent., while it has decreased in Great Britain 18 per cent. The exports of linen and yarn for the last ten years have decreased fully one-half. The shares of the leading flax mills at Bielefeld, Germany, are 22 per cent. above par, while the shares of the ten leading flax mills of Belfast, Ireland, are between 50 and 60 per cent. below par. Two hundred thousand persons are engaged in the manufacture of flax in Germany and but 150,000 in England.

Wages also have increased at a greater rate in Germany than in England. Why is it, some ask, that labor is not so high in Germany under Protection as in Free-Trade England? The answer is quite easy. Protection in Germany has built up a home market of purchasing power, thus stimulating a local production that enables the German workman to buy cheaper than his English brother, who has to pay for the foreign breadstuffs he consumes, and who is so pent up that if he lives in else but a hovel must pay an exorbitant rent to "mi lord." On the other hand, the German workingman has economical tastes in dress and living, and meets his wants with a compensatory balance of wages.

The Iron and Steel Association of Germany represents 350 firms, with a capital of $202,000,000, and employs 235,000 men. Ten years ago they were represented by 320 firms, employing but 151,000 persons. Their monthly wages have increased 52 per cent., and this rule of increase of wages will apply to all Germany. Wages are lower in Germany, but they are much higher than under Free-Trade, and their lower standard than that of Great Britain is more than compensated for by their cheaper food, raiment and house rent than is paid for by the British wageworker.

Protection for Farm Products.

Contention that the Tariff imposed on imported agricultural products is of no avail by way of Protection to American farmers will no more stand the test of facts and figures than most other assertions of the industrious attorneys for free foreign trade.

Under the existing law, Tariff is imposed on the principal farm products, as follows: Wheat, 20 cents per bushel; corn, oats, barley and rye, each 10 cents; potatoes, 15 cents; live stock (other than breeding), 20 per cent. on value. The effect of these charges, according to the great apostle of Free-Trade, who never lets slip the opportunity for reiterating his creed, is that:

> Tariff taxation is not limited to the consumer of imported articles, but the duties imposed upon such articles permit a corresponding increase in price to be laid upon the domestic productions of the same kind.

Every sensible business man, with the price-lists of the different trade centers before him, can see that this is not true; while it is a fact that the Tariff rates above quoted serve as a check to an influx of foreign grown products which would, in the absence of such barrier, seriously embarrass market prices in the United States. Foreign producers pay the Tariff on such of these products as they send here, and hence cannot afford to sell them as cheaply as they could and would sell if permitted to bring their products here free. What they thus pay in the way of Tariff goes into the public treasury, and by so much reduces the amount that otherwise would be raised from our own citizens.

But notwithstanding the fact that foreign farmers are taxed for the privilege of selling their products in our markets, they did send here during the last fiscal year staple farm products to the value of nearly $14,000,000—namely: Breadstuffs, $6,034,272; vegetables, $4,455,354; live animals, $3,270,277. After paying over two and three-quarter million dollars as Tariff, these were sold in competition with the products of American farms.

It is with such facts as these that Free-Trade attorneys should be confronted when pleading with the farmer for his vote against the policy of Protection for American labor. The American farmer can no more successfully compete against the cheap grown wheat of India and Russia than the American manufacturer can compete with his foreign competitor in making cheap goods. The Tariff of 20 cents per bushel removed, and the price of American grown wheat would come down, or foreign grown wheat would be sold in its stead. Proof of this lies in a comparison of market quotations from the commercial centers of Europe and the United States, and farmers will find more profit in such comparison than in listening to the confusing diatribes of Free-Trade advocates.

Spread of Protection.

Protective Tariff sentiments are extending and chrystalizing by leaps and bounds in many parts of the world. The French people are felicitating themselves that in a couple of years more all their outstanding and objectionable trade treaties will expire by limitation, when they will make only such arrangements with other nations as will leave themselves free to enforce their ideas of Protection to their own industries to suit themselves. China is doing similarly by increasing her import duty upon cotton goods, opium, etc.; Spain is moving in the same direction; Germany imposes high Protective duties; Servia is heading off the dishonesty of importers by declining to accept their valuations of imports except under the inspection of her own customs appraisers, and, as we have heretofore shown, even in England a strong party is being formed looking to a Protective financial system. We all know how it is in Canada and the United States. It is to be observed that whenever allusion is made to this fast and wide-spreading sentiment in favor of Tariff protection, the information is promulgated that "British traders and manufacturers protest" against proposed changes. These protests do not retard the movement, and Britain will soon have to join the procession.

He Was Honest.

London Truth: John Brannon, a man bearing a good character, found a check at the Edinburgh exposition. He could not cash it, and the friends to whom he showed the check advised him to keep it and look it out for a reward. This he did, buying the Edinburgh papers for a month, and at the end of the time he handed over the check to the police. He then got his reward.

He was prosecuted for not giving up the check within the prescribed time after finding it, and was brought before Baillie Walcot, who, although "he did not think there was any intention of theft," imposed a fine of £1 or two days' imprisonment, "it being too serious an affair for his lordship to pass by." The baillie, therefore, expressly finds that the man was not a thief. Why, then, the sentence? Evidently as a punishment for honesty, since if the man had destroyed the check instead of delivering it to the police he would never have got into trouble.

Beating the Editor.

The weekly paper on which I learned my trade was situated in a town which no circus going West ever skipped. We used to count on those circus ads. as regularly as we did on the holidays, and for years and years we were without a break. They were cash, of course, outside of the dozen free tickets which the agent left, and the money pulled the publisher through a tight place more than once. Our object was, of course, to get as high a rate as possible, and to get a high rate we had to boom the circulation. It held steady at about 450, and for the first three or four years it was sufficient to tell an agent that we printed "about a thousand copies." After that, however, there was one chap who gave us trouble. He was an agent for old Dan Rice, and he paralyzed us by asking to see the pile of paper we had wet down for the outside pages. While he didn't get to see it, he knocked our regular $40 ad. down to $30, and he had no sooner gone than we began to plan to beat him next season.

About the time he was expected we got an extra bundle of paper, fixed it with the landlord to notify us, and the idea was to wet down enough to show a full thousand copies. We were daily expecting a call when an old tramp printer slouched into the office one fine morning and asked for a job. We were just getting ready to work off the outside pages, and as he said he was used to a "Washington," he was offered a quarter to pull the edition. I was at the roller, and I soon saw that he knew his business. He could "fly" and "point" his sheets with surprising dexterity, and he brought the lever around with a "chuck" which made things shake. In two hours he reached the bottom sheet and turned to the publisher with:

"Is this all?"

"Yes, that's all."

"I make the pile four hundred and fifty."

"It's about four hundred and eighty. Here's your quarter, and perhaps I'll let you set up an auction bill this afternoon."

When afternoon came, in walked the circus agent, looking as Jim Dandy as you please. We took one look at him and fainted. He was the identical chap who had done the press work of the morning. When we recovered consciousness he was holding out his blistered hands and saying:

"I'll fill out a contract at $18 and leave six tickets. Sorry for you gentlemen, but perhaps you can get rid of that extra bundle of paper by discounting liberally on the price. I'm working this little racket all along the line, and it's curious how fast the circulation of the paper gets below five hundred."—N. Y. Sun.

He Saved Something.

We meet many peculiar characters in this world. I ran across a man once and he was a man of intelligence and a man of splendid family, wealthy and all that—who lost his wife, and who, in telling me of his bereavement, said:

"Well, I will save something out of the wreck. I can wear her stockings. See here," and he rolled up his pantaloons. Sure enough, there were women's stockings of fine texture and reaching away above the knee. He proceeded to explain that he had bought her several pairs at $2 each just a week before she died, but she had never had any use of them, and he would have to wear them out, though he was sorry he had bought them.

The idea was so funny that it was all I could do to keep from laughing right out, as the saying is, but the man was so very serious that I repressed the inclination to do so. I told him it was sad, but as long as he could save something by wearing his dead wife's hosiery he was not in such a bad fix, but still he could not see the ludicrous side of his narrative. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Quite Sufficient.

Different persons have different ideas as to the best way of giving employment to their guests; but there is one form of entertainment which was for some years very popular, but is now somewhat out of vogue. This is, the taking of guests to cemeteries, which, while often beautiful, and in a way full of interest, are liable to inspire melancholy thoughts and sad memories.

A young girl who had been paying several visits in an Eastern city, at last came to a house of a friend of her mother's who had a daughter about the age of the guest.

"Now, if to-morrow is a pleasant day, we'll take a drive in the afternoon," said the young hostess; the first evening, "is there any particular place you'd like to go?"

"No, I think not" replied the guest. "At least," she added, truthfully, "I should like to go anywhere except to the cemetery. I don't care about going there again, as I have been driven there five times already."

Plenty of Good Oysters.

From a New Haven Letter.

The Long Island Sound oyster dealers and fishermen were never happier, for the oyster "set" along the shore is wonderfully large, fine and thrifty. Every bed is thick with young oysters, which are, some of the dealers say "faster by a great sight than we can catch them." A remarkable thing about the crop, too, is that there are no starfish to strangle, and the only enemy that confronts the young oysters this season is the "drill." These pests are numerous, and are doing some havoc, but their destructive ability is not to be compared with that of the starfish. This fall and winter will be a wonderful season for oysters; epicures have already noted that the flavor is better than it has been for many years past. The oysters are very fat and tender, too.

A LEVEL HEAD.

The Advantage of Presence of Mind in an Emergency.

During the late strike on the New York Central Railroad, the militia were ordered to be in readiness in case of a riot, but they were not called out.

In an interview, Gov. Hill said the troops were not to be called upon except in case of an emergency. The emergency had not arisen, therefore they would not be ordered out. He remarked that this was the first great strike with which he had had experience, and he did not propose to lose his head; the only point at which there had then been serious trouble was at Syracuse, and there a deputy-sheriff had lost his head and precipitated an encounter.

The strike continued several weeks and there was riotous action at various points along the road, but the civil authorities were able to cope with it without calling on the militia.

The test of a man's real ability comes when an emergency arises which makes a hasty call on his good judgment and discretion. The man who retains his presence of mind, maintains his equipoise and exercises sound discretion at such critical junctures, is to be relied on and will be put to the front.

Men with level heads have the staying qualities which do not falter in the face of danger. Otis A. Cole, of Kinsman, O., June 10, 1890, writes: "In the fall of 1888 I was feeling very ill. I consulted a doctor and he said I had Bright's disease of the kidneys and that he would not stand in my shoes for the state of Ohio." But he did not lose courage or give up; he says: "I saw the testimonial of Mr. John Coleman, 100 Gregory St., New Haven, Conn., and I wrote to him. In due time I received an answer, stating that the testimonial that he gave was genuine and not overdrawn in any particular. I took a good many bottles of Warner's Safe Cure; have not taken any for one year."

Gov. Hill is accounted a very successful man; he is cool and calculating and belongs to the class that do not lose their heads when emergencies arise.

Not Satisfied With Her Eye.

A very curious case lately came before the justice of the peace of Neuilly, France. Some ago Mme. Pluyette, a widow of 50, but who still attaches much importance to personal appearance, had the misfortune in playing with a lap-dog to receive from it so severe a wound in the one of her eyes that it came out of the socket. Having heard so much of artificial eyes, and being recommended to apply to an expert manufacturer named Tamsier, she gave an order for a glass eye, for which the optician charged one hundred francs (£4.) Refusing to pay this charge, the manufacturer summoned her before the justice of the peace. Mme. Pluyette having appeared, holding the glass eye in her hand, the judge asked her why she refuse to pay the bill which M. Tamsier had sent in. "For a very good reason," replied the defendant. "I can see no more with this eye than I could before." "What," said the Judge. "Did you really imagine that you would be able to see with a glass eye?" "Did I think so?" retorted the angry dame. "Certainly I did. Will you be so good as to tell me what eyes are for except to see with? I ordered the eye for use, and until M. Tamsier makes me one with which I can see I will not pay him a sou." The justice of the peace endeavored to convince Mme. Pluyette that glass eyes were for others to looks at, and not for the wearer to look through; but, finding all appeals to reason of no avail, he condemned her to pay the plaintiff the amount of his demand. When the defendant heard the decision she became furious with anger, and, after dashing her glass eye on the floor, she rushed out of court amid the laughter of the crowd.

You Hurry Too Much.

We would live longer if we hurried less. When a man sits down to breakfast, he eats as if he was afraid he might not get his share. When he starts for the office, he hurries, though he knows the office will wait for him. At lunch he hurries; he hurries all day, and when he goes home at night he walks so fast that if you ever watched a crowd of men going home at night, you were given the impression that their work was pursuing them, and they were trying in a tired, nervous sort of way to get away from it. If he could hurry his sleep so that he could sleep two hours' worth in one hour he would do it.

Deliverance!

The shackles are strong, and forged by neglect, if liver complaint has enchained you. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters breaks them easily and without loss of time. Pains in the right side, yellowness of the skin, constipation and dyspepsia attending billiousness, are annihilated by this grand alterative. Incomparably useful is it, too, in rheumatism, malaria, debility and kidney complaints.

Enjoyment stops where indolence begins.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had children, she gave them Castoria.

which means strictly, that the pain-stricken seek a prompt relief with no return of the pain, and this, they say, St. Jacobs Oil will give. This is its excellence.

An Accomplished Officer.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

A pretty young woman crossed over from the southeast corner of Eighth and Chestnut streets, and approaching Officer Moffet, the young woman made a peculiar sign with her dainty fingers, and for a moment the big officer was nonplused—only a moment, however. Then a smile broke over his handsome countenance and he raised his hand in the air—a hand that could completely hide both those of the pretty young woman. But those fingers of the officer's were equally facile as those of the young lady's and when she moved hers with the rapidity of thought his responded with equal alacrity. For a few moments this by-play, or rather finger-play, went on, and presently the young woman smiled graciously, bowed to the officer, who gallantly lifted his hat, and tripping lightly away the young lady turned down Eighth Street.

"Well, that's the latest I've had to do," said Officer Moffet, turning toward several bystanders. "I wonder what I'll have to do next?"

"Why what's the matter with the young woman?" asked one of those addressed.

"She's deaf and dumb, and I understand the sign language, that's all."

The roller-skating mania has again broken out in London.

Last summer William Fillinger and his wife, who lives three miles from Perry, Mich., attended a series of revival meetings and became religion-mad in a mild way. With them lived Fillinger's mother, who has long been physically frail. It worried Fillinger and his wife that the older woman was unbaptized, and so they decided that the necessary religious rite should be preformed, although the poor woman was confined to her bed, unable to rise. Taking water to her room, they began the ceremony by dashing water in her face, and continued it until from shock and exhaustion their victim died. Fillinger and his wife were arrested and taken to jail.

The word was given and both men began firing. Halsey was shot four times and fell dead, but Dixon was not hit. Dixon has not yet been arrested, and the people of the county say no sheriff can take him. Heretofore he has been a peaceful man and well known throughout the country.

Hog cholera is playing havoc near Madison, Wis. Sidney Terwillinger of the town of Oregon said: Out of 161 pigs in my pens 48 have died, and I am afraid the entire number will go before the disease stops. A hog will be apparently as well as ever, when it will suddenly keel over and die in a very few minutes. Others will appear dumpish for some time, then begin to shiver and finally drop. The cholera was inoculated in our part of the country through some hogs brought from Chicago, and it begins to look as though we would never be rid of it. The death rate in the pens of my neighbors is as bad as mine, so that it is becoming a very serious matter with us.

TURKEY TOO FRESH.

An American in Turkey Arrested and Put in Prison on a False Charge.

The United States Minister Has Him Released and Asks Satisfaction.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 27.—Trouble has arisen between Mr. Hirsch, the American minister, and the porte over the arrest of an American subject on suspicion of being implicated in Armenian revolutionary plots. The accused is a graduate of Bowdoin college. He came to Turkey during the administration of President Hayes, to found an American college, but the project fell through, and he has since remained here. The arrest was effected in the night at the accused's residence, and in spite of his protest that he was an American and his production of a passport, he was hurried to the Seraskierat prison without being allowed to dress. In the morning he was allowed to communicate with the American minister and was soon released on condition that he should appear and stand trial. Minister Hirsch sent an energetic protest to the foreign minister against the violation of the right of domicile of an American citizen and demanded satisfaction and the punishment of the official who ordered the arrest. He further declared that he would refuse to produce the accused unless satisfaction was granted and until informed of the nature of the charge against him. A statement was then sent to Mr. Hirsch that the accused had engraved a seal for a secret Armenian committee. Proof was produced that the man had no knowledge of the art of engraving, and that he had recently been acting as agent for an American firm engaged in the manufacture of photograph apparatus. The government then expressed its regrets. Mr. Hirsch, however, still maintains his demand for satisfaction.

AFTER AN ESTATE.

A Man With a Claim Which, if Valid, Will Make Him a Crœsus.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 27.—It was learned yesterday that John W. Powers, a son of Mrs. John Powers, the Maryland claimant to a part of the Mullanphy estate, called upon Archbishop Kendrick and presented his claim. The archbishop said in substance that when Mr. Power could show his proofs or clue to identity he would listen to him. This would indicate that the venerable priest placed enough confidence in the published story to accord the young man a hearing upon the establishment of a quasi case even, and is regarded as an important concession.

Young Powers said that his family history could be traced back very clearly 170 years, and all they claimed would be strange, interesting and almost weird bit of litigation. It at once invades the sanctum of the Roman Catholic church and attacks the character of a distinguished St. Louis pioneer, whose deeds of charity and benevolence have become household traditions. The suit will be brought to recover also $5,000,000, which amount, Mrs. Powers claims, was secured from her great grandfather, Walsh by name, who lived in Ireland about ninety years ago, by John Mullanphy.

According to Mrs. Powers' story John Mullanphy, just before his death, which occurred in 1833, left a large sum of money in charge of Bishop Rosetti, who was then in charge of this diocese. The heirs of John Walsh were to receive this fund. Mrs. John Powers claims to be the only heir of the aforesaid Walsh and to be entitled to this vast sum of money. The question that arises now is, whom will Mrs. Powers sue for the $5,000,000? She claims it was placed in the hands of Bishop Rosetti. He is now dead.

A NOR'EASTER.

It Causes Death and Devastation on Lake Erie.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 27.—A northeaster has raged on Lake Erie all day, creating a terrible sea. The steamer John N. Nicol, with the barge Wahnapitae in tow, bound from Washburne to Fairport with lumber, tried to make the protected harbor at 8 o'clock this evening and the later went on the breakwater.

Capt. Nicol, his wife and the crew of seven clambored to the breakwater and clung to the cleats, the waves washing over them every moment. The captain, the mate and John Williamson started for the lighthouse on the end of the breakwater and the latter was washed over and drowned. Ora W. Smith of Oswego, and R. H. and James Bellamy of Algonac, Mich., who were left behind, were washed off, and Smith was drowned. James Bellamy swam to an approaching tug and his brother clung to the breakwater until rescued by the life-saving crew.

Lightkeeper Hatch put out in a small boat, with a line attached, under the lee of the breakwater, and got Mrs. Nicol and Theodore Sanborn on board. The boat upset and Hatch fought his way through the waves along the rope to the lighthouse. Sanborn clung to the boat and was saved by a tug. The Wahnapitae is worth $20,000 and had 1,800,000 feet of lumber on board consigned to Gardner of Fairport.

Thorlton expostulated with her, and she was about to get into the wagon with him, when her father, Enos Kerr, rushing out of the house, seized and attempted to take her away. Robinson, who was in the house calling on Miss Kerr's sister, rushed out with a pistol in his hand. Thorlton, who was at the time trying to cover Kerr with a revolver, shot Robinson dead, and when his sweetheart attempted to disarm him she was shot in the side. Thorlton is under arrest.

POISONED HER HUSBAND.

Tragic End of a Most Curiously Formed Alliance.

WOONSOCKET, S. D., Oct. 27.—Mrs. Eliza Rearick was arrested and lodged in jail here yesterday, charged with having poisoned her husband, Charles Rearick, a farmer. The woman bought strychnine several days ago, saying it was to kill rats. Friday Rearick was taken violently ill and died before medical aid could be summoned. The coroner's inquest showed that death resulted from poisoning.

The couple were married last spring, and their domestic life was accentuated by frequent quarrels. Recently Rearick threatened suicide. When he was taken with spasms Friday his wife called in the neighbors, several of whom witnessed his dissolution. At the inquest Mrs. Rearick denied that she had purchased any poison. She afterward admitted that she had bought some strychnine, but claimed to have broken the bottle on a stone and destroyed the contents. She produced some pieces of the broken bottle in evidence, but it did not prove to be the kind of a bottle furnished by the druggist. The evidence was so strong that she was arrested and placed in jail. The body of Rearick was buried yesterday, but on the order of the state's attorney was exhumed and there will be a post-mortem.

Rearick was nearly forty years of age, and lived, for several years alone on his claim ten miles southeast of this city. He was a quiet, simple-minded fellow, and had a great desire to get married. Last spring the woman who is now charged with his murder was employed in an hotel in this city as chambermaid. She was taken sick, and for a number of months was a county charge. She was also the mother of an illegitimate child. At this time it is said the marriage was arranged by an economical member of the board of county commissioners, who feared an additional burden on the county. Rearick called on the girl, and in ten minutes after he was introduced proposed marriage and was immediately accepted.

GERMANY AND ITALY.

A Not Entirely Lovely State of Affairs Existing Just Now.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Advices from Rome state that the coming meeting between Chancellor von Caprivi and Signor Crispi is regarded as one of the greatest importance. While Signor Crispi has laid upon the Irredentist agitators the blame for the insecure condition of Italy's foreign relations, he has made no secret of unofficial assertions that much of the blame rests upon the count of Austria, and especially upon the Archduke Salvator of the dethroned house of Tuscany, and his Austrian wife, the Archduchess Valerie, whose household, which is a sort of secondary imperial power, is a nest of intrigue against Italian unity and the integrity of the Italian kingdom.

The archduke is known to have frequently expressed the belief to nobles high in the foreign service and to foreign diplomats that the kingdom of Italy, as at present constituted, would be short lived and that the pope would again be sovereign in Rome. As the archduchess, notwithstanding her formal renunciation of the Austrian crown, is still in the line of succession and is closely endeared to the emperor, the utterances have caused deep feeling in King Humbert's court and at the Vatican. Signor [illegible] to the attention of Chancellor von Caprivi and endeavor to procure the powerful influence of Germany to put an end to Austrian cabal against Italian unity.

One of the things that Signor Crispi will strive to contend against, however, and one not to be lightly regarded either, is the feeling created in military and other circles in Berlin by the action of the Italian minister of war in prohibiting the general officers of the Italian army from presenting Count von Moltke with a sword in honor of the venerable German field marshal's ninetieth birthday. This act, which is regarded as an insult to von Moltke, has provoked a storm of criticism in Berlin of the severest character, and it will be long before the Italian government hears the last of it.

Indians Protest.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 27.—News comes from the Chickasaw Indian nation that much dissatisfaction exists among the Indians there because of the granting of a charter by the Chickasaw government to about twenty men giving them absolute control of all gold and other precious minerals found in a section of the Arbuckle mountains, twenty-five miles square. They claim that this charter has been granted to a few scheming white men, and that a number of the legislators, with Gov. Boyd, have been taken into the company on the ground floor and that the whole proceeding is wrong. Several prominent Indians were to leave for Washington to-day to lay the matter before the interior department and procure, if possible, the annulment of the charter and have the gold-producing lands placed under the same laws that govern gold and silver mining in other parts of the United States. If this is not done, it is ascertained that there will be serious trouble if not open war against the company when it begins mining operations.

"Where Is My Boy To-Night?"

EAU CLAIRE, Special Telegram, Oct. 27.—Mrs. George Williams, whose fifteen-year-old son ran away from the Waukesha state reform school, has preferred charges of cruelty against the management of that institution, and to-day publishes a letter in which she says she will prove that the boy was kept in a cell and cruelly punished. She says that her boy George was sent out of the institution one day to empty a dish pan and skipped across the green like a flash with the officers after him, outran them and made his way to Eau Claire; that in terror lest he be recaptured here she let him go to Superior, "trusting to God to take care of him;" that he was working industriously and doing splendidly at Superior when recaptured, and that since he jumped from the train and escaped from the officers again near Superior her boy's whereabouts are "unknown to all but God." She is determined he shall never be taken back to Waukesha. It is supposed the boy is wandering somewhere in Northern Wisconsin.

All Not Harmonious There.

LISBON, Oct. 27.—Advices from Mozambique say that the British in the Zambezi river were compelled to cut their gunboats afloat, the Portuguese not allowing them to bring them to shore. The colonial authorities gave instructions that the British were not to be interfered with, beyond verbal protest against their course, unless their gunboats engaged in hostile action on Portuguese territory. These Mozambique advices also say it is reported that the Matabeles attacked the British South African expedition in Mashonaland and killed two hundred men. The report is not confirmed.

France and England Together.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—M. Deloncle, a member of the budget committee and editor of the Siecle, in an interview on the report that Germany, Austria and Italy are forming a zollverien against America, said:

France could only join such a zollverein in the event of Great Britain joining it. As this is highly improbable, the scheme would be futile without England's assent. Any zollverein against America, according to the expression of Prince Bismarck, sounded a year ago on such an eventuality, must necessarily become a continental blockade. Even if Spain would join the zollverein, France must act in accord with England. The scheme in France receives the support of only a few ultra-protectionists, while the separation of France and England from the continent will gratify the French free trade party.

An important case will come before the United States court at Duluth this session. A. F. Christian, local agent of Armour & Co., has been arrested and placed under bonds for disposing of oleomargarine to a Two Harbors firm without possessing a state license. This is the same point involved in the original package case in Iowa.

Richard F. Piatt, of Prescott, is wanted by the American Express Company. He is missing, and they claim that he converted $5,000 of the company's funds to his own use.

A Chicago traveling man was stopped on a bridge near Browntown, Lafayette County, and while one of the two men diverted his attention with a shotgun the other relieved him of a pocketbook with $450 in it.

Janesville's school girls have petitioned the Board of Education that all the class which is to graduate in June be allowed to read essays. Heretofore it has been the custom to have only three numbers on the programme.

Henry Lulk, a wealthy farmer living two miles north of Prospect, was almost fatally injured by an infuriated bull that he was feeding in his barn. Three of his ribs were broken and his lungs terribly hurt.

"Jack" Haverly, the minstrel man, accompanied by a nephew of Robert Bonner, the horseman, is at La Crosse on a quiet mission, and everybody in the town is engaged in a guessing match as to what is the object of their presence.

It is said that the timber on the line of the Lake Shore road, that is owned by the T. B. Scott Lumber Company, of Merrill, cost 80 cents per thousand when it was originally purchased, and is now held at about $5 per thousand. The tract contains 375,000,000 feet.

The sheriff of Monroe County began search recently for "a tall, black-moustached, black-complexioned individual wearing a black slouch hat, black coat," who hired a fine livery rig at Northrup's stables in Sparta, but the officer is still looking for him.

A man named Garry, living near Rock Valley, [illegible] fell into a deep well [illegible] escape, after an hour's hard work, by climbing up the slippery tubing, a distance of twenty-six feet.

At Harlan recently a keeper from the insane hospital at Clarinda took charge of an escaped lunatic who had been committed to jail for housebreaking on a large scale. He broke into a dozen houses in the southern part of the county and succeeded in making a small haul in each of them.

A Hastings correspondent says the yield of corn is very disappointing in that section of southwestern Iowa. Farmers who confidently expected thirty bushels to the acre are finding less than twenty on getting into the fields. Feeders are picking up all the old corn they can find at 2 and 3 cents above the market price, as the quality of the new is so poor.

Some Osage small boys made a hot-air balloon in imitation of one that made an ascension in that town recently. An urchin named Wallie Hill was the aeronaut. The balloon rose for a distance of thirty feet, when it collapsed, the young disciple of Montgolfier falling gracefully onto the roof of a shed, and sustaining painful but not serious injuries.

Not a Word Said.

Boston Traveler: The disadvantages of being deaf and dumb were plainly demonstrated to the few pedestrians who chanced to be at the corner of Court and Washington streets at a late hour last night.

Two men came along together and stopped to have a look at the new Ames building.

"It's pretty high, isn't it?" remarked No. 1.

"Yes, it is," replied No. 2.

At least it must be inferred that that was the substance of their remarks, for they did not talk in the usual way, but with their hands. They were deaf mutes.

They stood there and continued to converse. For some reason or other the attention of pedestrians was called to the queer sight, for it was a novelty. It was noticeable that the mutes were growing excited over something. Their fingers were moving rapidly, and they appeared to be interrupting each other at frequent intervals. Suddenly No. 1 drew back his fist and attempted to strike No. 2. But the latter was too wary and dodged to one side, at the same time bestowing upon the other some choice epithet with his fingers. Of course no one could tell just what was said, but whatever remark was made it angered No. 1, and he made another lunge at No. 2, who again dodged.

They continued their strange battle in a funny way. No. 1, with his fingers moving like Mr. Hyde's, talked away at No. 2 at lightning speed, and the other was not far behind. It was a battle with noiseless powder, and how long it would have been kept up there is no telling, had not a friend of the combatants appeared and acted as peacemaker. They went down Washington street, each telling the third party his side of the story.

The Servant Question.

Servant hiring is generally regarded from the point of view of the employer. Mrs. Darwin, writing in the Nineteenth Century, discusses the subject from the view-point of the employed in an original if not convincing manner. "There is one peculiar relic of feudalism," she remarks, "which needs reform. It is strange, to say the least of it, that the mistress should be entitled to have a written and formal character of the servant, and that the servant, to whom the situation is everything that is most important in life, should have no formal opportunity given her of judging the situation, of hearing of the character of the household. This, which common justice demands, could be easily remedied without any extra machinery by the following plan: Every mistress should choose a referee, or two referees, among her servants, past or present, who had been with her not less than two years; she should give the names and addresses of these two referees to the servant whom she is inclined to engage before she writes for her character from her last mistress. Mistresses could then gather statistics and make generalizations as to the situations which were most highly recommended and sought after by the best and most competent servants."

The wheat crop is turning out much better than was expected. It is by far the largest crop ever harvested in this part of the country, Threshers report that the yield will average from 18 to 25 bushels to the acre. Those well posted estimate that nearly 200,000 bushels will be marketed here this fall. Very little will grade no. 1 hard but nearly all is sold at no. 1 and no. 2 northern.

VOTE FOR COMSTOCK,

Let every farmer and business man in this part of the country remember that it was through the efforts of Congressman Comstock that the Red Lake reservation was opened. He has worked hard in our interest and is well deserving of the votes of all fair minded men of this county. Look after his interests as well as he has after ours and see that he receives a big vote here next Tuesday.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

Col. O. V. Davis, of New Hampshire, was in town several days the past week purchasing moose and deer for a New Hampshire syndicate for which he is agent. He purchased seven moose and two deer from Evenson Bros. and eight moose from Henry Cook, of Thief River Falls, and one moose and a deer from Agent Kellogg. The animals go to Northern New Hampshire where they will be kept for breeding purposes.

VOTE FOR GIGSTAD.

Mr. K. O. Gigstad, our candidate for county commissioner should receive the vote of every Republican, Democrat or Alliance voter in this part of the district. Mr. Gigstad is interested in the advancement of the farmers interestes and if elected will do all in his power to aid the farmers of this district. Let every man turn out on election day and not only vote for him but work for him: and we will all be working for the best interests of our community.

These words are taken from the Minneapolis Tribune of Monday and contain a power of truth: Hon. Knute Nelson, of Alexandria, was in the city yesterday, and in conversation with a reporter said that he would support Gov. Merriam and Congressman Comstock, as well as the whole repulican ticket, "and," he added, "I believe that if the farmers of Minnesota have any wrongs to be righted, they will find their best friends in the Republican party."

VOTE FOR AN HONEST MAN.

St. Hilaire Minn.
Oct. 24 1890.

Editor Spectator:

I wish to say a few words in favor of my old friend John Locken, of Crookston, the Alliance candidate for Register of Deeds. Mr. Locken is a Scandinavian and one of our oldest settlers and is respected and liked by all who know him. He has for several years past been running a general store at Crookston but has recently sold out and is now running a farm near that city! No man who have ever had dealings with him can say a word against him and he is deserving of the hearty support of all fair-minded men. In conclusion I will say vote for honest John Locken for Register of Deeds and you will never regret it.

Yours Truly
Martin Williams,

The following is an extract from a speech delivered recently by Hon. Knute Nelson:

And now I wish to say a word in behalf of my old friend, Mr. Comstock. Upon retiring from congress, the highest pleasure I have ever experienced in my life was that afforded me in introducing there to my associates my friend and successor, Hon. S. G. Comstock. He has ever been a friend to me. During the famous Nelson-Kindred campaign he was loyal and true to me, and at that memorable Detroit convention he withstood slung-shot, billies and revolvers in defense of the "Little Norwegian." He has served you faithfully and well. He is a man, to use a Southern phrase, who always "totes fair," and my friends in Pope county cannot pay me a higher compliment than by giving him their hearty support.

Have you noticed that General Barrett, the father of the Farmer's Alliance Charles Canning and many others who built it up and worked day after day to secure favorable railroad and grain legislation, are not participating in this campaign? They had the sand to say what they thought, and when they said to the state alliance convention that Governor Merriam had done more for the farmer than any other governor the state had ever had and the farmers ought to stand by him, the hot-headed men in the convention kicked them out and put such men as "Dr." Fish, Jim Baker, Bill Erwin and a lot of their ilk in charge—men who have done and are doing the farmers of this state more harm than the millers' ring ever did. Think the matter over before you go back on the men whom you know to be reliable and take up with adventurers about whom you know nothing, and who are only waiting for an opportunity to impose upon you.—Fergus Falls Journal.

The opponents of the Republican party are making a great cry against the new tariff bill because it advances the tariff rate on certain articles. But they say nothing about the reductions the bill provides for. The bill does not reduce the tariff as much as the Index would like to see but it reduces the tariff to the extent of $60,000,000.00 a year! Remember that! It reduces the tariff on binding twine from $2.00 a hundred to 70 cents! It places all except the finest grades of sugar on the free list, and on the finer grades the tariff is reduced 400 per cent! These are only a few changes that have been made. Hundreds of other instances could be named where the tariff has been reduced. Two hundred articles have been added to the free list! Remember that! The bill does not satisfy the farmer of the Northwest, but it is something to the people to save $60,000,000 00 a year which would have been lost to them under the old law.—Ada Index.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.
K. O. Gigstad.

THE STATE ADMINISTRATION.

After two years ineffectual effort the political combine which is now being maintained in opposition to the Republican party in this state still finds itself without a solitary fact figure or circumstance which it can urge upon an intelligent constituency as a ground of criticism or opposition to the present state administration.

Not being able to find a point of assault in the conduct of that administration for two years past, this combine has turned its attention upon national issues, and it is quite reasonable that no effort whatever has been made by it to give point or direction to any criticism on national republican policy which would establish in the slightest measure the amenability of the present state administration.

The present tariff law represents, it is said, the high tariff tendencies of the republican party, and without any regard whatever to Mr. Merriam's opinions on the tariff question, and without any regard to the relation which the tariff law may bear to the administration of state affairs, the principle of conduct which prevails among the opposition is that the state administration must be holden responsible.

The McKinley bill and the Lodge election bill and the action of Speaker Reed are all the chosen themes of the democratic and alliance orators, and the advancement by the republican majority of these several measures in congress constitutes the only reason thus far discovered why the administration of Gov. Merriam, honorable, capable, economical, conscientious, as it indisputably has been, shall be brought to an end, and that gentleman be supplanted by somebody or other. It matters not particularly what may be the principals or opinions animating the person who is to supplant Gov. Merriam. All principals and all parties and all persons are alike to the opposition.

If the farmers of this state have no higher preception of the duties of citizenship than that they may be induced to overturn a state administration not only with which no fault has been found but one which has given universal satisfaction, then they will have practically committed themselves to the proposition that they do not wish their affairs conducted on the same principal of rectitude and watchfulness which have characterized the successful conduct of the business of every private citizen, but that they are rather determined to make of their state affairs the battledore and shuttle cock of professional politicians and agitators.

There are a great many respects in which we apprehend neither Gov Merriam nor his administration are in accord with the fulminations which have found expression from time to time in the name of the farmers of this state. The demand that the state government shall engage itself in the conduct of public and private business such, for instance, as the ownership and administration of railways, is no part of republican doctrine, either national or state. If the purpose of the alliance is to revolutionize accepted theories of public administration, then, without doubt, neither Gov. Merriam nor the party which Gov. Merriam represents in this state ought to receive the support of the farmers. But as against such revolutionary doctrine, such principles of economic and social science as would transform our state government into a huge socialistic system, every citizen of the state, whatever his political faith may be, who has an interest in the maintenance of property and personal rights should protest.

The democratic party in this state have chosen as their candidate for governor a man who is the living antipodes in opinion and character to him whom the alliance organization has nominated. That the republican state administration should have to contend against a twofold and mutually destructive opposition, such as is represented by Messrs Wilson and Owen, is in itself an excellent certificate of the safe, business-like and conservative principles which animate the present state administration.

In times of great political excitement the people are liable to become misled and to become blinded to their own true interests. Such a danger confronts the state and nation to-day. If the excitement, which is the product of unqualified demagogism and the outcries of professional alarmists, will be found sufficient to divert the public attention in this state from the excellence of Gov. Merriam's administration, it will be safe to indulge the prediction that before many weeks shall elapse after the over throw of that administration shall have been accomplished—if such a civic crime could be regarded as possible of accomplishment—the people of this state will awake fully to the realization of the tremendous blunder that they have committed and the suicidal blow which they have aimed at their own welfare and their public interests.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Farmers don't throw your votes away on the Alliance State and Congressional tickets but vote for the Republican nominees. Owen has not the slightest chance of being elected governor, but the Democrats expect with your help to elect their candidates for governor and congressman,

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIOMER.
K. O, Gigstad.

TIN AND SUGAR.

Burlington Hawkeye: Now there is a can of peaches. The tin in the can weighs about a quarter of a pound. If the increased duty on tin is added to the price which hasn't been done yet the tin in the can will cost 3-10 of a cent more than formerly, or about 3½ cents on a dozen cans. But to prepare that can of peaches requires half a pound of sugar, the duty on which will be reduced 2½ cents a pound on April 1 next. Next season, therefore, it will cost 2 2-10 cents less to furnish the tin and the sugar in a can of peaches than now, as a result of the tariff legislation. The free trade organs say nothing about this. It does not suit their purpose, which is to deceive.

Mankato Free Press: Business is improving all over the country, and if they so please, our Democratic friends may attribute it to the McKinley bill. It is certain this much discussed measure has had no bad effect thus and as the present is what people are most interested in, the Republican party should be praised instead of cursed. Times have not been so good in years. Prices on all kinds of produce are up, labor of all kinds is in active demand; money is easy; collections are good. In a word, we have much to be thankful for—little to grumble about.

We are informed by many who are well posted that a very large amount of wheat is still unthreshed. The crop is much larger than has ever been raised here and there are not enough threshing machines in the country to do the work. It will require at least three weeks of good weather to finish.

Princeton Union: Solomon G. Comstock has developed into an able legislator during the nine months of congress Well, the entire delegation in Congress has developed and done good work but the Fifth district congressman is entitled to especial praise for what he has done for his district. Not a single interest to be reached by congressional legislation has been left undone by him and the benefits of his work will be more apparent as they are felt and become more operative.

K. O. Gigstad candidate for county commissioner in the 4th district, is a farmer of good standing living near St. Hilaire, and we know him to be a good and trustworthy man of good education and well qualified for the office and we should with as great pleasure recommend him for the position for which he was nominated as if he was nominated on our own ticket. Mr. Gigstad is a member of the St. Hilaire Farmers Alliance. The Alliance candidate for the same position is Mr, DeMers, a Frenchman, of whom we know nothing and for that reason can say nothing about him.—Translated from the Red River Dalen.

PECULIAR INFATUATION.

Different Methods of following the Injunction "Love One Another."

Do men ever fall in love with each other?

Women do. Not long ago a young woman in New Jersey was married to a youthful laborer on her father's farm. Sometime afterward it was discovered that the husband was a female; the young wife refused however, though earnestly entreated to by her friends, to give up her chosen consort. The strangest part of the discovery was the fact that the bride knew her husband was a woman before she was led to the altar.

If men do not exhibit this strange infatuation for one of their own sex, they at least oftentimes give evidence of the fact that they love one another. There are many instances on record where one man has given his life for another. There are many more instances where men have given life to another.

It is a proud possession—the knowledge that one has saved a precious human life. Meriden, Conn., is the home of such a happy man. John H. Preston, of that city, July 11th, 1890, writes: "Five years ago I was taken very sick, I had several of the best doctors, and one and all called it a complication of diseases. I was sick four years, taking prescriptions prescribed by these same doctors, and I truthfully state I never expected to get any better. At this time, I commenced to have the most terrible pains in my back. One day an old friend of mine, Mr. R. T. Cook of the firm of Curtis & Cook, advised me to try Warner's Safe Cure, as he had been troubled the same way and it had effected a cure for him. I bought six bottles, took the medicine as directed and am today a well man. I am sure no one ever had a worse case of kidney and liver trouble than I had. Before this I was always against proprietary medicines but not now, oh, no."

Friendship expresses itself in very peculiar ways sometimes; but the true friend is the friend in need.

Grammar In Prison.

A writer in The Boston Transcript describes the school in the state reformatory at Concord, Mass. The greater part of the men gladly avail themselves of its privileges, though others make all kinds of excuses, and one boy bruised his right forefinger regularly for two weeks in order to be exempt from writing.

Of course the school is not without its dunces. One boy could never remember the word "conjunction." The teacher labored in vain till one day he had an inspiration. The close proximity of the institution to Concord junction gave him an idea.

"Now, Tom," he said, "you can remember conjunction by thinking of Concord Junction."

Tom's face beamed, At last the bothersome word was conquered; he should never forget it.

Weeks went by, and the incident passed out of mind. The old difficulty was no longer heard of. One night visitors entered the room, and the teacher called up Tom to analyze a sentence. All went well till he came to the word "and." Then he stopped, and a cold chill crept over the teacher.

Tom glanced at the floor and then at the ceiling. Suddenly his face brightened.

"And—and," said he, "and is a Concord Junction.

Bridging the Straits of Dover.

Experiments, it is announced, are being conducted in the channel near Folkestone for the purpose of testing the geological structure of that portion of the sea bed upon which it has been proposed to construct a bridge across the straits. The engineers engaged are M. Georges Hersent and M. Benaud, marine hydrographic engineer. The examination of the French coast is finished, and so far as it has proceeded on the English side of the channel it has, it is stated, proved satisfactory. The sea bottom is declared very solid, and suitable for the proposed structure.—Echo.

BAD NEWS FOR LA CROSSE.

Dr. Frank Powell the Noted Physician and Surgeon to Settle Permanently in St. Paul.

HIS REMOVAL REGRETTED.

One of the greatest misfortunes that could happen to La Crosse, seems to be measured out for visitation upon the city in the near future. We refer to the permanent removal from the Gateway city of Dr. D. Frank Powell, who has decided to make his future home at St. Paul.

As we said above, the removal of Dr. Powell will be a public calamity and a loss to the city that is practically irreparable. The doctor has lived in La Crosse ten years, and his wide-spread fame as a physician has made this the medical Mecca of thousands and thousands of persons from the surrounding country, and with the doctor's removal to St. Paul, the Gateway city losses a source of revenue that can be replaced by no other man.

The DAILY PRESS knows that the city of St. Paul will provide a wider field of practice for the doctor, but it deplores his removal as a public loss and one that will be felt by nearly every one in the city.—La Crosse Daily Press.

THE WOLF'S FANGS.

Paul and I were twin brothers, gentlemen by birth, since our father was a Polish count, who has been deprived of his estates in connection with events of 1863, and Englishmen by breeding; after the death of our father, when we were quite children, we two had been brought up out of charity by a countryman, who taught dancing and lived in a shabby London street.

As time went on, I earned my four guineas a week as a violinist; but my brother, Paul Bolskoi, became the darling of society—first, perhaps, because he had the most beautiful voice in all the world; next, because he was the very handsomest man I ever saw.

"I've seen her at last, Louis," said my brother one night to me; "the woman I've been longing for and dreaming of all my life; and I'm about to become a teacher of singing," he added, with a laugh. "You wouldn't wonder, Louis, if you saw my pupil," and he took from his pocket-book a photograph. It was the portrait of a beautiful woman—a fair woman, with a hard mouth and cruel eyes. "She thanked me for singing for her, and then she said: 'Monsieur, I want you to do me a favor. I want you to give me a few lessons in singing.' I stared at her in astonishment. 'Ah,' she said, 'Monsieur Bolskoi, the singing lessons are only a pretext. I know your story; I know that you are of noble blood, I know that your father's property and estates were confiscated long ago, and I would help you to regain them. Perhaps I'm not altogether disinterested,' she said, and she gave me one look from those soft, languid eyes of hers—a look, Louis, which sent the blood coursing through my veins. For I love her, Louis!" he cried.

The love of the princess for my brother Paul had become a matter of common talk among our friends by the time that Prince Vlastoff had obtained leave to visit his estate in southern Russia. My brother Paul was to travel in his suite, and it was arranged that in the winter, when he proceeded to the capital, the prince should present him to the czar and use his influence in his favor. They had been gone a month before I heard from my brother Paul. At length he wrote as follows:

"I have returned to the barbaric life. and I enjoy it. The prince keeps almost regal state in his great castle of Samarof. I enjoy the free, wild life, the riding, driving, and the hunting here, and I am happy, for I am with the woman I love. The prince is already moving in our matter, and has no doubt, so he tells me, of his ultimate success."

Here the letter was continued in a shaky, hurried writing, totally unlike the commencement, which was written in my brother's beautifully clear hand:

"Louis, a terrible misfortune has happened. The princess and I were wandering in the park a week ago, the very day when I commenced this letter to you, when we heard loud shouts and cries. Suddenly from a tangled thicket close to us appeared a wolf. There is nothing very terrible here in a solitary wolf in summer time; but this was no ordinary wolf. The brute was mad; it had been hunted, and badly wounded by the huntsmen and torn by dogs; its tongue hung from its mouth, and as it came toward us it uttered little yelping barks. 'Save me!' cried the princess; 'save me, Paul!' she shrieked, as she clutched my arm. Her voice attracted the attention of the infuriated beast, and it made for us at once. Nadia fell fainting to the ground. As the brute made its spring, I clutched it by the throat, and we fell to the ground together. I got my knee upon its chest, and I tried to choke the life out of it. I felt its hot breath on my face, and I stared with terror at its red eyes, and I wondered whether my strength would hold out. 'Fly!' I shrieked to the woman I loved; 'fly, Nadia, for the love of heaven!' But she never moved, for she lay upon the turf in a dead faint. The struggles of the wretched animal grew weaker and weaker, but I never relaxed my grip upon its throat; and slowly—ah, how slowly!—I strangled the beast, choking it to death.

"I turned to Nadia and I raised her from the ground, and, pressing impassioned kisses on her lips, I cried in her ear: 'There is no cause for fear, my darling!' She seemed to wake as from a dream; the great blue eyes opened and looked at me with unutterable love, and my kisses were returned. 'You do love me, Nadia?' I cried; and her head still lay on my chest.

"'Love you, Paul!' she answered, 'of course I love you. Need I tell you so in words, Paul?' she said, and she looked around her wildly. 'Let us make the most of our time, Paul,' and again she kissed me; for the man I am betrothed to will come to claim my hand in one short month.'

"'Nadia,' I cried, and you talk of loving me?'

"'My marriage with the Prince Bakouline, she said is one of policy; but I shall always love you,' she added, and then she looked at me in sudden fear. 'Paul, Paul Bolskoi,' she said, 'why do you look like that?'

"'Princess Nadia,' I answered, 'I never loved you; I loved the woman I thought you were.'

"'Paul Bolskoi,' she said, calmly, 'you must be mad; the Prince Bakouline owes you a deep debt of gratitude,' and then she rose and turned her back on me. 'But let me thank you in his name for saving my life,' and then she turned as pale as death and seized my hand. 'Paul!' she shrieked, as she fell upon her knees at my feet, 'Paul, my love, my life, you are wounded, and for my worthless sake!'

"And then I saw three little bleeding points on the back of my hand. 'Madam,' I said, coldly, 'sympathy for one below you in degree is surely misplaced.' I turned away, Louis, and I walked alone to the castle.

• • • • • • • •

"The French doctor from Warsaw gives me every hope; but, Louis, something tells me that I shall die, and I shall have died in saving the life of a woman who is worthless.

• • • • • • • •

"Louis, here is great news for you, my brother; the czar is willing to let by-gones be by-gones; our rank and our property are to be restored. Prince Vlastoff only to-day handed me the rescript from his imperial master. 'Count Bolskoi,' he said, as he pressed my hand, 'don't speak to me of gratitude; I shall ever be your debtor.'

• • • • • • • •

"The French doctor has come again. My brother, there is no hope and I must die It may be a question of days or hours only. Already I swallow with the greatest difficulty.

"Pray, Louis, pray for the soul of one who longs for death.

"Your unhappy brother, PAUL."

There were two other letters—one from Prince Vlastoff, another from the French doctor; they gave me the dreadful details of my brother's death. He died, as he had predicted, after fearful sufferings from the mania of hydrophobia.

I have visited my brother's grave. I have seen the place where my brother's life was sacrificed for the Princess Bakouline—for she became the Princess Bakouline, of course; and then I went to St. Petersburg to thank my imperial majesty for his clemency, and stayed with Prince Vlastoff. One night, as I was talking with my host, he said to me: "You've never been in this room before, I think; the very rug your feet are resting on is the skin of the wolf that killed your brother. The head is wonderfully life-like," he said.

Yes, there was the head with glaring eyes of glass, the mouth wide open, the lips retracted, showing a double range of fierce and cruel fangs.

"It makes me shudder when I look upon it," said Prince Vlastoff; but it's a work of art all the same," he added, with a little laugh.

Presently he left me, and I sat by the fire in a half-doze and thought of my brother and his miserable death. It was close on midnight.

The door was suddenly thrown open, and a tall woman in evening-dress, muffled in an opera-cloak, rushed into the room, locked the door behind her, and flung the cloak from her shoulders. On her pale cheek there was a great red mark. When she saw me she fell upon her knees.

"Paul!"—she cried in horrified accents—"Paul Bolskoi, have you come back from the grave to haunt me?"

As I stared at her in astonishment I recognized my brother's evil genius in the beautiful creature who knelt before me, looking into my face with frightened eyes.

"Madam," I said, coldly, "I am Louis Bolskoi."

And then she rose. "You are very like him," she said, mechanically; and she sat down in a chair opposite me, and stared at the ghastly grinning mask of the dead wolf; and as she looked she shuddered.

"Your brother saved my life, Count Bolskoi," she said, with a groan.

I bowed, but I did not answer her.

"Your brother's was a dreadful death," she went on; "and I sat by his bedside and listened to his last ravings. He prayed, in his wild delirium, that I might never know happiness in this world. I sacrificed your brother's love to vain ambition, and sold myself to Prince Bakouline. To-night he struck me—you see the mark upon my face—and I leave him forever. Just before your brother's death, when his failing voice had sunk into a whisper, he opened his eyes and seemed to recognize me. 'Nadia,' he said, you will repent; and when you have repented you will see me once again, and I shall summon you to meet your God.' He never spoke again, Count Bolskoi. I have repented, God knows how bitterly; and when I saw you sitting there I thought that Paul had come from the land beyond the grave to drag me to the judgement-seat of heaven. Count Bolskoi," she said, bitterly, "I long for death."

She never looked at me, but stared at the wolf's face upon the floor, and mechanically, she placed her tiny foot between the double row of white and glistening teeth.

There was a furious knock at the door. The Princess Nadia started to her feet, and, as she did so, she gave a little scream of pain, and I saw a small spot of blood on her satin foot-covering. The door was shaken furiously; the lock gave way, and a man broke in and hurled furious words at the beautiful woman, who stood confronting him, pale and silent. He spoke in Russian, and then he turned to me.

"You are Count Bolskoi, sir," he said; "why do I find you here closeted with my wife?" he cried, and he glared at me with furious eyes inflamed with drink and jealousy. "I am the Prince Bakouline, sir," he said, more calmy, "the husband of this—this woman."

"And I am her father's guest," I said; "and I do not bandy words with drunken men at midnight. But, Prince Bakouline, you are a coward. Have the goodness to leave this house."

And then he turned and left the room without a word. Next day we met, some dozen versts from St. Petersburg. Prince Vlastoff was my second; and I shot the Princess Nadia's husband dead, and crossed the frontier within a dozen hours. And within a month, the woman, who had wronged my brother Paul, died, as my poor brother had died, a raving maniac. The wolf-skin rug was the instrument of heaven's vengeance; the fangs of the dead beast had still retained the venom.

Theory and Practice.

Mistress—Mercy on me, what a kitchen! Every pot, pan and dish is dirty, the table looks like a junk shop, and—why it will take you a week to get things cleaned up! What have you been dong?

Servant—Sure, mum, the young leddies have just been down here showing me how they roast a potato at the cooking school.

BEING A BOY.

It is a Troublesome Disease, but Not Necessarily Fatal.

I used to be a boy once, but I seem to have got over it. Boyhood is a curious disease, but every man has to take his dose of it. He does not mind it at the time; but when his complete cure has been effected, he looks back over the period of the attack, and wonders if he could ever have had anything so bad as that. A boy's troubles are mental. He has strange notions of life, and they rattle him so he doesn't seem to get square with matters and things in the estimation of any disinterested observer. Of course, the boy thinks he is having a Jamesdandy time; but everybody else knows he is not.

For instance, a boy thinks it is real good fun to go to bed with all his clothes on, and lie awake for three hours till the old man has swallowed his sleep-coaxer and sought his downy perch. Then the boy gets out of bed, climbs out of the back window and down a rain spout, barking his shins and skinning his knuckles on the way, and walks three miles across plowed fields to steal a watermelon out of a farmer's patch. And the next day, when they have watermelon for dinner at home, do you suppose that makes the boy feel sore, as it would a man? Not much. The boy has had his fun, and the chances are that he'll get up and do the same act all over again day after to-morrow.

Again, a boy thinks it's fun to put an empty soap box on top of two logs, and paddle himself up and down a brook where there are no lighthouses, no harbors, and not more than twelve inches of water, counting the mud on the bottom. A boy thinks it's fun to row a boat, too. He will get aboard a big, heavy skiff, with a pair of seven-foot oars, when the thermometer indicates 90 degrees in the summer house, and he'll pull himself around and around in a ring, and cut S's and figures 3 on the water, and think he's having more fun than a Grand Army man drawing a pension.

A boy thinks it's fun, too, to get four old bricks and build himself an oven, and then to make a wood-fire in it, and roast four peachblow potatoes with skins on, and eat them without salt. Two boys who can have unto themselves a small feast like this, accompanied by edifying conversation about the extermination of the Sioux, think they're having more fun than you or I would at a public dinner of fifteen courses.

When a boy gets over being a boy and looks back over the period of his disorder, he often wonders how it happened that he lived through it. But it appears to be pretty generally admitted by medical experts that the boyhood disease is not necessarily fatal. It does do away with a few of its victims, to be sure; but they are those who are affected with the acute form in which twenty-foot rivers appear three feet deep, and double-barreled shot-guns are mistaken for Pandean pipes.

There is one form of the disease which ought to prove fatal, but for some inscrutable reason does not. That is the form which causes the patient to imagine that jewsharps, fifes, banjos and horse-fiddles produce music. Usually, however, they just let the disease wear itself out. It wears a great many people out, too; but no matter.—Puck.

How She Managed It.

A young couple in an English village had been courting for several years. The young man one day said to the young woman:

"Sal, I canna marry thee."

"How's that?" said she.

"I've changed my mind," said he.

"Well, I'll tell you what we'll do," said she. "If folk know that's thee as has given me up, I shanna be able to get another chap, but if they think that I've given thee up, then I can easy get another chap. So we'll have the banns published, and when the wedding day comes the parson will say to thee, 'Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?' and thee must say, 'I will;' and when he says to me, 'Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?' I shall say, 'I winna.'"

The day came, and when the minister said, "Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?" the man answered, "I will."

Then the parson said to the woman: "Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" and she said, "I will."

"Why," said the young man, furiously, "you said you would say, 'I winna.'"

"I know that," said the young woman, "but I've changed my mind since."

She Wished to Have It Exact.

A boy attending one of the public schools of Utica, N. Y., came home the other day humming a school song. The tune attracted the father's attention, and he asked him to sing the song. The boy did so. It was a rollicking sailor song, and in the chorus, keeping time with the tap of the parent's boot, the boy sang: "We'll fill our bowls and eat the toast——" At this point the father stopped him and asked where he had learned the song. The boy replied that he had learned it at school. "I once knew that song," said the father, "but I never knew it ran, 'We'll fill our bowls and eat the toast.'" "It isn't printed that way," said the boy, "but the teacher said she never heard of anybody's drinking toast, so she made us scratch out drink and sing it eat."

The Hudson river showed the highest tide in forty years. The brick yards suffered enormously. Millions of brick are lost. The yards between Roseton and Albany are submerged, and the green brick awaiting burning were thrown down by the flood. It is estimated that 4,600,000 brick have been lost in the Kingston district. The fires were put out in the kilns in process of burning. Green kilns were thrown down, and the brick underneath sheds were washed away.

John Jacob Sehrley was found dead near West Superior, Wis. The cause of death was apparent. He had set a trap for deer, and had fallen into the snare himself. The dead man was seventy-six years old and came from Elkader, Io., two years ago with his son. He settled on some land eight miles south of this city, and being a vigorous man for his years he gave a good deal of time to hunting. He had set two rifles on deer trails and fastened them so that a body passing on the trail must touch the string attached to the trigger and explode the gun. It is supposed that he encountered one of the strings in the dim light of the early morning. The rifle was fixed with deadly precision and the ball, piercing his body at the hip and passing right through, caused hemorrhage which resulted in his death from loss of blood.

Gov. Hill, of New York, was traveling on a special through West Virginia. The train was to have stopped at all stations between Wheeling and Harper's Ferry for from five to twenty minutes to allow the governor to make advertised addresses. The programme, however, was abruptly interfered with by a collision at Moundsville, where the train had stopped for a few minutes. Behind the train was a heavy freight, and accommodation train, and next to this a heavy freight, all standing about twenty-five feet apart. Just as Gov. Hill's train was pulling out the Chicago express came thundering in from the opposite direction. The two trains collided, forcing the governor's train back into the accommodation, and this into the freight, the four trains being jammed together. Although the passengers in the front car of the governor's train were thrown from their seats, no one was injured, and the shock in the car in which Gov. Hill and party were was very light.

The "Jack-the-Ripper" scare has again caused a sensation among the police and the residents of the south Hampstead locality in London. In a secluded part of that neighborhood, passers-by were shocked by finding in an obscure alley the dead body of a woman whose head had been very nearly severed, while her body showed evidences of kicks and bruises in themselves sufficient to cause death. While up to the present time no knowledge has been obtained as to who the victim was, it seems very evident that she was a woman of low repute, and this was sufficient to start the "Jack the Ripper has been at work again." Police actively began operations in a search for the murderer, but thus far no arrests have been made.

The trial of Antley, Pascale and Pierre Paul, the three Indian murderers and outlaws, was ended at Missoula, Mont. Antley was one of the three Indians who murdered two prospectors on the mouth of Flat creek two years ago, the other two being lynched at Demersville a year ago. Pascale murdered a man named Dunn on the Joco river a year ago. He is said to have made the remark to Pierre Paul: "Let's go out and shoot some white man." Going out they met two men on the railroad track. Pascale began to talk to one of the men, and when his back was turned shot at him with a revolver, but missed. The man grappled with him and failed to wrench the weapon from him, and the Indian fired three times, killing him with the third shot. The other man started to run and was also killed by Pierre Paul. The Indians were captured about three months ago. Pascale, Antley and Pierre Paul were found guilty of murder in the first degree, and sentenced to be hung Dec. 19 1890.

Grave international complications may arise from the condemnation at Sherbrooke, Canada, to one year's imprisonment for contempt of court of Leda Lamontague, who was extradited some time ago from the United States upon a charge of arson. Leda's brother was being tried for murder, and the Canadian authorities sought to use her as a witness against him, but she absolutely refused, contending that she had not been surrendered by the American authorities as a witness, but on the charge of arson, for which she was ready to stand her trial. Leda's counsel contends that her condemnation for contempt was a breach of faith with the American authorities, who consented to her extradition for an entirely different purpose, and if he fails to have her sentence annulled he will take the case to Washington, and the secretary of state will be asked to remonstrate with the Canadian authorities, and to demand an explanation of the apparent breach of international faith involved in the sentence.

While delivering King Leopold's offer to Emin, Stanley at the same time urged the pasha not to accept, alleging that the Congo state was in a bad way, and, to further influence Emin to decline, hinting that King Leopold had treated him (Stanley) badly. Dr. Peters also accuses Stanley of having drunk wine at a dinner served in European fashion while others of his party at the same table were served with negro fare and had no wine.

CAUSED BY A BOY.

An Officious Young Telegraph Operater Causes a Collision.

Indian Agent Wright's Side of the So-Called Irregularities.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 4.—An accident, most horrible in detail, occurred on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western at Rock Cut a station about three miles south of this city, through the undue officiousness of a boy telegraph operator named M. A. Clark.

The accident occurred this afternoon, and the blundering of the operator resulted in the death of four persons, the injury of many others, and the destruction of several thousand dollars worth of the rolling stock of the road.

The New York and Pacific day express train, but passes Rock Cut at the usual rate of speed, which is about forty miles an hour. Before the express was due at Rock Cut, two coal trains from Syracuse had arrived at the station and had been run in on a switch.

Clark was on the look-out for the express. The latter was on time and, as the headlight of the engine came into view, it flashed through Clark's mind that the switch was open, and that if it was not closed, the express would dash into the coal train. No sooner did the thought enter his brain than he dashed out of the door, rushed to the switch and swung it over. Then he realized, but too late, his mistake. As the switch was turned, the express swung on to the sidetrack and the crash of the engines spoke the result. The fireman and engineer of each engine were caught in the wreck and ground to death. Their names were: James Doyle, Scranton, Pa.; Myrtie Fernand, his fireman; Michal J. Burke of Syracuse; Jeremiah Lee, his fireman.

The baggage and express car of the passenger train careened over into the ditch. In the car were W. H. Coppenall of Oswego, George Derby of Cortland and J. Kimball of Oswego. All were more or less injured, though not fatally. Michael Tierny, a brakeman, was also badly hurt. All the passengers were badly shaken up, though only one was injured seriously. That one was Mrs. Julia Corcoran of Buffalo, whose spine was hurt and two of her ribs broken.

INDIAN AGENT WRIGHT.

He Gives His Side of the So-Called Irregularities at Rosebud.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Nov. 3.—George J. Wright, Indian agent at the Rosebud agency in South Dakota, is in the city. Mr. Wright, as is known, was recently suspended on account of alleged irregularities in his management. The census of the Indians showed that he had been drawing rations for about 2,000 more Indians than there were on the reservation. A special agent was sent to investigate. It was on the strength of a report which is now in the hands of the Indian commissioner that he was suspended. The commissioner has not yet examined the special agent's report and will not pass upon it until Mr. Wright has been given an opportunity to present his side of the case. A hearing will be had in Washington, and it was in preparation of his case that Mr. Wright came here.

He claims that if the number of Indians on his list was too large it was not his fault. He began his duties there less than two years ago. Soon after taking charge he desired to make a count of the Indians, but the Sioux commissioners were there at the time and, he says, did not want him to take the usual count. Accordingly he did not do this, but in making up his population for drawing rations he used the figures left him by his predecessor, Agent Spencer, who was appointed under the last administration.

The Indian bureau does not understand why the Sioux commissioners should have objected to the count. The commissioner said to-day that the fullest investigation would be made, and Mr. Wright would be given ample opportunity to vindicate himself. His removal from the conduct of the agency affairs would be considered temporary.

A BAD BLAZE.

A Million and a Half Dollars Worth of Property Destroyed by Fire.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—Fire was discovered early this morning in Heuter Bros. & Co.'s paint shop, under the Grand hotel. The fire spread rapidly and the hotel was soon in flames. There was great excitement among the guests, but they all escaped safely.

The flames spread rapidly throughout the basement of the block bounded by Market, New Montgomery, Stevenson and Second streets, and then spread to the first floor occupied by the Hall Safe and Lock company, Hill & Goldman, druggists supplies; the board of trade rooms; the Pullman Palace Car company's office; the Great Northern railroad ticket office and the rooms of the Syndicate Investment company.

The smoke in the meantime had aroused the inmates of the Grand and the Burlington hotels and the frightened guests rushed to the sidewalk with what availables they could carry.

The efforts of the firemen to confine the fire within the block occupied by the Burlington and Grand hotels was finally successful. The Burlington was destroyed and the Grand damaged $75,000. The total loss is estimated at $1,500,000. The fire is believed to be due to spontaneous combustion of inflammable materials in Hueter & Co's. place of business.

It Was a Blunder.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—It is announced that the circular issued Saturday by the Union Pacific, excluding all lines east of the Missouri river except the Chicago & Northwestern from participation in joint-billing arrangements of the road, was a mistake. The circular bore the signature of A. S. Vankuran, the freight auditor of the company. Who is responsible for the blunder does not appear, but an amended notice has already been issued to the agents of the Union Pacific, instructing them to continue billing freight on the present basis of divisions by way of Kansas City, St. Joseph and Sioux City. The situation therefore remains unchanged at those gateways, and the only rupture is between the Union Pacific on one side, and the Burlington, the Rock Island and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul on the other.

An Absolute Divorce.

FARGO, N. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 4.—Mrs. Anna C. Howland was to-day granted an absolute divorce from her husband, William Howland, an Episcopal clergyman of Passaic, N. J., on the ground of cruelty and inhuman treatment. She was given the custody of their daughter, Florence Bildell, and $3,500 per year alimony.

An Accident to a Hunter.

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., Special Telegram, Nov. 3.—Peter Rinzie was hunting when his gun exploded. A piece of the barrel four inches long struck him on the head, knocking out an eye and crushing in the forehead, causing concussion of the brain. He may die.

THE SUGAR TRUST.

Not Enough Cars to Move the Crops of Washington and Idaho.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—"The big crops in Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho are likely to remain in warehouses several months before they can be hauled away," said James Albright of Sprague, Wash., who has just arrived in this city. He continued:

> There is not half enough cars on either of the two roads to haul even a part of the big crops. The wheat yield this year has been immense, especially so in the Palouse country, the Big Bend empire, Indian Prairie and Potlach region. In the Palouse valley alone the yield is estimated at 10,000,000 bushels. The combined output of these other localities will easily aggregate 7,000,000 bushels, making a total of 17,000,000 bushels for that region alone. Some of it, say one-fifth, will be consumed in Washington; the remaining 13,000,000 bushels will be exported. Estimating that each car will hold on an average 30,000 pounds, upward of 27,000 cars will be needed to export this grain. A train will average 15 cars; so that at least 1,800 trains will be necessary to haul the grain produce alone out of the country to market. Now, both the Northern and the Union Pacific railroads are already taxed to their utmost capacity. Calls are daily made from many stations for more cars, which cannot be supplied. In Spokane the yards are almost bare of empty cars, and the same is true of other railroad centers.
>
> Many capitalists are building large elevators in consequence. It will be a good investment, for the full acreage has by no means been reached in the Palouse country. In addition to the grain crop, the fruit yield throughout Washington this year has been extraordinary. Thousands of bushels of plums and peaches were raised. Much of it was shipped East, but the shipping of fruit is nearly over. The hop crop is also excellent.

HARVARD AND PRINCETON.

An Effort Being Made to Get the Two Foot Ball Teams Together.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—A quiet movement is on foot to bring the Harvard and Princeton foot ball teams together. When Harvard withdrew last year from further participation with Princeton in athletic events it was supposed that such a move was final. But some of the graduates have taken the matter in hand, and they desire to heal the breach between the two colleges.

The idea is to get the two foot ball teams together by Nov. 15, somewhere in New York. If that is done, the Harvard faculty must pass a resolution giving permission to its foot ball team to play outside of New England.

It is a recognized fact that Harvard's eleven is about the best that ever represented that college and is in splendid condition, while, on the other hand, the Princeton eleven has not shown up in any way as strong as her rival. Still the Princetons are desirous of having a game with her old-time antagonist. It is not generally known that Capt. Cunnock of Harvard and Capt. Poe of Princeton have had several conferences on this question, but it is a fact nevertheless. Both think that previous actions have been somewhat childlike; in fact, the expression of the leading followers of the two colleges is: "Let the dead bury the dead, and let the past be forgotten."

The basis of the coming together of the base ball and football teams will be for three years, if it is made at all.

SOME BIG CROPS.

Two Receivers to Be Appointed for the Concern.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Judge Pratt handed down a decision in the sugar trust case to-day, in which he says a receivership is proper and necessary, and that not only one but two receivers should be appointed.

The receivers to be appointed will take possession of all the properties and monies of the trust. It is understood here that no person identified directly with the trust will be appointed. Judge Pratt gives the two parties to the suit until Thursday to agree upon the two persons to be appointed receivers.

The cases involved are known as the suits of Cameron against Havemeyer and Havemeyer against the Brooklyn Sugar Refinery company. The judge justifies the original injunction restraining the plan of reorganization, but says it has been superseded by the publication of the plan under the consent of both parties.

Gladstone Returns Home.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Mr. Gladstone started on his return to Hawarden from Scotland to-day. Enthusiastic receptions were accorded him at Montrose, Arbroath and Dundee. At Peebles a short stop was made, and Mr. Gladstone briefly addressed the assembled throng. He said that Lord Hartington was evidently not well satisfied with the result of the teaching of his doctrines as such results were exemplified by recent elections. The only doubt, the speaker said, which now remained in Lord Hartington's mind was whether the time had quite arrived to surrender what was left of the Liberal-Unionist party, the broken down followers of which were almost irretrievably demoralized by election which had proven most satisfactory to the liberals.

Concluded Its Case.

TIPPERARY, Nov. 4.—The crown concluded its case against the accused Nationalists to-day, and the trial was adjourned for one week to enable the defense to prepare their side for presentation. During the proceedings to-day Patrick O'Brien attempted to photograph a witness who was testifying before the court. He was taken into custody and arraigned before the magistrates, who adjudged him guilty of contempt of court and sentenced him to one week's imprisonment.

A Bloody Fight Expected.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 4.—A feud which has been brewing for some time near Cropwell, St. Clair county, has broken out in earnest. Two prominent families are involved and many lives will probably be lost before it is ended. Powell Hancock was shot and killed by George Norgher. Hancock's brother and friends are now hunting Norgher, with the intention of shooting him on sight. Friends have also rallied around Norgher, and as the principals are prominent men in their neighborhood and have many friends, a bloody fight is expected.

A Long Lease.

SAGINAW, Mich., Nov. 4.—The Chicago & Grand Trunk has secured by lease extending ninety-nine years control of the Cincinnati, Saginaw & Mackinaw. The road extends from Durand, whither it connects with the Chicago & Grand Trunk and the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee roads, to West Bay City, with excellent facilities at different points on the Saginaw river. The Chicago & Grand Trunk took charge to-day.

Unhappy Farmers.

The county commissioners were too much absorbed with the prevailing political fever to have their session yesterday morning a protracted or interesting one. A delegation of farmers was before the board with a little grievance. They say a fellow farmer near the dividing line between Hennepin and Carver counties took a notion to put a fence across the Shakopee and Dayton road and plowed up a portion of the thoroughfare. John Peshina is the name of the farmer. The roadway has been a public one for twenty years, but Mr. Peshina thought it was not a public highway after all. The committee on roads and bridges will attend to the matter. Considerable routine business was transacted.

Thirty of the prominent ones in the affair were discharged.

For the year ending July 31, 1890, the total amount $702,367.73. These are 1, 2 and 3 per cent. taxes, but mostly 3 per cent.

Complaint was made to the authorities of East Grand Forks that Bushee had choked the child to death. Coroner Shepherd, of Crookston, was notified and came to make an investigation. Undertaker Caswell, who buried the child, was sent to exhume the body in order that a postmortem might be held, but found the grave empty. Bushee and his wife are both under arrest and some sensational developments are expected.

There is much of interest in the annual report of the Northern Pacific which has not yet been given to the general public. There was a decrease in the shipment of beef cattle from the Montana and Western Dakota ranges of 28,056 head. This was due in part to the lingering results of the severe winter of 1886-87, in which great inroads were made upon the supply of young cattle, and also in part to the poor market, which discouraged cattle men from culling their prime beeves closely at the fall round-up. The hop shipments decreased from 4,815 to 4,600 tons. The indications are however, that the crop of this year will exceed that of 1888, which was the largest ever raised. According to the report of Land Commissioner Lamborn there were sold by his department during the year, 393,110 acres of land, for $1,870,059; town lot sales netted $398,907, and timber sales, coal royalties, etc, $109,261, making the total receipts of the department $2,378,227. Divided according to the states the land sales were:

	Acres.	Amount.
Minnesota	48,896	$141,512
North Dakota	85,049	344,905
Montana	98,124	230,612
Idaho	4,097	38,002
Washington	208,059	1,327,267
Oregon	3,596	7,191

N. P. Broomley, of Redfield, has done some farming after all this year—rain or no rain. He threshed about 1,900 bushels of wheat from about 200 acres. Indians on Indian creek, in the Black Hills county, about 200 in number, on a hunting excursion are engaged in stealing cattle and horses. They took a horse belonging to Zoeckler Bros., painted him for the purpose of disguising him, but the Zoecklers were able, notwithstanding, to identify the animal and took possession of him.

Erik Ellefson, a prosperous farmer living in the Lone Rock neighborhood, Moody county, died last spring. His widow was appointed administratrix of the estate. At the time of his death he had bargained for a piece of land for which he was to pay $1,000, but had not paid for it. Mrs Ellefson has out of this year's crops paid for the land, having raised nearly enough flax on that identical piece to pay for it. Judge Pratt says she has handled the business of the estate in far better shape than the average administrator, and that the instances are very rare where the accounts have been kept in as good shape as Mrs. Ellefson has done.

The officials of the latter county took the case in hand, but Coroner Shaver went over from Eau Claire and successfully insisted that it was his case.

The little babe of Frank H. Wosang, of Center, Rock county, was attacked by a vicious chicken of the leghorn variety. Carmon Sylva.

Harpers' for September: Modernity, indeed, is always somehow a charming thing when you get it skillfully expressed in a picture or a story, or in some such piece of personal history as Baroness Deichmann's translation of Baroness Stackelberg's life of Carmen Sylva, the queen of Roumania. When you think of the figure that royalty once cut in the awed imaginations of men, wrapped round with mists of twilight, it is sufficiently striking to have it electric-lighted, even to its intimate life and its recondite emotions by such a memoir as this. Happily, the queen of Roumania, if a poet of less effect than feeling, is a person whose life is as noble and beautiful as that of most women in the humbler walks of love and duty, and bears knowing as well. We are aware that this is saying a good deal for a queen; but we think it may be hazarded. We think the great attraction, the great use of the book is that it shows how little a princess of forty or fifty descents is characterized by lineage, and how little a good and gifted woman is embellished by royalty. You discover that she was like any number of other impulsive, cultivated, gifted girls, and is like any number of other self-sacrificing, heroic women, tried by love, by sorrow—the wives of lawyers, doctors, ministers, mechanics and laborers. Her father and mother were excellent people, and there was talent in the family; but her training was no better, one might almost say it was no other, for it could not well be any other, than such as intelligent and conscientious people now give their daughters in ethics and æsthetics; though perhaps the average American girl, from being a Protestant all her life, might have some misgiving in adapting herself to the Greek religion as soon as she became queen of Roumania. But we are not sure that Carmen Sylva did not do wiselier in bringing herself close by all possible means to the hearts of the people she desired to love and has greatly befriended; it is hard for a sovereign to be of any real use, with all the advantages.

Was a Father Himself.

Exchange: He was an old man, bent and gray. In spite of his unkempt appearance and his poor, faded clothes there was a certain nobility in his face that could not but attract the casual observer. He sat in the ante-room of the police court, together with a score of other prisoners. Upon his knees he held a little girl, whose uncared for appearance could not hide her childish prettiness. She leaned against his breast, and on her head there fell, now and then, a great tear.

"What oo cryin' for, popper?" the little girl would say, when some of these tears crept beyond her tumbled curls and crept down her forehead. Even the sottish crowd about them grew respectful. The two were so pathetic.

Finally the man's name was called, and he appeared before the judge. He stated his case. The charge was some minor offense. Just then the little girl, who began to realize that her father was in some danger, crept near. The judge caught sight of her. The child crept up, in spite of the gaze fixed on her from the bench, and clung to her father's hand.

"Is that your child?" asked the judge.

"It is, your honor; my motherless child."

The sternness died out of the eyes of the judge, and a moist tenderness took its place. He was a father himself. He raised his handkerchief, without shame, to wipe away the gathering dimness.

"I cannot do it," he said within himself. Then, looking at the prisoner before him, he said, in a voice choked with feeling:

"Thirty days."

Annoying, Very.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The abominations in human conversation are many, but one has come out of late that is peculiarly tiresome. Whenever you say anything that agrees with the opinions of the person with whom you are talking he answers, "That's right." When anything is explained to him he says, "That's right." In fact, on the slightest opportunity he will say, "That's right." In every conversation of twenty minutes there will be fifty "That's rights." It would be just as well if he would occasionally say, "That's true," or "That's so," or "I think so, too," or "I agree with you," or even "You're mighty accurate." Anything would be better than the "nauseous iteration" of "That's right." The new constitution cannot provide against such outrages, but every man with the good of his fellow citizens at heart can avoid using one expression incessantly.

Holmes Bros. elevator is nearly full to the roof of wheat and it is coming in faster than they can obtain cars for shipment.

Wheat has been coming in very lively the past week, both elevators having about all they can handle.

Alex. Mckinnon, of Crookston, the Democratic candidate for state senator was in town for a short time last Friday.

Miss May Morgan has accepted a position as a teacher in a school west of here and commenced her duties last Monday morning.

It will be several days before it is known who was elected yesterday owing to the enormous amount of scratching that was done on nearly every ticket.

Mr. Christianson came up from the southern part of the state last Sunday, to attend to his brother who is sick with Typhoid fever at Thief River Falls.

Dr. Hennemuth has been called to Thief River Falls several times the past week to attend a man by name of Christianson who is very sick of typhoid fever.

Now that a hot election is over we may expect some colder weather. It was in fact a cold day yesterday for a number of candidates.

A number of the young folks of the village assembled last Saturday evening and surprised Miss May Morgan at her home where they passed a very pleasant evening.

Hans Larson, of Crookston spent several days last week in this vicinity in the interest of a few nominees on the Republican ticket. He has a very persuasive way of getting votes for his man.

James Ford a son of John Ford a farmer living about five miles south of here met with a very serious accident last week. In taking a loaded shot gun out of a wagon it was accidently discharged the charge taking effect in the hip. The boy will live but will be badly crippled as the hip bone is badly shattered by the shot.

There will be a grand ball at Uzinger Hall saturday evening November 15. First class music will be in attendance and good order will be maintained. All are cordially invited to attend.

The Leavenworth Times was excluded from the mails the other day for publishing the result of a church fair lottery and Editor Anthony promptly brought suit for $10,000 damages against the postmaster. The Times claims that its publication was news matter and that newspapers cannot be punished for publishing the news.

It is not yet two years since the national administration passed into republican hands, and yet since that event eappened the national debt has been reduced $20[illegible],000,000. There is not so much idle surplus in the treasury, but neither is there so much interest drawing debt. Every honest and patriotic citizen will note the change with pride and pleasure. The invitation is still standing and all the holders of four and a half per cent bonds can walk up to the treasury and get what their bonds call for at maturity.

"How dear to my heart is the school I attended: and how I remember so distant and dim, that red headed Bill and the pin that I bended and carefully placed under him. And how I recall the surprise of the master when Bill gave a yell and sprang up from the pin so high that his bullet-head smashed up the plaster above, and the scholars all set up a din. That active boy Billy that high-leaping Billy, that loud-shouting Billy, that sat on a pin."—The Jury

Linn Loughbridge: I believe that the counties of Marshall, Kittson and Polk ought to take some steps to encourage emigration from the eastern states. We have the cheapest and most fertile farming lands found anywhere in the United States, only awaiting the touch of the husbandman to bring forth abundant harvests. Our resources and advantages need only be made known and people will come here. It seems to me that $5,000 could be invested to no better purpose by these three counties than in advertising the country and sending a few good men to the eastern states to work up the matter during the winter—Warren Sheaf.

Pioneer Press: Sitting Bull is a noisy old nuisence who needs badly to be sat upon permanently by the "Great Father." He has succeeded in stirring up a widespread belief among the Sioux that the Indian millennium is coming soon, in which all the white people will be buried beneath fifty feet of newly created earth and the Indians long dead will all live again. The buffaloes and ponies will also revive and the Indian brave will once more reign in undisputed control of the Western Hemisphere. Agent McLaughlin, of the Standing Rock Agency, has informed the interior department of the serious outlook.

The establishment of linen factories and factories for making beet sugar in the northwest is calculated to enlarge the scope of agriculture in the northwest. No one at all familiar with farming as it is carried on by the wheat farmers of Minnesota and Dakota believe otherwise than that there cannot be any permanent prosperity until the farmers their attention to something besides the small grains. Possibly flax and beets may offer them a profitable outlet and if this should be the case the lumber dealers will share in the resultant prosperity.—Lumberman,

In his letter of resignation the postmaster at D[illegible]s, says: "Yesterday I was knocked down and kicked and stamped until I began to think I was used up. We have compromised and I have agreed to resign. I am told that will settle the whole matter. I am truly glad to get away from here." A rather idealistic method of arriving at a compromise, but effectual withal. Taking all the circumstances into consideration it is not strange that the gentleman is glad to get away. In fact, he is probably glad to get away alive.—Tribune.

Here is a bit of advise given by a harvesting machine expert in regard to the keeping of harvesters. He says: Cover the knotting hook, disc, needle and knife of your harvester with a thick coating of an equal parts mixture of white lead and lard and there will be no trouble from rust when you want to use the machines again next season. Sickles after being thoroughly oiled should be wrapped in gunny sacks. A little care with your farm machinery will prolong its life of usefulness several years, and save lots of trouble in getting it started each season.—Ex.

East Grand Forks News: There has been much excitement over an investigation into the charge that Charles Bushee had killed his little two year old girl, on the assumption that the child was somebody's else. Coroner Shepard had a jury taking testimony, but no direct evidence sustaining the charge reported. The child at the time of its death was buried in the Catholic cemetery, in Grand Forks and the cause of death as given out by the parents was that something fell on it. When the coroner exhumed the coffin, it was found empty. There were no evidences that the grave was recently disturbed, so that the body must have been taken out soon after the interment. No clew has yet been found to the body. The accounts given by Bushee and his wife are said to conflict some. But the law and public decency require equally that they be held innocent of so grave charge until they are conclusively proven guilty. One story given out is that Bushee came home and whipped his wife, who told the little girl to go and call in a neighbor, which is fishy to begin with. Then Bushee in his rage seized the infant and beat out its brains against the stove. There can be no truth in this either. Mrs Bushee visited her husband at the city jail yesterday and when she was there Bushee wept like a child. He stoutly maintains that he did not kill the child. Information has been lodged against him on a 'belief' affidavit.

Next spring will see a renewal of the immigration which nearly ceased here when homeseekers became crazed with the Montana and Washington fever a few years ago. The tide is already setting back toward the Red River Valley and it will be strengthened next summer by special efforts upon the part of railroads to populate this part of their territory. The railroads and immigration agents always swing in line with popular feeling and boom the sections that are easiest to boom, and now with public attention directing itself anew to the valley of the Red they will make every effort to fill the country with people. On the west side of the river the people are alive to the opportunity of the hour and are using every means to induce the best settlers to come there. A few days ago an immigration convention was held at Grand Forks with 150 delegates in attendance. The importance of the work was discussed and plans laid for accomplishing it. We must not be behind in this move. A rush of settlers here next summer will double the value of every acre of land and help the towns proportionately. The time is ripe to do something. Let us do it,—Marshall County Deader.

The following figures show the magnitude of the Great Northern's business and the degree of prosperity it is enjoying. A statement just issued covers operations for the five months ending June 30, 1890: Gross earnings from operation of leased railways $3,861,832.53. Dividends "stocks" $112,834.00 Revenue from other sources $185,112.23 $621,25[illegible].53. Total revenue $3,982,587.06, Operating expenses of leased railway $1,763,343 36, State tax $1[illegible],080.26, Rent of leased lines paid and accrued $1704,725 59 Total charges from income $3,569,038.52

The indian has added his prediction to those already made concerning a hard winter. The Indians attach more importance to the muskrat sign than to any other. They measure the probabilities of the winter by the size of the muskrat's hut. If he builds low it means an open winter. If his house is over two feet high it means a severity of winter weather in proportion to the height. The muskrat is putting up a seven-story building this season.—St. Paul Globe.

An accident occurred at Black River this county, Thursday, which is feared will prove fatal. A threshing crew had been working in that vicinity, and they were moving from one farm to another the engine being propelled by steam. While on the way Oscar Peterson, a boy of 15 years of age jumped upon the engine to ride when his coat caught in the gearing and he was thrown against the rapidly moving parts of the machinery with such force as to dislocate his shoulder, and it is feared, fracture his skull. Dr. Wattson, of Red Lake Falls was summoned, but had not arrived when our informant left the scene of the accident. When he left, the boy was unconscious and it was not believed he could not live.—Crookston Times

INJUN JIM'S FISHING BAIT.

A Sportsman Who Could Catch Trout with Anything He Made Use Of.

For a number of years from my earliest recollection there lived for much of the time at my home in W., in northeastern Connecticut, an old Indian named Jim Wamsley, or Jim Injun, as the folks at home and the people in that neighborhood called him. He was one of the very best of the Narragansett tribe. He was to me as much and sometimes even more of a companion than was any of the boys of my own age. He was quite a lover of nature and a tiptop woodsman; I have yet to see an Indian that was not. Besides, he was no mean herbalist, knowing the properties and uses of the herbs, roots and leaves of about every medicinal plant growing in that section. If some good old lady or an invalid had use for any herb Jim was sure to know exactly where to get it. Whether he got his knowledge of the plants from others of the tribe, or from white persons with whom he came in contact, I never knew.

But by all odds fishing was his forte, either for trout or pickerel. He seemed to know of every place in all the ponds and streams where a fish would be likely to hide, and almost always brought home a good sized string of them. As I grew older I often accompanied him in his fishing excursions, sometimes with and often without the consent of the folks at home. He would very frequently go on Sundays, especially if pleasant, and sometimes when I was sent alone to church or to Sabbath school I would skulk off behind walls or hills to meet him at some place agreed on, then we would have a jolly good day of it. I was not setting a very good example surely. Once in awhile on Sunday evening, after coming home, I would catch something else beside fish that was not quite so agreeable. Well, through life we all have to take the bitter with the sweet.

In fishing for trout Jim never appeared to have any particular system, but would follow it in a kind of hap hazard style, with a common pole cut in the woods, peeled, and of considerable length. For bait he would use worms, grasshoppers, flies, millers, or any insect that he could readily find; but whatever he made use of was, in his hands, effective.

Sometimes when hungry he would clean a goodly number of the fish, and having built a fire on the bank of the stream or in the forest, he would lay them on the live coals and broil them to a nice brown color or fry them on nice flat stones; then what a splendid feast we would have! Is one's appetite better or the sense of taste more acute than in later years? It seems to be so. Since then, scores of times, when on fishing trips, I have eaten trout cooked in all styles, broiled, browned nicely in a frying pan, or made into a chowder, but somehow they never seemed to have that double extra good taste of those prepared near the brookside by old Injun Jim.—Cor. Forest and Stream.

Costume of an Imperial Body Guard.

Emperor William has developed a mania for new uniforms and costumes which is worthy of George IV. He has established a new body guard for the empress, which is to do sentry duty before her apartments at the palace, and is to serve as her escort at reviews and state functions. For palace duty the uniform consists of a white Brandenburg coat with cherry colored facings and huge shoulder knots in black, white and silver; a white waistcoat coming down low, white trousers and "jack" boots. There is also a black velvet three cornered hat, with cockade and feather in the Prussian colors. The strong uniform is much the same, except that the hat is replaced by a helmet of polished steel, crested with a golden eagle.—London Truth.

A Bill Collecting Postoffice.

In Holland bills are often paid through the medium of the postoffice. This department is still unknown in this country. It enables a man living, say, in London, to get a small bill collected in any provincial town without the often expensive and tedious interference of a banker or agent. For that purpose he hands his bill to the nearest postoffice. It is sent to the place where the money is to be collected. After the collection a draft is forwarded to the payee by the office where he deposited his bill, and where he gets his cash and the bill duly receipted on payment of a small commission, which is payable in advance. In some large towns the money and the bill are even brought to the payee's house.—London Tid-Bits.

Swallowed a Bird's Head.

Mrs. R. A. Weston, of Alamenda, Cal., had a narrow escape from suffocation. She was playing with a pet canary and pushed the bird's head into her mouth. Just then she grew hysterical and shut her teeth together, so as to strangle the bird. Her daughter pulled the canary and severed its head, which got into Mrs. Weston's gullet. She was black in the face when the obstruction was removed.—Toronto Globe.

Nashville's (Tenn.) curiosity is aroused as to what becomes of the pennies that are sent there. They are not used in trado to any considerable extent, and it is surmised in some quarters that most of them fall into the hands of superstitious people who toss them over houses or cover them with stones "for luck."

All France is laughing at the following announcement that appeared in one of the journals: "M. Ernst Zola, inventor of the spring handcuffs, notifies his customers that he has nothing in common with his namesake, Emil Zola, writer."

Professor Thomson says that the dynamo of the future will develop from 2,000 to 3,000 horse power, and as there is practically no limit to its increase, he sees no reason why it should not go far beyond those figures.

Mr. John Keowan, the worthy postmaster at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other." The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one trouble with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of all symptoms of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular. For sale by Justus L. Johnson.

ON A GREAT BIG SPREE.

HILARIOUS LIONS AND TIGERS IN THE "ZOO."

An Allowance of Catnip Leads Them From Paths of Rectitude—Its Effects Soon Pass Away and Leave a Good Appetite. —The Keeper's Pets.

There are more eccentricities of animal nature penned up within the encircling fence of the Philadelphia zoological gardens than one meets in a year of Sundays. Head Keeper Byrne can put a visitor in the way of more funny things about the members of his big family than all the books you can find in a modern library. He is perfectly familiar with every habit and characteristic of the four-footed children—for they are nothing in the world but children, and they are given doses of physic, fed, petted and punished just like children in the human family.

One day recently the lions and the tigers went on a drunk at the expense of Mr. Byrne, and they certainly had a high old time. Their intoxicant did not consist of the red, red wine; neither was it the foamy lager. It was simply catnip, and the noble beasts took it straight.

"Before I start the pets on their sprees," said Mr. Byrne, "I'm going to give them a little dose of castor oil. They'll make all sorts of wry faces if they take it, and maybe they won't take it at all. They're just like children when it comes to castor oil."

The head keeper passed into the rear of the lion's cage to a room where horse flesh is kept for the carnivorous animals, and cut off three or four lumps of meat about the size of walnuts. On each piece he poured a few drops of castor oil and then fired a couple of pieces into each cage. It was almost feeding time and the animals were ravenously hungry. Big "Dan," he of the shaggy mane and fierce demeanor, who is considered the noblest Roman of them all, gulped down his bit of meat, and a moment later was the most disgusted looking lion in the world. He made a wry face of the most comical description, gagged two or three times, and then when he realized how completely he had been fooled, he let out a roar that made the building shake. The others acted in the same manner and then sat down in dejected attitudes in different corners of the cages.

"Now let's go on a drunk, my pets," said Mr. Byrne, standing close to the cage and taking from his pocket a package of dried catnip. Instantly every lion and tiger in sight braced up and took a fresh hold of life. Big Dan's eye brightened like that of a toper who has been invited to take a drink. Mr. Byrne threw a handful of the fragrant herb into each cage, and then the animals began a series of extraordinary and wildly amusing high jinks. They made for the catnip much after the fashion of an old timer attacking his matutinal cocktail, and after eating a little, began to roll about in it, while a satisfied expression stole over each face.

Big "Dan" and his helpmeet seemed to have the most fun. For a little while they rolled about the floor of the cages for all the world like little puppies at play, and then they grew somewhat boisterous. Good natured growls filled the air, until "Dan" in the exuberance of his spirits rose up and hit his better half a most unchivalrous blow with his mighty paw. But this did not seem to interrupt the harmony of the occasion in the least, for the lioness proved to be one of the amiable kind for whom there is not a cross word or a blow in a whole bale of catnip. She did not resent the cruel slap, but kept right on having plenty of fun. A game of leap-frog followed the rolling about, and it was the most exciting episode of the entire spree. Big Dan did most of the leaping, and the way he would shake his shaggy mane and fly through the air high over his mate was a sight to put an expert acrobat to the blush.

But the tigers, the unamiable brutes, didn't appear to have a bit of fun. No sooner had the catnip been thrown into their cages than they settled down to have a clawing and snarling match. In about two minutes the cages looked like sections of Donnybrook Fair. The beasts clawed and yelled at one another, but, like most fights of the kind, no blood was spilled.

Mr. Byrne said it was only a way they had of showing how they loved one another, and the noise was all in fun. It only took a little while for the effects of the catnip to wear away, when the most powerful members of Mr. Byrne's happy family drowsed away into a peaceful sleep. The chances are no headache followed the catnip orgie, for when feeding time arrived a little while later every beast showed up with his appetite all polished and oiled and in splendid running order.

"Catnip has a decidedly queer effect on all animals of the feline specie," said Mr. Byrne. "It makes them drunk just as surely as whisky will make a human being drunk. If you are inclined to doubt this statement get a little catnip and try it on the household pussy. She will show you an amusing time."—Philadelphia Record.

Not the Same.

A thin, nervous looking man stepped up to the pastor as the latter came down from the pulpit.

"You have had a good deal to say this morning" he observed, "about a feller that killed a man named Abel."

"Certainly," replied the pastor. "'The Sin of Cain' was the subject of my discourse."

"I wish't you'd do me the favor next Sunday," said the thin man, in some excitement, "to tell the folks that the man you was talking about this morning ain't no relation to the Kane that keeps a livery stable down by the grist mill. I don't want none of my friends to think that I had a hand in that killin'. That's all. Good day."

WOMAN'S INTUITION.

Nearly Always Right in Her Own Judgment in Regard to Common Things.

An old gentleman over seventy, came into the city from his farm, without his overcoat. The day turned chilly, and he was obliged to forego his visit to the fair.

To a friend who remonstrated with him for going away from home thus unprepared, he said: "I thought it was going to be warm; my wife told me to take my overcoat, but I wouldn't. Women have more sense than men anyway."

A frank admission.

Women's good sense is said to come from intution; may it not be that they are more close observers of little things. One thing is certain, they are apt to strike the nail on the head, in all the ordinary problems of life, more frequently than the lords of creation.

"According to Dr. Alice Bennett, who recently read a paper on Bright's disease before the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, persons subject to bilious attacks and sick headaches, who have crawling sensations, like the flowing of water in the head, who are 'tired all the time' and have unexplained attacks of sudden weakness, may well be suspected of dangerous tendencies in the direction of Bright's disease.

The veteran newspaper correspondent, Joe Howard, of the New York Press, in noting this statement, suggests: "Possibly Alice is correct in her diagnosis, but why doesn't she give some idea of treatment? I know a man who has been 'tired all the time' for ten years. Night before last he took two doses of calomel and yesterday he wished he hadn't.

A proper answer is found in the following letter of Mrs. Davis, wife of Rev. Wm. J. Davis, of Basil, O., June 21st., 1890:

"I do not hesitate to say that I owe my life to Warner's Safe Cure. I had a constant hemorrhage from my kidneys for more than five months. The physicians could do nothing for me. My husband spent hundreds of dollars and I was not relieved. I was under the care of the most eminent medical men in the State. The hemorrhage ceased before I had taken one bottle of the Safe Cure. I can safely and do cheerfully recommend it to all who are sufferers of kidney troubles."

A German Woman,s Knitting.

If I were asked to present in one word the characteristics of the German women I should employ the word "knitting-work." A drive through the German country on Sunday afternoon reveals rows of women sitting on benches in front of the cottages knitting. The men drink beer and cultivate idleness while the women knit. Children of 10 years also sit in the doorways and knit.—Cor. Lewiston Journal.

There has been introduced into the French chamber of deputies a bill imposing a heavy tax on crests and titles of nobility.

Mind Reading.

You can read a happy mind in a happy countenance without much penetration. This is the sort of countenance that the quondam bilious sufferer or dyspeptic relieved by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters wears. You will meet many such. The great stomachic and alterative also provides happiness for the malarious, the rheumatic, the weak, and those troubled with inaction of the kidneys and bladder.

Catarrh

Is a complaint which affects nearly everybody, more or less. It originates in a cold, or succession of colds, combined with impure blood. Disagreeable flow from the nose, tickling in the throat, offensive breath, pain over and between the eyes, ringing and bursting noises in the ears, are the more common symptoms. Catarrh is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which strikes directly at its cause by removing all impurities from the blood, building up the diseased tissues and giving healthy tone to the whole system.

Bill Moore wanted to dig a well, so he plowed a lot of land and planted it in oats. Every day he watched the oats, observing the spots that showed greatest moisture. Finally he selected a spot and sunk a well. At twenty-four feet he had a fine stream of water—said to be the best well in the county. Other farmers in the same neighborhood have failed to find water at 200 feet.—Atchison Globe.

BEING A BOY.

It Is a Troublesome Disease, but it Is Not Necessarily Fatal.

I used to be a boy once, but I seem to have got over it, says a writer in the N. Y. Times. Boyhood is a curious disease, but every man has to take his dose of it. He does not mind it at the time; but when his complete cure has been effected, he looks back over the period of the attack, and wonders if he could ever have had anything so bad as that. A boy's troubles are mental. He has strange notions of life, and they rattle him so that he doesn't seem to get square with matters and things in the estimation of any disinterested observer. Of course, the boy thinks he is having a Jamesdandy time; but every one else knows he is not.

For instance, a boy thinks it is real good fun to go to bed with all his clothes on, and lie awake for three hours till the old man has swallowed his sleep-coaxer and sought his downy perch. Then the boy gets out of bed, climbs out of the back window and down a rain spout, barking his shins and skinning his knuckles on the way, and walks three miles across plowed fields to steal a watermelon out of a patch. And the next day, when they have watermelon for dinner at home, do you suppose that makes the boy feel sore, as it would a man? Not much. The boy has had his fun, and the chances are that he'll get up and do the same old act all over again day after to-morrow.

Again a boy thinks it's fun to put an empty soap box on top of two logs, and paddle himself up and down a brook where there are no lighthouses, no harbors, and not more than twelve inches of water, counting the mud on the bottom. A boy thinks it's fun to row a boat, too. He will get aboard a big, heavy skiff, and a pair of seven foot oars, when the thermometer indicates 90° in the summer house, and he'll pull himself around and around in a ring, and cut S's and figures 8 on the water, and think he's having more fun than a grand army man drawing a pension.

A boy thinks it's fun, too, to get four old bricks and build himself an oven, and then to make a wood fire in it, and roast four peachblow potatoes with the skins on, and eat them without salt. Two boys who can have unto themselves a small feast like this, accompanied by edifying conversation about the extermination of the Sioux, think they're having more fun than you or I would at a public dinner of fifteen courses.

When a boy gets over being a boy and looks back over the period of his disorder, he often wonders how it happened that he lived through it. But it appears to be pretty generally admitted by medical experts that the boyhood disease is not necessary fatal. It does away with a few of its victims, to be sure; but they are those who are affected with the acute form in which twenty-foot rivers appear three feet deep, and double-barrel shot guns are mistaken for Pandean pipes.

There is one form of the disease which ought to prove fatal but, for some inscrutable reason does not. That is the form which causes the patient to imagine that jewsharps, fifes, banjoes and horse-fiddles produce music. Usually, however, they just let the disease wear itself out. It wears a great many people out, too; but no matter.

Thought it Was a Paradise.

Where the road from Fairfax Seminary crosses the Virginia hills at Mount Zion Baptist Church the traveler is brought face to face with Washington lying spread out on the farther bank of the Potomac like a great picture. The other Sunday, says the Washington Star, a young man was driving with his best girl along that road, and woman-like she had about as much idea of where Washington was as a bird has of the location of the House restaurant in a dry spell. Just before reaching the summit, where he was going to spring the panorama on his unsuspecting victim, he said to her:

"Now, shut your eyes, and when I tell you to open them open them."

She agreed, and just as she reached the point of view he stopped his cart and said:

"There, sweetheart, open your eyes; that's Washington;" and he bent over and kissed her, lingeringly as the evening shadows touch the pink lips of the roses.

"Oh, George," she murmured in a bewilderment of rapture, "is it really? I thought it was Paradise."

And George fell out of the cart.

What He Did With the Flock.

A religious society worshiping not many miles from New London, Conn., decided to build a new church this season, and the pastor, among others, was chosen to solicit funds. He did his work very zealously, taking not only widow's but the children's mites as well. This energetic pastor has a class of children in the Sabbath school, and one Sunday, not long since, while instructing them, he compared himself to the Good Shepherd and then inquired what the latter did with his flock.

One bright-eyed little fellow promptly replied: "He shears them!" All within hearing smiled at this answer except the pastor.

Avoiding a Misunderstanding.

McCorkle—Did I tell you about a fish swallowing a snake, that I saw while away on my vacation?

McCrackle—No; but before you begin I want to ask you one question.

"All right."

"Is this a snake story or a fish story?"

Past Understanding.

Ada—It is strange what a long article a reporter can write on a mere trifle.

Lulu—I should say so. The other day one of them wrote a whole column on a bathing suit.

Galls on the necks and hocks of horses or other similar abrasions, should be washed with castile soap and tepid, soft water, and afterwards with salted cold water. It will toughen the skin. Any indolent sores should be kept clean with soap and water. If galls do not respond to this treatment, apply tannin which may be had at any drug store.

Nearly every article sold is cheapened, in cost of production, at expense of quality. Dobbins' Electric Soap is exactly to-day what it was in 1865, absolutely pure, harmless and uniform. Ask your grocer for it. Look out for imitations.

The steam fitters of Chicago to the number of between 300 and 400 have struck. Their demand is for an advance of about 10 per cent. in wages and eight hours work.

MERRIAM ELECTED.

Additional Official Returns Received Insure His Election.

A Few Counties, Which Will Not Change the Result to Hear From.

The official returns from Wabasha, Winona, Douglas, Benton, Redwood, Polk, Pipestone and Washington counties have added ninety-two to Merriam's plurality and deducted 161 from Wilson, so that with the official returns of twelve counties yet to hear from the totals are: Merriam, 87,354; Wilson, 85,173; leaving a plurality of 2,191 for Merriam. The official votes yet to be announced are those of Carver, Cass, Grant, Hennepin, Hubbard, Kanabec, Lake, Otter Tail, Ramsey, Renville, Sherburne and Stevens. Assuming that the gains and losses will be about equal on both sides, it is safe to conclude that Merriam's plurality will not be far below 2,000. Additional official returns by counties:

ERRORS OF JUDGES.

Returns From Two Districts in Washington County Being Corrected.

STILLWATER, Special, Nov. 11.—The work of the county auditor and the board on the election returns to-day was tedious and also unsatisfactory, owing to manifest errors made by the judges of election in Oakdale and also in the Second precinct of the First ward in this city. The Oakdale returns were mixed, the Democratic vote being given to the Republican and visa versa. The returns as received from all the polling districts show on their face a plurality of 158 for Merriam, but when the corrections are made his plurality is placed at 32. But this may be changed somewhat. The vote between Daly and Durant for the legislature is close—Daly 787, Durant 761—and a recount of the ballots will be demanded. The vote as shown by the returns is: For governor, Merriam 1,899, Wilson 1,711, Owen 1,017, Pinkham 59; lieutenant governor, Ives 2,181, Pahl 1,668, Barrett 753; secretary of state, Brown 1,794, Lindholm 2,328, Welsberg 451; auditor, McGuire 2,163, Bierman 2,314, Kron 83; treasurer, Bobleter 2,154, Foote 1,722, Matheson 645, Frost 75; attorney general, Clapp 2,174, Calhoun 1,606, Taylor 729; clerk of supreme court, Holcomb 2,061, O'Hair 1,840, Kolars 698, Dean 92. For congress, Snider 1,950, Castle 2,426; state senator, Searles, 2,050, O'Brien 2,011. Richmond 447; legislature, Daly 787, Durant 761; city district, Borenen 728, Rowan 351, Keele 121; Southern district, Zelch 1,046, Dornfeld 719; first amendment to constitution, yes 891, no 741; second amendment, yes 521, no 1,062. The contest for county coroner between Dr. T. C. Clark, chairman of the Republican county committee, and Dr. Voigt is very close—2,273 to 2,243—and this Oakdale may change in Dr. Voigt's favor. The board adjourned until to-morrow, when the corrections for Oakdale and the Second precinct of the First ward will be on hand, special messengers being sent to see the judges and clerks.

DEMOCRATIC OBSTRUCTIONS.

An Attempt by Democrats to Throw Out a Big Republican Vote.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—The session of the county commissioners for a canvass of the election returns broke up in a row this evening. One of the commissioners is a candidate on a ticket, therefore disqualified from acting. This leaves four members, two of whom are Democrats and two Republicans. Returns from three wards of Sioux Falls were locked up in the ballot boxes as returned to the commissioners. The Democrats refused to open the boxes, intending thereby to throw out the large Republican majority of those wards. Auditor Stanfield, nevertheless, opened the boxes and laid the poll books before the board. But the board adjourned until morning without action. Mandamus proceedings will be commenced at once to compel the count of the vote as returned if the Democrats continue to obstruct the count.

Still a North Dakota Resident.

FARGO, Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—Senator Pierce spent to-day in Fargo on his way to Grand Forks to be present at the opening of the new opera house. He refused to talk about the result of the Burleigh county campaign, but furnished the Argus with a statement denying ever having moved his residence from North Dakota, and showing business engagements he had here during the time it was alleged he was out of the state. In regard to not paying taxes, he presents a statement showing about $140 per year paid upon Bismarck bank stock standing in his name.

THURSTON'S OPINION.

Off-Year Apathy and the McKinley Bill Caused the Upheaval.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Hon. J. N. Thurston, the president of the Republican League clubs of the United States, arrived this morning from Omaha, fresh from the Nebraska campaign. In response to the query as to what were the causes which led up to the recent political upheaval in Nebraska and elsewhere, Judge Thurston said:

Several causes led to the so-called defeat, viz: The apathy of an off year in politics and the principal thing among voters being the McKinley bill. The natural tendency of prices were upward, among which can be named boots and shoes, iron, lumber and other commodities, although the tax was reduced upon these and other commodities. Theorists endeavored to explain, but nobody knows why. We struck a rising market with the passage of the McKinley bill, and all of this is laid to it.

Nebraska has not gone Democratic, as the entire Republican state ticket is elected except the election of Boyd for governor. Boyd ran 6,000 votes ahead of his ticket in Omaha, on the prohibition issue, and had Richards received his party vote in Omaha he would have been elected. Of course the Farmers' Alliance is just now at the height of its power. It is organized and bound together as closely as any secret organization, and this party cast a surprisingly large vote. I think there will be a revival of stalwartism in the Republican party, such as to make 1892, the coming presidential election year, a great Republican year.

The Republican workers all over the country did not take an active part in this campaign just passed. They felt as though their services to the Republican party had been undervalued. But in 1892 these persons will be at work in support of some candidate who will arouse enthusiasm, and these very men will lead to victory as heretofore. The result of the recent elections has not put an end to the presidential chances of either William McKinley or Thomas B. Reed, but it has probably postponed their dates. Blaine or Alger would be winners at the head of the ticket in 1892.

AN OFF YEAR.

Mr. Bayne's Opinion as to the Cause of the Democratic Victory.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Representative Bayne of Pennsylvania, who helped frame the McKinley tariff bill as a member of the ways and means committee, is in Washington. He says that ignorance and misrepresentation were great factors in the election, but the cause of the Democratic victories was the fact that this is an "off year." The federal election bill, he said, had an effect secondary only to the off-year cause, while misrepresentations about the new tariff had to produce unfavorable results in Republican districts. There is no likelihood of the Republican party undoing what it has done in the way of a consistent revision of the tariff simply because that revision has been misunderstood. Said Col. Bayne:

In the next congress the Democrats will be tumbling over each other with free trade propositions. The senate, with a small Republican majority, will be looked upon as a bulwark against this sort of legislation, yet it may not answer the purpose in every instance. The votes of certain Western senators on the McKinley bill makes that fact clear.

A number of Democratic congressmen who will not be members of the Fifty-second congress have announced themselves as candidates for offices at the disposition of the house. Congressman Lawler, the defeated Democratic candidate for sheriff of Cook county, Ill., will be a candidate for sergeant-at-arms of the house. John Quinn of New York is being pushed for the house clerkship. Other congressmen have heretofore announced their candidacy.

LOOKS LIKE PALMER.

An Error Gives the Democrats Control of the Illinois Legislature.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—An error has been discovered in footing up the returns of the Second senatorial district, and it now appears that Kinney, the Democratic candidate for representative, was elected instead of Hoppin, the Republican, as reported.

Owing to the fact that the two parties have been thought to be a tie in the legislature, this discovery is of considerable importance. If the official count verifies the election of Kinney, the Democrats will have 101 votes in the assembly, and the Republicans but 100, thus making the election of John M. Palmer to the United States senate next thing to a certainty.

THE COLOR LINE.

An Important Subject Discussed in World's Fair Circles.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 11.—The principal and most important subject now discussed in world's fair circles, is that as to whether the colored people shall have a separate exhibit or any show at all at the coming exposition.

The representative colored people of Chicago will hold a meeting on next Wednesday at Bethesda church to discuss that question. Protests are coming from all over the United States against the fact that President Harrison, in his world's fair appointments, has not recognized the colored race. A lengthy communication from a colored society to President Palmer says, among other things:

Colored men do not desire that the exposition shall set apart for them a separate department in order that they may compete with the other exhibitors at the exposition, or in any wise appear in contrast with other exhibits. Their sole object is to show to the entire world, which will have representatives here, as well as to their countrymen, what the one time slave has really accomplished since he was given his freedom.

The demand is made that a bureau for colored exhibits be established.

Majority for the Republican.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—The official count of Allegheny county, completed today, shows a majority for Stewart (Rep.) for congress over Craig (Dem.) of 2,661. This gives Stewart a majority of 34 in the district—the Twenty-fourth—over Craig, whose election has heretofore been claimed. The district in 1888 gave Ray (Rep.) 4,338 majority. The delegation from the state in the next congress will consist of eighteen Republicans and ten Democrats—a Democratic gain of three.

Merriam and Minnesota All Right.

CHICAGO, Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—Gov. Merriam of Minnesota arrived at the Hotel Richelieu this morning, and without leaving his autograph on the register was assigned to a room. After being found by a reporter he was interrogated as to what he thought of the recent election and his reply was:

"Minnesota is all right and so am I. Now," he continued, "I am traveling privately. I don't see why you newspaper men come around and interview me in this way, and I would rather not be mentioned by the newspapers as being in this city."

Choked to Death.

EAU CLAIRE, Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—A three-year-old son of John Fulton choked to death by a piece of boiled cabbage at the supper table, dying before assistance could be rendered.

Two Trains Robbed.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 11.—Two night trains on the Georgia railroad, one leaving Atlanta for Augusta and the other leaving Augusta for Atlanta at the same hour were robbed last night. The Southern Express company takes no way packages, it being a through run and the messengers sleep on cots in the express car. The train leaving Augusta was robbed of about $40. The messenger is in Atlanta, and his story has not yet been received. Messenger Ficklen, who reached here this morning, is a heavy loser, as a telegram from Atlanta says his packages amounted to $12,000.

HIGHLY HONORED.

Members of the Irish Nationalist Party Given an Ovation at New York.

An Appeal for Aid From Liberty-Loving Americans Receives a Response.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Rarely has the Metropolitan opera house held such an audience as it did to-night when the Irish societies of the city of New York gave a public reception to the Irish representatives, Messrs. O'Connor, O'Brien, Dillon, Sullivan, Harrington and Gill. There were about 4,000 people in the house, 3,200 were seated and the remaining 1,800 were on the platform and were standing around the hall.

Broadway, from the Hoffman house at Twenty-fifth street to the Metropolitan opera house at Thirty-ninth street, was thronged with crowds who waited patiently for an hour to see the distinguished Irishmen pass on their way to the meeting. Many of these people had tried to purchase tickets for the demonstration but were turned away.

Among the early arrivals on the stage who were recognized by the audience and warmly applauded were Gov. Abbett of New Jersey, Eugene Kelly and ex-Chief Justice Charles B. Daly. Dr. McGlynn was also recognized as he took his seat in the audience. The boxes were on the first balcony, and were occupied principally by ladies. Mrs. O'Brien, Mrs. Sullivan and Mrs. O'Connor occupied the first box to the right of the platform. The list of vice presidents contained among others these names: Hugh J. Grant, Grover Cleveland, Levi P. Morton, Charles A. Dana, William M. Evarts, William C. Whitney, Judge Charles H. Van Brunt, Gen. W. T. Sherman, Leon Abbett, Chauncey M. Depew, William R. Grace, Joseph H. Choate, Carl Schurz, Whitelaw Reid, Noah Davis, Joseph J. Donohue, Bourke Cockran, John A. Cockerill, of the World; Oswald Ottendorfer, of the Staatz Zeitung; Postmaster C. N. Van Cott, Roswell P. Flower, Daniel Dougherty, Collector Joel P. Erhardt, Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, Seth Low, Thomas C. Acton, Thomas L. James, Eugene Kelly, Elbridge T. Gerry, John T. Agnew and Richard O'Gorman.

When the loud outburst of cheers had ceased Mr. O'Donohue called the meeting formally to order. It was no political gathering that he saw before him, he said, but one of patriotic people among the American people who had come to pay their respects and give welcome to Messrs. O'Brien, Dillon, O'Connor, Sullivan, Gill and Harrington. They were there to express their reverence of these men, who have spent all their time and energy, endured suffering and engaged in a long fight for home rule.

John Dillon opened his address with a high tribute to the late John Boyle O'Reilly. He said that he and his friends had come here to ask whether they had fulfilled the promises made to the people who had put their trust in him. He stated that while thousands of people in Ireland are threatened with starvation about $100,000,000 worth of food as being exported out of that country this year into England to pay rents of the Irish landlords. He claimed that Ireland was losing 500,000 per year and that the chief business of the police was to pull down the houses of the people.

O'Brien also spoke feelingly of John Boyle O'Reilly. He told the story of the battle against landlordism in Tipperary and strongly denounced the acts of Smith Barry. Sullivan, Harrington and O'Connor also made addresses.

This evening a meeting was held at the Globe theater which was crowded. O'Connor, Harrington, Dillon, O'Brien and Sullivan spoke. The box office receipts at the two meetings aggregated $5,100, in addition to which the audience pledged about $3,600.

James H. Stark, a member of the British-American association of this city, who has recently made a tour of investigation through Ireland, spoke in Music hall today. He asserted that people in Northern or "Protestant" Ireland appeared to be prosperous and that there was no potato famine. The suffering in Southern Ireland, he declared, is the result of the plan of campaign of which Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien are the authors. He claims that the tenants bitterly regret the introduction of the plan of campaign, and would settle with their landlords if they were free agents.

CAPTURED AT LAST.

One of the Salem, N. D., Train Robbers Caught in Virginia.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Postoffice Inspector Watkins of Chicago arrived here to-night, having in custody William E. Newberry, who is said to be the leader of the most daring train robberies of recent years.

June 8, Northern Pacific train was stopped at New Salem, N. D., by highwaymen. Two masked men climbed upon the engine and compelled the engineer and firemen to detach the engine from the train and then to pull out. Having taken the engine about twenty rods, the engineer was ordered to stop, and the engineer and fireman were taken back to the train, where they were ordered to batter down the door of the express car. With the first attack upon the car the express clerk escaped from it and saved the contents of the safes, since he carried with him their keys. Having entered the car the two robbers compelled the engineer, the fireman and the postal clerk to cut open the mail pouches and to carry the first-class registered mail matter to the robbers' horses. About five hundred packages, containing $5,000 in cash, were thus secured.

G. E. Bailey, one of the highwaymen, was subsequently captured, and is now serving a term in the North Dakota penitentiary. The search for Newberry has been carried on by the postal authorities ever since, and he was arrested at Plains, Va., Saturday. Newberry comes of an excellent Virginia family.

Riotous Strikers.

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—A blody conflict arose at Ottensen, a suburb of Hamburg, to-day between the striking glassblowers and 300 Polish "blacklegs." Revolvers were freely used, and one man killed and many were injured. A large number of arrests were made.

Several Workmen Killed.

PRAGUE, Nov. 11.—A portion of the roof of a house in course of erection in this city collapsed to-day, demolishing a scaffold upon which a number of men were working. Five dead workmen and six injured ones have been extracted from the ruins. Others are still buried in the debris.

Killed an Innocent Man.

MACON, Ga., Nov. 11.—Five citizens of Dodge county have been committed to jail on a charge of conspiracy in the murder of J. C. Forsythe at Normandale, Oct. 7. One of the prisoners is Wright Lancaster, sheriff of Dodge county, and another is Luther A. Hall, a Dodge county attorney, whose trial for perjury is now pending in the federal district court. A white man named Andrew Reneau was shot by a mob of which the prisoners were members, for the murder of Forsythe on the day after it occurred, but later investigations by United States special agents proved his innocence of the crime.

FIGHT OVER A BODY.

An Unfaithful Wife's Scheme to Secure Her Husband's Life Insurance.

PUEBLO, Colo., Nov. 11.—Four years ago fifteen conductors on the Rio Grande were laid off by a change in the management, which rendered their sevices unnecessary. Among them was W. A. Jimeson. Jimeson bade his wife and four-year-old girl goodby and went to Texas for work.

Soon after he left Mrs. Jimeson became very friendly with Tom Taylor, superintendent of bridges of the Denver & Rio Grande. She obtained a deed to their home on Abriendo avenue, mortgaged the property for $1,600, and left with Taylor on a trip to the northwest, visiting Seattle, Tacoma and other places, returning after a few months. Jameson heard of it, and returned with the intention of shooting the man who had betrayed him. He did not find him, and the the a air broke up the family and Jameson returned to Texas and the relations between Taylor and the woman continued.

Last Saturday Jameson was killed at Clarendon, Tex., by the cars and his body brought here for burial, and it was taken in charge by the Order of Railway Conductors and Masonic fraternity. The guilty wife asked that the body be taken to her house, but it was refused.

After much pleading with one of the leading Masons the woman was given an order on the undertakers for the body, which she desired to have remain in her house "but one night." The undertakers got the corpse and were halfway to Mrs. Jimeson's house when the conductors found out what was going on and by quick work stopped the hearse and ordered it back. After some controversy the hearse turned around and again placed the coffin in the Masonic temple. When the woman found this out she vowed that she would replevin the body.

Mr. Jimeson carried $2,500 insurance with the Order of Railway Conductors and $5,000 with the Masons. When the first trouble occurred he changed the papers from his wife to his daughter. By holding the body of the deceased in her house over night she would get control of this money. The two societies swore that the money should go to the child when she becomes of age, and if she replevins the body they will swear out a warrant charging her with adultery.

IDAHO DESERT LAND.

Large Amounts Being Taken Up for Speculative Purposes.

HELENA, Mont., Special Telegram, Nov. 11.—Within the last ninety days 50,000 acres of land have been taken up in the vicinity of Idaho Falls, Idaho, under the desert land act.

Special Agent Tyner, of the land department, suspecting that the land was being taken up for speculative purposes, investigated. He found that entries were being made by Eastern parties, who had been induced to file on claims by a Denver syndicate.

It is alleged that parties of Eastern people were taken to Idaho Falls on special excursions, and then taken by wagons across Snake river to some high point where the view is unobstructed for twenty miles. Parties then go the land office, and make affidavit that they had visited each tract upon which entry was made. The law requires that each person visit the tract entered upon and swear that the land is not taken up for speculative purposes. It seems that the provisions have been ignored, and the special agent thinks he can have all such entries canceled.

Bonafide settlers are complaining, as the land will be tied up and held back from settlement three years. The records of the land office in Idaho show that on one day twenty entries were made by Chicago parties. Large parties were also brought from Portland, Denver and Salt Lake.

If this is kept up all the desert land will be tied up within a short time, but the matter is to be brought be ore the department at Washington, and if the entries are ordered canceled, Eastern parties who have been taken into the scheme will be out the expense of the trip and fees paid the company inducing them to go. The affair has created much excitement.

A THRILL OF HORROR.

All England Shocked at the Revelation Made by Bonny.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The story told by Bonny has caused a thrill of horror throughout England, and the sentiment is generally expressed that, while Stanley is vindicated as against the charges of Barttelot's relatives, he and his surviving associates should long ago have told the whole truth, in the interest of justice and humanity.

The Daily News says that if Bonny is able to substantiate one-tenth of what he has related Stanley will be completely justified, and it will only remain to ascertain the precise moment when Barttelot became raving mad.

The Pall Mall Gazette says that Mr. Stanley will prosecute Walter Barttelot and others who have brought charges against him in connection with the controversy regarding the rear guard of the Emin relief expedition. Mr. Stanley has retained Mr. George Lewis and Sir Charles Russell to conduct his case.

In an interview yesterday Mrs. Jameson denounced as a baseless fabrication the story that her late husband purchased a girl and turned her over to the natives to be killed and eaten, in order that he might have an opportunity of witnessing and sketching cannibalistic scenes. She says that Jameson sent her a number of sketches illustrative of the life of an African tribe. Some of these sketches depicted the cannibalistic habits of the natives, one showing two victims being sacrificed, but these were only incidents coming under his observation as a traveler.

WHALE HUNTERS LOST.

Six Sailors Towed Out of Sight by a Whale They Had Harpooned.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 11.—The whaler Charles W. Morgan, which has arrived from Okholsk sea, reports the loss of six of her crew. The men left the vessel in a small boat Sept. 1, in pursuit of a whale, which they succeeded in harpooning. The whale started off at a rapid rate, towing the boat, which contained the second mate and five seamen. Fog set in and they were soon lost from view. A search was made for them, but they were never found, and it is believed the whale smashed the boat, killing the occupants. The whaler Norwhal, from Fox Island, reports six men washed overboard during a gale, but two of the men were fortunately thrown back alive by a returning wave.

Afraid of Medical Students.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 11.—Birchall is growing despondent, and appears to be anxious for the fatal day. He frequently talks of his death, and says he regrets the possibility that the doctors will cut him open in their post mortem examination. He is anxious that his remains be securely entombed in a bricked vault, lest they be stolen by some members of the medical profession, whom he describes as rubbing their hands in anxious ecstacy to lay hold of him after he is dead and carve him up. He laughs at those who think he would attempt to cheat the gallows, and says he not made of the stuff that suicides are made of.

Coroner Shephard, of Crookston, arrived in East Grand Forks to hold an inquest on the remains of the child said to have been killed by its father, Pullett Bushee. He then asked if anyone from Emmons county had been inquiring for him, and in almost the same breath confessed that he had shot a man there.

Harry Pettie wandered away from his home near Dunseith, October 18th, and has not since been heard from, though hundreds of persons have scoured the county in search of him. Although many of the party were convinced that the child had been spirited away, it was not until lately that kidnaping was the general belief. Harry Pettie the missing boy, was two and a half years old, large for his age, thick set and fleshy and thirty-five inches tall. He had dark brown eyes, light hair a fair complexion, a full fore head and small features. Those wishing to aid in the search can send to Rev. John Crumb of Dunseith. A reward of $500 is offered for the child alive.

Capt. J. S. McKinley, of Osage, probably carries as many painful mementoes of the "late unpleasantness" as any veteran in the country—in fact his body is a network of scars. Since the war 111 pieces of bone have been taken from his body, eighty-seven being taken from the head alone. He is now 52 years of age, and notwithstanding the hard usage he has experienced still enjoys good health.

A young man slightly under age applied to the county clerk for a marriage license, but did not have the necessary written permission of his parents says the Davenport Democrat. The latter unfortunately lived in Sweden and were at home. There was only one way out of the difficulty. The house was finished and the wedding garments were all ready. So the young man applied for the appointment of a guardian, and one was appointed by the court. The guardian gave his consent to the marriage, in writing as required by law, and the wedding came off that evening. But it was a rather costly marriage license.

A Letter of Voltaire.

New York Sun: Speaking of the statue of Voltaire, a French paper has unearthed a letter of his upon precisely that subject, addressed to a friend, and here is the lesson which the philosopher gives:

"Enjoy life while you can, despise all the rest. I think I have already told you that I am not dignusque mutabimate vultus. I am no longer the possessor of what might be called a face. I look like a baked apple on the top of a crane's neck. It would never do to carve out that.

"Some little time ago the duchess of Brunswick begged so hard of the king of Prussia to send her his statue, made after the fashion of Louis XIV. in the Place des Victoires, that his majesty was unable to refuse her. He got himself sculptured in this fashion, astride on a turkey cock, and instead of four slaves around the base there were four monkeys grinning. You will admit after all that it ill becomes small folks to be vain. But if you wish I will send you one of the monkeys of that statue, and you can put my name at the foot of it.

"My dear sir, let us esteem only health and repose. All the rest is smoke, and I have already spent too much of my life in running after smoke. I wish you a genuine happiness, if there is such a thing.

"VOLTAIRE."

A Chinese Suttee.

London Times: A case of suttee, which is unusual in China, although it is regarded as a great virtue, is reported from the neighborhood of Foochow. The victim was a young woman twenty-four years of age, whose husband died of leprosy early in the year. She was childless and had none except distant relatives to depend on for support. She had, therefore, she said, no alternative but to commit this act of self-sacrifice. As soon as her intention became known she received several invitations to grand banquets, all of which she accepted and enjoyed as if there were to be no sequel. After a special feast of this character she ascended a stage constructed for the purpose, where the village elders came to make their obeisances, each three times, as if she were already a canonized saint. The signal having been given by firing off a gun, she ascended a scaffold with her hands unpinioned, and there, in sight of all, strangled herself. Her body was placed in a coffin, which was duly prepared beforehand. It is said that the emperor will grant a tablet extolling her virtue as soon as the viceroy of the province represents the case to the throne.

Sleep Is Rest.

T. DeWitt Talmage says: There is not one man or woman in 10,000 who can afford to do without seven or eight hours' sleep. All those stories written about great men and women who slept only three or four hours a night make very interesting reading; but I tell you, my readers, no man or woman ever kept healthy in body and mind for a number of years with less than seven hours' sleep.

Americans need more sleep than they are getting. This lack makes them so nervous and the insane asylum so populous. If you can get to bed early, then rise early. If you cannot get to bed till late, thus rise late. It may be as Christian for one man to rise at 8 as it is for another to rise at 5.

I counsel my readers to get up when they are rested. But let the rousing bell be rung at least thirty minutes before your public appearance. Physicians say that a sudden jump out of bed gives irregular motion to the pulse. It takes hours to get over a too sudden rising. Give us time after you call us to roll over, gaze at the world full in the face, and look before we leap.

M. Summy invested $1,000 in sheep last fall. This season his wool clip netted him $372, and he has sold 200 sheep for 700, besides raising 175 lambs after selling twelve little ones—which he did not have milk for—for $12. Thus, his flock of 200 sheep costing him but $1000 last fall has already returned him $1,074 in cash and he has 365 left—having lost ten.—Times, Faulkton, S. D.

The train was over four hours late again today. The only trouble was that the crew was compelled to do too much switching in the Crookston yard and had to distribute several cars of ties along the line. AN AVALANCHE!

The Alliance elect every man on their ticket.

Ring Rule Politics Knocked Out.

The Polk County Ring Badly Smashed.

The alliance have elected every man on their County and Legislative tickets by pluralities ranging from one to three thousand votes.

The following is the ticket elected.

LEGISLATIVE TICKET.

51st Legislative District.

For State Senator, Edwin E. Lommen.

For Representatives.

B. M. Chesley.

Andrew Thompson.

William Carlton.

COUNTY TICKET.

For Auditor, Calno U. Webster.

For Treasurer, John T. Beaudry.

Clerk of District Court, Nils Muns,

Register of Deeds, John Locken.

Judge of Probate, Chris. M. Benson.

County Attorney, Arnold R. Holston,

For Sheriff, Arne Grundyson.

Supt. of schools, Even J. Grefthen.

For Coroner, Dr. A. McEachran.

For County Commissioners.

2d District, Andrew O, Stortroen.

4th District, Cyprien F. DeMers.

The Polk County Ring is snowed under by majorities they never dreamed of and it is not probable that they will attempt to run things in this county again. For this let us be truly thankful to the alliance. The people have spoken and have decided that ring rule politics and packed conventions won't go in this county and our heretofore political autocrats are looking for a job.

The defeat of K. C. Gigstad for county commissioner is wholly due to the farmers who voted the alliance ticket in this vicinity. It was important that this section of the district should have a county commissioner and all parties should have united on Mr. Gigstad regardless of political views. This was not done, however, and we have a commissioner who has no interest in our welfare and presumably will do nothing for our interests.

Fisher Bulletin: Polk County has gone overwhelmingly alliance. What was the cause of it? Well there are a good many things that helped to bring about the above result, The McKinley bill helped. The alliance was a much bigger factor than was at first supposed, but the principal thing was the lack of organization among the republicans. There was absolutely no organization. The party was unfortunate in selecting a committee, the chairman of which was a mortgage and loan agent, and in whom the people had no confidence knowing as they did, that he was there to further his own selfish ends, He was made chairman of the county central committee at a packed convention held in Crookston in July to send delegates to the state convention and which was illegal because that convention had no jurisdiction over the matter, then at the county convention held later on, he got himself appointed to that position again against the judgement and wishes of the workers in the party, many of whom went to him and asked him to resign in the interests of the party but this he refused to do. His holding that position was the very worst thing that ever happened to the party. He is a money loaner and a loan agent has no business in such a position. The Republicans have worked hard for their ticket, and they never had a better ticket to work for—but it was impossible to overcome the predjudices that that existed in the minds of the people.

NOTICE DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP,

Notice is hereby given that the co partnership heretofore existing between H. Reinhardt and G. Buchholz has been disolved and Mr. Reinhardt will not hold himself responsible for any debts contracted by Mr. Buchholz after this date.

Henry Reinhardt.

Dated at St. Hilaire Minn Nov. 8 1890

P. B Malberg, of Marshall County well known here, was defeated for sherif He was running on the Alliance ticket. The office goes to John Kival an independent candidate.

Frank Mead in Northfield News says: Intelligent young man, clerk in a store for $3 a week and your chance is good for becoming a millionaire merchant; break on the railroad at $30 a month and you may become general manager at $10,000 per year; sweep out a bank and run errands for 50 cents a day, and you are liable to become a rich respected financier; learn to set type in a printing office, and while you will never be great, celebrated or wealthy you will certainly be good, and always honest and respectable. But eschew politics. One who has had abundance of experiance therein assures you that it don't pay. You can neither build fortune, character, intelligence or virtue by running for office, or aiding other men to secure employment. The sleepless struggle for place and power cultivat falsehood, deceit, envy, jealousy, hatred avarice—all the unclean blood of bad passions, Politics like alcoholic stimulants, is a liar. It promises everything and gives only evil. It feeds on Dead Sea fruit.—beautiful to the sight, ashes to the lips.

MERRIAM

And the Repblican State Ticket elected.

Excepting P. J. McGuire for State Auditor.

Merriam's plurality over 2000.

The ballance of the ticket have over 5000.

The latest returns give Governor Merriam a plurality of over 2000 votes The state ticket will have a larger plurality with the exception of P. J. McGuire for state auditor who was defeated by A. Bierman by over 20,000 F. P, Brown for secretary of state will have a close call but is elected by a small plurality, Tuesday's Pioneer Press gives Merriam 87,354, Wilson 85,173, Owen 56,675. The St. Paul Globe, the Democratic organ of Minnesota admits that Merriam is in the lead by 976 plurality, The Democrats elect three congressmen namely Harries in the first district, O. M. Hall in the third and Castle in the fourth. Lind Republican is re-elected in the second district and Halvorson alliance in the fifth. The alliance and democrats combined will have a majority of the legislature

The Alliance candidate for governor received over four thousand votes in this county out of a total vote of nearly six thousand, the ballance being nearly equally divided between Merriam and Wilson, The vote on Congressman being nearly the same as for governor. We do not doubt but that Governor Merriam's vote would have been much larger in the county if he had had any one working for his interests, The Republican state ticket was abandoned by chairman Stephens several weeks ago, and we do not know of any work being done for them the last two weeks of the campaign, Money was very freely spent the last week, but not for the Republican state ticket. The most of it was given to alliance men to work for Cromb for senator and P. McGuire for state Auditor. The returns show that it did very little good but a great deal of harm,

It is certain that the second constitutional amendment (in relation to railroad taxation) has been defeated by a very heavy vote. Returns now at hand show it received a minority vote everywhere. In not a single county was the vote in favor of ratification. It is also reasonably certain that the jury amendment will fail of the necessary two-thirds vote. Many counties cast more "yes" than "no" votes, but none of them has given it the necessary two-thirds.

The complexion of the Minnesota legislature is still in doubt, but the Republicans may have a small majority. The alliance hopes to secure the balance of power and they predict that the democratic strength will be large enough to give this to them.

The Democratic tidal wave has been far reaching and the list of former Republican states that went Democratic this fall is a large one. It includes Wisconsin both state ticket and legislative, Montana, legislature of Illinois, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Indiana, Kansas, and Nebraska. The Democrats are jubilant and claim that nothing can prevent a Democratic president in 1892. Reciprocity and James G. Blaine should be the Republican battle cry in 1892, and the Democrats would not know they were in the race.

The defeat of Congressman Comstock and the election of the alliance candidate Kettle Halvorson for congressman of this district is little short of a disgrace. Mr. Comstock was an able, honest hard-working man, who has done all in his power for his district. Little can be said in favor of Mr. Halvorson and it is not probable that he will be able to accomplish anything. Had Mr Halvorson been nominated by any party other than the alliance he would have been certain of defeat, but the average alliance voter seems to have voted his ticket straight regardless of personal fitness.

Oliver Dalrymple, the bonanza farmer of North Dakota, who probably raises more wheat than any other man in the world, says this country will have not more than forty million bushels of wheat for export this year, as an average of 183,000,000 bushels for the last ten years. He also says the country will be importing wheat in the next ten years. Mr Dalrymple said:

"The best official and other information discloses that the world's wheat acreage is not materially increasing and that the population is steadily increasing over production. During the last decade, eastern Europe including the great exporting countries of Russia Roumania and Hungary has but slightly increased its acreage; while western Europe, embracing the importing countries, has stood still or declined. Ten years ago the wheat acreage of the United States was about thirty-eight million acres, and the year 1890 finds it about the same figure. The United States has probably reached the western limit for profitable wheat production without irregation, beyond which her broad and fertile acres can be most profitably developed to the various live stock industries. The census of 1890 finds the United States increasing in population 15,000,000 people in ten years; consuming for bread, seed, etc., near 1,000,000 bushels of wheat a day, leaving from this crop only about 40,000,000 bushels of wheat for export, while the average production of the country for the last ten years is 445,000 000, and the average export for the last ten years is 183,000,000 bushels per annum. If the present ratio of increase of population over production continues for the next ten years the United States will be changed from an exporting to an importing wheat country. For the last ten years the grand average wheat crop of this country has approximated a yield of 12 bushels an acre. This year eastern Europe claims only an average wheat crop, and admits a serious deficiency in her rye crop, which is her great bread commodity; while eastern Europe has a short wheat crop. Reliable authorities estimate that the crops and reserves of Europe have so much declined that she will require 160 000,000 bushels of wheat from outside exporting countries from the crop and reserves of 1890 to supply her wants, As near as Can be estimated the average wheat crop of the United States for 1890 is almost 10½ bushels an acre: on say 38,000,000 acres or near 400,000,000 bhshels from which must come a total home consumption approximating to 360,000,000 bushels. India and Australia have short crops and the small exporting states of South America are yet to hear from. "A lessened production, nearly stationery acreage, with increasing population, tend to make the legitimate situation a strong one for producers and holders of wheat, and favor as high a range of prices for the crop of 1880 when uninfluenced by speculation as has been obtained for many years.

That Altered the Case.

"Say, do you see that girl?"

"Why, yes; she's a beauty, too."

"Well, you can just bet she is. I was engaged to her once."

Then there was silence for the space of two minutes, as the two men drew near and passed the pretty young woman. Then the young man in the box coat remarked:

"You didn't speak to each other. How is that?"

"Well, you see," explained the gentleman with the black mustache and gray hair, "it's a very peculiar story. Sounds like a romance, but it's true, every word of it. I met her two years ago down at Long Branch. She was the daughter of an old Russian count, who was reputed to be worth at least half a million. I fell dead in love with her, and she seemed to be very much attached to me. Well, you know Thompson? I invited him down to stay with me for a week or two. He came, of course. Never knew Thompson to refuse an invitation. He met the count's daughter. They fell in love with each other at first sight. He proposed after he'd known her three days, and she accepted him.

"Well, it made me mad. I knew the fellow only wanted the girl's money, so I put up a job on him. I told him that the count had failed, and that he wasn't worth a copper. As I expected, the blackguard went back to New York that night, and next day he wrote the girl a letter saying that he had been mistaken and asked to be released. The girl waxed indignant and sent him flying, and then I went to work and proposed myself. She accepted me. Well, all went on smoothly for a week when"——

"What happened then? Did you marry the girl?" asked the box coated gentleman.

"No-o. You see, at the end of the week the old count died, and when his accounts were looked up it was discovered that instead of having a half million to his credit he was in debt to the tune of $200,000. Of course, you see, after that I couldn't marry the girl very well, you know. Much as I can do to support myself."—New York Evening Sun.

Alexandre Dumas' Granddaughters.

Like Victor Hugo, Alexandre Dumas the elder is represented in the present generation by two grandchildren only. These are the two daughters of his illustrious son, Mme. Lippman and Mlle. Jeannine. The first named is a very gay, flirtatious dame, and bothers her father a good deal by her heedless friskiness of nature. There is not a particle of harm about her or her escapades, but as she is the daughter of the most famous dramatist of France her most innocent frolics are sure to be noted and commented upon.

Mlle. Jeannine, on the contrary, is quiet, reserved and studious. She is very plain, the negro type of complexion and feature being far more pronounced in her countenance than they are in that of Dumas himself. This is often the case with physical peculiarities, which will overleap one generation to come out in a marked form in another. Since the crisp, curly hair of Dumas turned gray he has entirely lost every vestige of his affiliation with the colored race. The elder Dumas, though he was only a quadroon, was as dark as a mulatto and showed his negro blood most unmistakably.—Cor. St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Famous Stage Family.

Georgie Drew Barrymore divides the honors of Crane's new play with the star. It is a remarkable sight to see this gifted woman doing her level best to satisfy her mother with her work, a woman who, at the age of nearly 70, is still bidding for the applause of the multitude with Jefferson and Florence. By the way, what a remarkable family the Drews are. Think of it, one night the mother was playing at the Fifth Avenue, her son John at Daly's, her son Sydney at one of the other swell theatres, and her eldest daughter is the talk of the town at the Star.

What is the best part of this singular run of talent is that it is all good, and that in the whole family there has not been a bad actor or bad actress. The mother is said to be very proud of her children, but to be a merciless critic of their acting whenever she has an opportunity of seeing it. But it is no secret that she is very proud of Mrs. Barrymore's work.—Cor. Philadelphia Times.

Bannocks Not the Only Food.

Some residents of North Saco got into a discussion as to whether the old fashioned bannock, made simply of Indian meal and hot water and baked before an open fire, was any better than the dishes of today. To settle the question, delegates from several families met at the parsonage, witnessed the baking of a bannock and tested the bread after it was done. The verdict was that the bannock was a success, but that there were other successes in life.—Lewiston Journal.

Hiram Darnell, of Jasper, Ga., had a bullet cut out of his back which had been there twenty-six years. It first went through his hand, then struck him on the cheek, cutting the flesh and coursing its way to the back of the neck, then down the back bone to a point nearly even with the lower part of the shoulder blade, where it lodged.

WHAT CURES?

Editorial Difference of Opinion on an Important Subject.

What is the force that ousts disease; and which is the most convenient apparatus for applying it? How far is the regular physician useful to us because we believe in him, and how far are his pills and powders and tonics only the material representatives of his personal influence on our health?

The regular doctors cure; the homœopathic doctors cure; the Hahnemannites cure; and so do the faith cures and mind cures, and the so-called Christian scientists, and the four-dollar-and-a-half advertising itinerants, and the patent medicine men. They all hit, and they all miss, and the great difference—one great difference—in the result is that when the regular doctors lose a patient no one grumbles, and when the irregular doctors lose one the community stands on end and howls.—Rochester Union and Advertiser.

Nature cures, but nature can be aided, hindered or defeated in the curative porcess. And the Commercial's contention is that it is the part of rational beings to seek and trust the advice of men of good character who have studied the human system and learned, as far as modern science lights the way, how far they can best avoid obstructing her.—Buffalo Commercial.

It is not our purpose to consider the evils that result from employing the unscrupulous, the ignorant, charlatans and quacks to prescribe for the maladies that afflict the human family. We simply declare that the physician who knows something is better than the physician who knows nothing, or very little indeed about the structure and the conditions of the human system. Of course "he does not know it all."—Rochester Morning Herald.

I have used Warner's Safe Cure and but for its timely use would have been, I verily believe, in my grave from what the doctors termed Bright's Disease.—D. F. Shriner, senior Editor Scioto Gazette, Chillicothe, Ohio, in a letter dated June 30, 1890.

Reminded of Johnny's Watch.

Mr. Hankinson (waiting for Miss Irene)—"That's a pretty little watch you carry, Johnny."

Johnny (temporarily entertaining Mr. Hankinson)—"Yes, Irene says she always thinks of you when she sees it."

(Highly pleased)—"Did she say that, Johnny?"

"Yep. That's what she said."

"Its—its—a—h'm!—a good, reliable kind of watch, isn't it, Johnny?"

"Nope. It doesn't go."

(Mr. Hankinson puts Johnny down, and thinks and thinks.)

It is very odd to see the white men in a car eagerly scan the face of a lady who enters, and who is unable to find a seat. If she is at all dark the chances are a seat will not be readily forthcoming. The men are staring at her, and as soon as they have concluded she has no African blood in her veins there will be more seats than she has need of. But if the verdict happens to be the other way she will not get a seat through the courtesy of her fellow passengers.

Floated, but Died.

The story of a fat man who fell overboard in New York harbor and floated around for an hour or two until he was mistaken for a whale and towed to shore unhurt has set the old watermen and wharfmen all agog with reminiscent talk. They tell peculiar tales of happenings to fat men which have occurred under their eye, and in which they took a part.

John McClain, the veteran watchman on the Thomas Clyde pier, above Chestnut, told a number of incidents concerning the floating tendencies of fat men.

During the war Mr. McClain was a night watchman on the piers at Washington avenue. One dark night a government receiving vessel came up the river, and when it neared the Washington pier two sailors jumped overboard to make their escape. One was a gigantic fellow and the other a man of medium size.

Before jumping overboard the fat man fastened $200 in double gold eagles in a leather belt which was strapped around his waist. He could not swim a stroke. When he touched the water he floundered around, but did not sink. Shortly afterward a tremendous swell carried him under the pier, where he was knocked senseless by the piling. When the body was found, several hours afterward, it was not at the bottom of the stream, but plump against the planks of the pier, with the head above the water. The man never sank, but was drowned while insensible. Superstitious sailors concluded that it was the gold that kept him on the top of the river.—Philadelphia Record.

A PROPHECY.

THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON.

From street and square, from hill and glen
Of this vast world beyond my door,
I hear the tread of marching men,
The patient armies of the poor

The halo of the city's lamps
Hangs, a vast torchlight, in the air;
I watch it through the evening damps;
The masters of the world are there.

Not ermine clad or clothed in state,
Their title-deeds not yet made plain,
But waking early, toiling late,
The heirs of all the earth remain.

Some day, by laws as fixed and fair
That guide their planets in their sweep,
The children of each outcast fair
The harvest fruits of time shall reap.

The peasant brain shall yet be wise,
The untamed pulse grow calm and still;
The blind shall see, the loyal rise,
And work in peace Time's wondrous will.

Some day, without a trumpet's call
This news will o'er the world be blown;
"The heritage comes back to all!
The myriad monarchs take their own!"

A MEXICAN ROMANCE.

A SUMMER'S sun saw a hunter clambering along a mountain side. More than six feet in height, his broad shoulders and well-proportioned figure made him seem much shorter, and his easy graceful movements evinced a control of every muscle that could come only from constant and active exercise. A long, reddish blonde beard covered his face which was bronzed by exposure almost to the color of his beard, and his long hair fell in waves upon his shoulders. His whole appearance was striking, yet the most striking feature was his piercing blue eyes, which seemed to look you through and through, and announced plainly that their owner could not shirk danger or hardship in whatever form it might come. His costume was that of a hunter and indicated—as did his small cap made of the skin of an animal even more strongly—that its purpose was to withstand a much colder climate than that which he was now experiencing. Upon his back was slung an old-fashioned muzzle-loaded rifle.

Pausing on the chest of a small hill, he glanced around him toward the distant line of hills, and then, turning his course in the course of their nearest point, he resumed his journey. He had gone but a short distance when he saw the first signs of life that had greeted him that day. As he passed over a slight rise in the ground he saw a large bullock standing on the slope of the hill. The animal saw him at the same moment, and turning toward him stood looking at the intruder. Soon several more appeared, regarding him attentively, and then the whole band began moving slowly across his path, about 100 yards in front of him. Pushing on his course he paid no attention to them, until they again attracted his attention by the peculiarity of their actions. The whole band of about 100 cattle were now in sight, and were circling around him with steadily increasing speed. It was evident that he was the object of their attention and he attempted to frighten them by shouting and waving his arms, but these efforts were without avail. On the contrary, the animals had drawn around him in a circle, and were now approaching nearer and nearer, drawing the circle tighter about him every moment.

He saw that it was practically impossible to break through their line, and yet to stand there and await their attack was certain death. Their long, sharp horns gleamed viciously in the sunlight. Glancing hastily around, he sought some tree or rock that might offer some shelter from their attack. But there was none within reach, nothing within the fatal circle to relieve the monotony of the shining, slippery grass. There was no time to be lost, for the circle was constantly growing smaller, and the animals becoming more and still more closely packed. Quick as thought he formed his plan of action. Unslinging his rifle, he prepared to shoot one of the animals in front of him, hoping in the confusion that would follow to break through the line and find shelter among some trees at the foot of the hill. Bringing the rifle to his shoulder, he prepared to make his single shot as effective as possible.

"Do not shoot! Por Dios hombre, do not shoot!"

The voice came from behind him, and he turned in surprise in that direction. His surprise was considerably increased when he saw a horse approaching at full speed, and upon his back a young girl, whose long black hair, loosened by her riding, was streaming out behind her, while she anxiously urged her horse onward. As he looked her horse dashed into the circle, and the nearest cattle were turned and headed down the hillside. With a dexterity that astonished him she "turned up" the herd, and soon had them all started down the hill after the leaders, and then halted her horse alongside of him.

The situation was an embarassing one for him, and for once in his life he felt uncomfortable and ill at ease. To require assistance in getting out of a bad scrape was no new experience, but to have the whole thing taken out of his hands, and to be rescued from his peril while he stood idly by was unpleasant; to have this done by a woman was humiliating. He stood looking at her awkwardly, while she sat shyly returning his glance. Indeed, she felt as uncomfortable as he, though he was too confused to notice it. Finally, he recovered himself sufficiently to speak.

"I have to thank you," he said. "They would probably have killed me." There was no trace in his voice of the excitement of the situation, from which he had just been rescued.

She looked at him curiously, for evidently his mode of address puzzled her.

"Where do you come from, senor?" she inquired at length.

The tone of uncertainty and the abruptness of the question discovered to him the fact of her embarrassment, and gave him that feeling of superiority that enabled him to regain his self-possession.

"From the Blue Mountains," he answered with a smile.

"The Blue Mountains?"

"Yes; you have not heard of them? They are not far away to the north here, many hundred miles. I have traveled alone for many months. Until now I have not seen a human being for weeks."

But how did you know we lived here."

"I did not know."

"Then why did you come?"

"I have traveled for pleasure, for curiosity. I wished to see this Southern country, where the sun burns you up. I am a King George man. You do not understand? I hunt and kill game for the Hudson Bay Company. But I have left them behind."

"I do not understand," she said simply, "where you are going?"

"I do not know. Anywhere. I am going now to those mountains," pointing to the distant line of hills.

"But you will first come with me? You must rest until it is cooler. Nobody travels here in the heat of the day; it would kill you. You must come and eat with us, and then we can give you a horse to continue your journey, and tell you how to go. Por misericordia Dios! Think of walking!"

"I thank you, no. I must go on."

"In the heat? You will die. You must come with me. The father and mother will welcome you. I wish you to come."

He looked at her closely for the first time, and then he wondered why he had not noticed her beauty before. She was dark, with that Spanish complexion through which the warm blood showed with a rich color, heightening the brilliancy of her lustrous black eyes, which lighted up her whole face with a tender, trusting expression. Her raven hair hung in masses upon her shoulders, and as she leaned forward with a confiding, entreating gesture, he though the had never seen so beautiful a woman.

"I will come," he said briefly, and as she turned her horse in the direction of her home he walked on by her side. So they journeyed in silence for a time.

"I must thank you for saving my life," he said at length. "They would surely have killed me, and you ran great risk yourself."

"If you had shot them I could not have turned them away," she answered. "They would have been angry. You should not have walked here; they do not attack one who rides, but when you walk they will kill you."

Before long they came in sight of the hacienda, a long, low adobe house upon a flat, with neither tree nor shrub near, but upon one side the steep spurs of the range of hills came almost to the house, forming deep canons.

The old folks received him kindly, listened gravely to the story of his adventure, and then showed him to an apartment in the house where he might rest until his meal was prepared. But he was in no mood to rest. The indolent Spanish customs suited him but ill, for he was unaccustomed to the heat of the weather and the habits that it necessitated. Besides his mind was far from easy. Afternoon shadows lengthened imperceptibly, and the sun was almost disappearing behind the distant hills when they sat down for the meal which Josefa had prepared some hours before. He became more and more interested in the girl, and it required but little pressing to persuade him to stay them that night. The next day he was even more reluctant to leave, and they seemed equally loth to have him, and so his stay was extended two or three days.

One evening as he stood with Josefa talking of anything that he might have the pleasure of her company, and wondering whether the moon ever shone so brightly or so beautifully before, she suddenly said to him, "Manuel is coming home tomorrow."

"Manuel! Who is Manuel?"

"Ah, you do not know him," she said. Then after a pause, as if reluctant, yet anxious to tell her secret, she added: "We are to be married; he is my lover, and I shall marry him next week. Oh, you should see Manuel! so handsome! not handsome like you are, but like a Spaniard. You must stay and see Manuel! I will show him the big, strong man I saved."

"It would no doubt entertain him." It was the tone rather than what he said that arrested her attention.

"Ah, I have hurt you n w," she said, laying her hand gently on his arm, as he turned away. "Forgive me; it was but a joke I intended. You are so good and strong I did not think.

"Forgive you, little woman? You could not offend me; I would give my life to make you happy." Then, as she looked at him in surprise at the earnest intensity of his speech, he added. "Have you not saved my life? And so you see it belongs to you. And you love Manuel very much?"

"Why, yes! Are we not to be married?"

"Then I am glad that you will be happy."

"And you will stay and see Manuel?"

"Yes, I will stay. Now I want to be left alone," he added abruptly, and she turned into the house murmuring to herself, "He is so strange I cannot understand. He is different, that's what it is; he is different." And with this somewhat obscure observation she was content.

But with the visitor it was far otherwise. As she disappeared from his view he strode out in the moonlight and paced up and down with quick, nervous stride. The bright moon cast a flood of silver light over the scene, but somehow the beauty seemed to have departed from it for ever, gentle breeze fanned his brow, but he was too agitated to feel its soothing effect.

"I might have known it," he muttered. "What am I, that I should hope to win such a prize? A wanderer, an outcast from my fellowmen, without a home that I might offer her. Fool, fool, that I was to have stayed here, when I might have known that she would have some lover among her own people. But what right has he to interfere? Stay to see him. Yes, I shall stay and I shall kill him."

The spark of disappointed love had fired all his passionate nature, and the angry flames were darting forth, consuming all sense of right and justice. He strode rapidly up and down, as if he would seek relief from his torture in bodily exhaustion. Suddenly he stopped short.

"Bah!" he exclaimed. "A fine thing this for a man like me to give up this way. To think that a gentle, timid creature like that should make me mad with pain! I have but to say 'it is over,' and I shall suffer no more."

But his will was weaker than his philosophy, and as he turned toward the house something very like a sob escaped him. He retired, weak and trembling, after his struggle with himself, but it was not to sleep. He was more calm, for his capacity for suffering had exhausted itself, and there was nothing but a dull feeling of despair.

He tossed about in a troubled, feverish sleep until daylight, and then rose and strode out into the open air. The atmosphere of the house seemed to stifle him; his old restless longing for an active life was upon him again, and he must be moving. "If I had not promised her to see this man," he murmured, "I would go now and be among the mountains once more. Nature is the only thing that's true, after all. Yet, why should I wait to see him? She would be disappointed and unhappy, but am I not unhappy? I shall go."

Nevertheless, in spite of his determination, he lingered on through the day and into the afternoon. The day was hotter than any he had ever experienced, but he did not mind the weather. The atmosphere became more smoky, until the sun shone through it with a lurid glare. Even the Spaniards felt prostrated by the unusual heat, and Josefa glanced anxiously toward the mouth of the canon through which the trail wound, by which Manuel was to return. He had gone across the mountains with a herd of cattle, his only companion being a Mexican vaquero, and he had been expected home that morning; but still he did not come.

Suddenly a low, distant rumbling was heard, and a sound as of a strong wind blowing through the trees. The rumbling increased in volume, and the earth began to sway with a sharp, quick motion that seemed to increase in force with each movement.

"El tembior!" exclaimed Josefa, springing forward with blanched cheeks. "And Manuel is in the canon! He will be killed, he will be killed!"

The few horses that were near the house were running wildly to and fro, and the cattle were bellowing, adding to the confusion of the moment. Josefa rushed forward, and securing her favorite horse was on his back and speeding toward the canon in a moment, despite his nervous and excited condition. The trapper rose and followed her as fast as he could, and as the trail in the canon was difficult for the horse, owing to the loosened boulders that had lodged across it and broken away in places, he overtook her before she had gone far.

"You must not come here," he cried. "The earthquake has loosened these boulders and has cracked the trail, so that it may give way with you at any moment. Go back, and if Manuel is in the canon I will find him and bring him safely to you.

"No, I must come," she said briefly, and on they went up the trail. They had not gone far when they came upon the object of their search. Manuel was lying in the trail beneath the immense boulder, which wedged between the bank and a small tree on the outer edge of the trail, rested upon his legs so that he could not move, though his arms and body were free.

Although he was not badly hurt, his position was a precarious one, for the boulder in striking the tree had loosened the roots and the whole trail at that point was likely to give way at any moment, plunging him a thousand feet down the precipice.

Keeping Josefa back from the dangerous point, he examined the situation thoroughly, and then shook his head gravely.

"There is but one way," he muttered to himself, "and anyway it will pay my debt. A life for a life is a fair turnabout." Then addressing Manuel, he said: "When, I tell you, push upward with your hand on the boulder, and crowd yourself as close to the inner wall as you can. Do you understand?"

"Yes," answered Manuel.

Stepping carefully over the crumbled earth he caught the small tree, and picked his way until he stood over the precipice.

"Now push with all your might," he cried, and giving himself a violent swing outward, he threw all his weight upon the tree. It trembled a moment, and then the roots tore themselves loose, and tree, boulder and man went crashing down the precipice.

Josefa, who had gone back around a bend in the trail, heard the crash, and stepping forward, saw Manuel lying upon the trail, released from the boulder but still lying upon the crumbling earth.

With a glad cry she rushed forward and helped him out of his peril. Then she looked around for his preserver. He was no where to be seen.

"Ah, he has gone," she said. "He said he would go when you came, and he has run away from us. But I have you now, Manuel, and I am so happy." Then with a little shudder, as she looked over the edge of the trail, at the seemingly bottomless abyss, "Suppose you had gone over there, Manuel. It would have been horrible!"

Davis was arrested.

David A. Greever, the wealthy cattleman, who was shot at Kansas City by Charles Clifford, the New York light-weight pugilist, has since died from the effect of his wound. Mrs. Clifford, over whom the quarrel was held, which resulted in Greever's death, has left the city. It is thought she may have concealed herself from fear of being charged with complicity in Greever's murder.

Richard P. Cammish, an Englishman, was made the victim of a brace of bunco steerers in New York. Cammish came to this country twelve years ago and drifting west finally settled at Bird Island, Minn. Recently he decided to pay a visit to his native heath, and with that end in view he started east and landed in Brooklyn. He made the acquaintance of a fine-looking man who, on pretense of changing a $1,000 bill, robbed him of $115.

William Denny, a prominent broker on the mining exchange, at Spokane Falls, committed suicide by blowing his brains out. Financial losses, it is said, induced the rash act. Denny was about fifty years of age, and was a pioneer of the Pacific Northwest. He went into Cœur d'Alene in the first rush, where he owned a large placer mine, and was once engaged in business at Deer Lodge, Mont. He leaves a wife and two married daughters in Deadwood, S. D.

About four years ago a stranger was murdered, robbed of $2,000 and thrown into Sugar Lake, just across the river from Atchison, Kansas, on the Missouri side. The affair was investigated, but no clue of the murderer was found. A telegraph operator named Tip Dale has made a confession that he was an accessory to the crime. The confession also implicates John Estes, the postmaster at Sugar Station, whom Dale says really did the killing. Both men have been placed under arrest.

Joseph Handenschield, driver for Schmidt's brewery, at Dubuque, Iowa, was returning from a trip in the country. He stopped at McDonald's saloon, four miles west of Dubuque, and there fell in with three young men, who asked for a ride to the city. Two of them got into his wagon, and the third jumped up on the seat with him. After driving a few rods the two in the rear commenced to fire revolvers and commanded him to halt. One of them shot the driver in the back and took his money bag containing $100. The robbers then jumped off the wagon and fled. Handenschield is seriously injured.

James Baker, convicted recently of attempted burglary, made a desperate attempt to escape from jail at Helena. Sheriff Jeffries was about to take Baker and two other convicts to the penitentiary at Deer Lodge. Entering Baker's cell, he handed the man a clean suit of clothes, and told him to put them on. Baker refused and the sheriff began remonstrating with him. Baker sprang at Jeffries and struck the officer a terrible blow in the face, knocking him down. The convict made for the door, but the sheriff, though nearly blinded by the blow, drew his revolver and covered the prisoner, who then submitted tamely. Jeffries was badly though not seriously hurt.

The Democratic celebration at Fairmount, Indiana, over the results of the recent election was made the occasion of a bloody riot While the procession was moving along the principal streets a negro of huge proportions ran into the procession, brandishing a club and a revolver, and commenced firing and knocking right and left. Al Powell a teamster, who was walking in the procession, was shot and instantly killed. The colored man who started the riot and whose name cannot be ascertained, was shot twice in the back after he had killed Powell and placed under arrest. He was taken away with a mob howling at his heels and reports from Fairmount are that there is a good prospect for lynching.

Altogether the show was a capital one.

CITIZENS ALARMED.

Citizens of Mandan Preparing for an Outbreak of the Indians.

They Petition Gov. Miller for Arms and Ammunition.

MANDAN, N. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—No citizens were ever more in earnest than those at a public meeting to-night, called by the mayor.

All day the entire community has been terrorized. Settlers from every direction have come in reporting insults they have received from predatory bands of Indians who are armed to the teeth, and who make circles around their heads, indicating that some scalping is to be done.

Little consolation is to be had from the citizens of Mandan. They are unarmed and practically helpless against an attack of any force of Indians equipped as they are with the most approved weapons.

To-night two Indians went into a hardware store and called for some ammunition. The storekeeper asked one what he wanted it for, and he told him he wanted it to kill whites, and drew a circle about the top of his head, as he said so, indicating that they were after scalps.

Joseph Ardron comes in from ten miles northwest and states that six Indians camped there this morning, and he told them to be careful of fire. They told him to mind his own business, ominously tapped their guns, showed their ammunition and encircled their heads. The same camp was in town this afternoon, and they told a friendly Sioux who lives here that they belonged to the army of the Messiah; they were going down to meet the rest of the army, and they were coming back to take Fort Lincoln and then to burn and pillage Mandan and kill the inhabitants. They said the Messiah would lead the army, and they did not expect to go out till spring, but when he said go, they would go, even if it was in the depth of winter. They said they believed they were the chosen people of the Messiah. The whites are intruders, and the entire country west of the Missouri belonged to them and the buffalo, and when the whites were killed they would own it all.

These and all other Indians journeying through the country are armed in an extraordinary way, and loaded down with ammunition, but of late they have been insolent, morose and sullen. They will not show passes they are supposed to have from the Indian agency. Nothing but the immediate appearance of troops will prevent an uprising, in the judgment of all old Indian soldiers.

The utmost tension prevails here, as it is impossible to hear from Standing Rock as to the situation there, or from the East to learn what is being done about the movement of troops. Half the population believes that troops will come when the people have all been killed and scalped.

A large number of women and children left on to-night's train for Bismarck and other points east of the Missouri. Supt. Mellen, of the Northern Pacific, has been telegraphed to by citizens urging him to do all he can to urge the military department to take immediate action.

To-night a rumor was reported to have come via Bismarck from Standing Rock that a large body of warriors had left Standing Rock headed for the Northern Pacific. It is impossible to get a confirmation or denial of the rumor. Efforts have been made to telegraph Maj. McLaughlin at Yates, and messages have been delivered to him, but no reply can be had.

At a public meeting to-night a committee was appointed to employ men to ride down to Cannon Ball river, procure information and give warning of danger. Gov. Miller wires that arms and ammunition will be shipped from Bismarck on the first train. A telegram to-night from Maj. McLaughlin at Standing Rock says he believes there is no immediate reason for alarm.

A man named Fred Clark was accidentally shot at the meeting to-night. It is feared he will die.

CALL FOR ARMS.

Citizens of Mandan Ask for Means of Defense.

CASSELTON, N. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—Gov. Miller is here and is keeping the wires hot between here and Bismarck. He is receiving dispatches from the capital which are somewhat alarming. People of Mandan call for arms and ammunition, and say that an attack by the Indians may be looked for at any moment. Roving bands of armed and painted warriors are roaming the prairies, and settlers are leaving farms and ranches. It is very likely that the state militia will be called out. The governor leaves on the early morning train for Bismarck. There is much excitement and alarm all along the line of the Northern Pacific.

READY TO FIGHT.

Companies at Fort Russell, Wyo., Prepared to Take the Field.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—Seven of the eight companies of the Seventeenth infantry stationed at Fort Russell, three miles from this town, have been ordered to be in readiness to take the field against against Northern Indians at a moment's notice. The order was received at 9:20 p. m., and in thirty-five minutes Gen. Mizener, the commandant, had his men ready to proceed. So far as can be learned, there is no trouble with the 2,000 Indians in Wyoming, but the Messiah agitation has been worked among them for months.

Coming to the Rescue.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Three leading Scotch banks have subscribed £250,000 each for the Baring guarantee fund. A committee of leading financial houses has been formed to investigate the condition of the Argentine Republic's finances. There is an unconfirmed rumor that the Argentine financial agency will be transferred from the Barings to the Rothschilds, in which case the debt of the republic will be reconstructed and consolidated. Country bankers are drawing large sums from London, causing a continued pressure on the Bank of England. The third installment of £1,000,000 has not yet arrived from Paris.

NO DANGER OF TROUBLE.

A Telegram From Gen. Schofield, Now in South Dakota.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—A telegram from Gen. Miles was received this morning by Maj. Gen. Schofield, saying that there seems to be no danger of trouble with the Indians at the Rosebud and other agencies. The Indians remain restless, however, and are exciting themselves by frequent war dances and are still looking for the coming of the Messiah, who is to exterminate the white man. The Indian prophets are doing everything to stimulate the excitement.

The failure of the Messiah, however, to appear on specified dates, has had a somewhat depressing effect upon their efforts. Now it is predicted that he will appear in December—a date not definitely fixed, in view of recent failures of accurate prediction. Gen. Miles believes that when the next failure is recorded the influence of the prophets upon the Indians, already badly shaken, will be substantially destroyed.

He is certain that there is no danger of trouble this winter, but if the present spirit of restlessness and the agitation is continued next spring may witness an outbreak. Every precaution has been made by the military authorities to promptly suppress an outbreak if it should occur. Troops in adequate numbers have been stationed at points of threatened trouble, and Gen. Ruger's visit has had a salutary effect upon the Indians.

TOO HUNGRY TO FIGHT.

Col. Corbin's Opinion of the Condition of the Indians.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Gen. Miles, accompanied by Assistant Adjutant General Corbin, returned from St. Louis this morning. Gen. Miles was in consultation with Secretary of War Proctor about the alleged Indian outbreak in the Northwest. Col. Corbin said:

We are disposed to regard the reports as greatly exaggerated, and the secretary of war appears to be of the same mind. There is no doubt if the Indians were to decide upon an outbreak they could do much harm. They have abundance of rifles and ammunition, and plenty of horses and large supplies of meat. In fact, they are in good condition to go to war. But winter is now coming on, and I hardly think there is immediate danger of an outbreak.

The stories of evacuation of the settlers in North Dakota are overdrawn. A few weak and fearful residents, fearing the vengeance of the redskins, may have left their homes to await the outcome of the difficulty, but the rumor that there has been a wholesale evacuation is absolutely without foundation. We have made a careful estimate of the number afflicted by the Messiah craze, and there are in all not to exceed 31,000 Indians. Of this number perhaps one-fifth are able-bodied warriors, and one-half of the whole number, or at least 15,000, could bear arms. Such a body of Indians could do much harm if their movements were not properly arrested, but we have taken measures to intercept any outbreak.

Gen. Ruger was ordered to the scene from St. Paul three days ago, and is in easy communication with reinforcements. The Indians will not fight because they are hungry, for they are well supplied by the government, but if they do get to war it will be on account of the strange superstition that now possesses them.

VERY SERIOUS.

Gen. Miles' Opinion of the Indian Situation.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Gen. Nelson A. Miles, whose department embraces the territory throughout which the Messiah-crazed Indians are scattered, made this reply to questions to-night:

It would be unwise to say anything at this time. Anything I might say would be telegraphed all over the country and to-morrow would be in the Indian camps. The Indians no longer depend upon runners to take their news from camp to camp. They utilize the mails and keep posted with regard to current events affecting their interests. I have nothing to say beyond the fact that the situation is very serious, and that there is reason for grave apprehension of trouble with the Indians of the plains between the Missouri river and the mountains."

"In what locality is the disaffection gravest?"

"It is not graver in one place than in others, but is serious among all the different Sioux camps, numbering 27,000 men, the Arapahoes, Cheyennes, Shoshones and the Comanches."

"Can you say anything of your consultation with Secretary Proctor as to the steps necessary to be taken by the government?"

"Certainly not; that is just the matter about which it would be most imprudent to speak."

PREPARING FOR A FIGHT.

Fargo's Militia Notified to Be Ready to Go to Bismarck.

FARGO, Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—Sheriff Bingenheimer of Morton county wired to Marshal Price this evening that he had asked aid of the governor to protect settlers in the southern part of Morton county. It is understood that Adjt. Gen. Devoy of Grand Forks has been ordered to the scene of the trouble, and the local militia company has been notified to embark for Bismarck at an hour's notice. No acts of hostility are reported, but settlers fear for their lives and property.

The Revenue Marine.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Capt. Sheppard, chief of the revenue marine division, has made a report to the secretary of the treasury of the operations of that service during the last fiscal year, from which it appears that the thirty-six vessels in commission traversed 288,112 nautical miles and boarded and examined 23,161 vessels, of which number 915 were found to have violated the law and to have incurred fines and penalties amounting to $306,616. Eighty distressed vessels were assisted, the value of which, together with their cargoes, amounted to $2,500,000. Forty-three persons were rescued from drowning and 811 were assisted in other ways. The expenditures on account of the service were $937,033. The report says that unless the present fleet is enlarged it will gradually become debilitated.

Lawyers From Minnesota.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—E. D. Childs, assistant attorney general of Minnesota, and Charles Bunn of St. Paul were admitted to practice before the supreme court of the United States to-day. Mr. Childs is here to argue the validity of the John Day Smith execution law, the constitutionality of which is pending before the supreme court in the case of Clifford Holden, under sentence for murder. C. O. Wilson of Rochester is representing the defense, and will argue the case against the state. The claim set up is that the provisions of the law relating to the solitary confinement of a convicted prisoner are ex-post facto in Holden's case, as the crime for which he is sentenced was committed prior to the passage of the law. Mr. Bunn has a motion to argue before the court.

His Back Broken.

ST. CLOUD, Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—Edwin McGowan, a young man hurt at Stayles, Minn., and who was brought here to the hospital for treatment, died to-day. His back was broken.

Tegucigalpa, Nov. 16.—Sanchez revolved with the garrison at the capital. He surrendered to-day. Order re-established, and complete peace prevails.

WITHOUT WARNING

A Freight Train Percipitated into the Kaw River at Kansas City.

Four Men Known to Have Been Killed and Four More Escape.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 18.—Early this morning a freight train of six cars and an engine of the Kansas City, Wyandotte & Northwestern, just entering the city from Beatrice, Neb., plunged through a bridge and down into the muddy depths of the Kaw river near its mouth in Kansas City, Kan.

No one knows yet how many persons were on board, but there may have been anywhere from a dozen up to thirty, and so far as the names are known of those rescued the list of saved comprise only four members of the train crew and one or two colored men who were riding across the bridge. The list of the killed so far as known is as follows:

FRED ALLEN, fireman, Lawrence, Kan.
HENRY COLEMAN.
WILL CRAWFORD.
HENRY WILLIAMS.

The last three were from Kansas City, Kan. They were employes of Armour's packing house and were riding to their work. The injured:

Christian Patch, engineer, Kansas City, Kan. cuts and bruises on left leg, jaw fractured and cut across forehead.

Thomas Mulligan, brakeman, Lawrence, Kan.; bruises about body; cut across forehead.

S. V. Smith, Latham, Kan., stock man; badly bruised about the body and legs.

L. Latimore (colored), Kansas City, Kan.; three ribs broken.

The following list of names of missing is furnished by Armour's. All these were seen to get aboard the ill-fated train, and, as they have neither put in an appearance at their working places, nor have returned home, it is feared that they are among the lost: Ralph Fay, Fred Bell, Ed Burke, Frank Wall, Dave Brown. All of the above are employed at Armour's.

Three tramps who boarded the train several stations up the road are also missing. All the missing are supposed to have been killed, and their bodies are now probably confined in the wreckage.

All of the missing men were found to-night at their homes except the three tramps. In an interview to-night the engineer said he saw them disembark from the train at the first station the other side of the bridge.

WITHOUT FOUNDATION.

Denial of the Report Regarding the Argentine Agency.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Times, in its financial article, declares that the statement that the Argentine agency will be transferred to the Rothschilds is without foundation.

The Times learns that Russia has given notice to the Barings of the withdrawal in three instalments of £1,500,000 of Russian funds, the first instalment to be due about the middle of December and the second in January. The whole of Russia's deposit of £2,440,000 is therefore still with the Barings. The latter decided to ask for assistance, not on account of Russia's action, but on a review of the whole position.

At a meeting of joint stock bankers at the Bank of England, the governor of the latter institution in a letter promised assistance wherever justifiable and needed. In view of the pinch through the country, bankers are withdrawing their balances. The meeting of country bankers to be held shortly will probably tend to allay the inner current of anxiety.

The Barings' share in the Buenos Ayres water and drainage syndicate is £1,400,000. Their responsibility also extends to the liabilities of other members of the syndicate in the event of their failure to meet their engagements. The report that a meeting has been held at which a scheme was devised to prop up Argentine credit is declared to be untrue.

NOT A COMBINATION.

No Truth in the Rumor Regarding Mississippi Valley Lumbermen.

EAU CLAIRE, Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—Lumbermen here are astounded to learn from sensational articles with scare heads in Burlington (Iowa) papers that a gigantic trust has been formed in the Mississippi valley which is to concentrate its operations at Eau Claire, and from this point supply Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, the Dakotas and Kansas, put up the price of lumber to extravagant figures, and cause all the saw mills on the Mississippi below Eau Claire to shut down or be removed to Eau Claire.

The cause of all this furore is that the Eau Claire lumbermen have succeeded in bringing nearly to a crisis their long struggle for adjustment of freight differentials from Eau Claire to Missouri river points, and there is reason to believe the interstate commerce commission will act favorably to Eau Claire and give the lumbermen of Chippewa valley a fair and equal chance at the Southwestern markets.

There is no gigantic combination here, as stated. The only combination has been one to raise money and hire attorneys to get the matter before the commission, and the down-river lumbermen did the same thing on their own behalf at their meeting at Keokuk last Friday.

Sentenced to Death.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 18.—The trial of the nihilists who were accused of being implicated in a plot against the czar concluded to-day. Sophie Guengburg, one of the prisoners, who was arrested here after her trial in Paris, in which city she was arrested for having bombs in her possession, together with two of her accomplices named Stoilanofsky and Freifeld, were found guilty and condemned to be hanged. The court, however, recommended that the czar remit the sentence of death against Stoilanofsky and that they be banished to Siberia. The czar has refused to extend clemency to Lena Simonsky, the woman condemned to death, for taking part in a nihilist conspiracy against the life of Gen. Kuropatkin.

Won in Two Rounds.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Billy Dacey of this city and Joe Williams of Baltimore, who were matched several weeks ago to fight a prize fight to a finish with skin-tight gloves for a stake of $250 a side and a purse of $500, met to-night at Coney Island. Dacey won in two rounds.

A Prohibitive Tariff.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 18.—The decisions of the tariff committee so increase the restrictions on commerce as to threaten to isolate Russian trade from the rest of the world. Even farming machinery is subject to a high tariff.

World's Fair Site.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—At a joint conference to-day a resolution was adopted asking for the unrestricted use of Washington Park for world's fair purposes. The local directory held a separate meeting and resolved to recommend that all the buildings be placed on the lake front. The matter will probably be settled to-morrow.

REMANDED FOR TRIAL.

Forger Smith Must Stand a Trial for His Wrong Doing.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The assignment of Wells, Robeson & Smith, which was brought about by the forgeries of the junior partner, was formally filed in the county clerk's office to-day. Albert H. Smith, the guilty member of the firm, was arraigned in a police court and remanded until to-morrow.

Inspector Byrnes to-night furnished a full list of the number of shares of "raised" stocks upon which Albert H. Smith hypothecated with the brokerage firm of Mills, Robeson & Smith and by them deposited with other institutions. The list is as follows:

CANADA BESTING US.

At Least That Is the Opinion of the Secretary of State.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—It is said that Secretary Blaine is not altogether pleased with the manner in which the Canadian government is conducting itself regarding the various matters that the two countries are interested in.

The seal fisheries is one of the most difficult problems that the state department has to consider, and as it is shown that the Canadian poachers have secured about twice as many seals as the authorized company which secured the sealing privileges of the Alaskan islands, there is talk that this company will throw up its contract and demand restitution from the United States.

Secretary Blaine has also encountered some opposition from the Canadians in the negotiations he has had with the South American and West Indian governments relative to reciprocity. Agents have been traveling through the West Indian islands and South American countries offering reciprocity advantages to them in exchange for the goods produced by the Canadian farmers. These two diplomatic difficulties have agitated the secretary and they explain the reasons why he gave voice to the opinions relative to the advantages which Canadian railroads secured from the United States in the matter of shipment of goods in bond to and from this country at the hearing before Secretary Windom last week.

Secretary Blaine is understood to believe that Canada, through the railroad connections and by the warship bluff in Behring sea, is getting the best of the United States.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

Miss Willard and the Other W. C. T. U. Officers Again Chosen.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 18.—The W. C. T. U. at to-day's session devoted the morning hours to hearing reports of the superintendents of different departments. Then came the election of officers, which resulted in the re-election of all the old officers, as follows:

President, Frances E. Willard; Mrs. Caroline E. Buell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, recording secretary; Miss Pugh, treasurer.

Resolutions endorsing Senator Blair and urging his re-election were introduced and created a little excitement. An effort was made to have that part referring to his re-election stricken out and there was an animated discussion. Finally the matter went to the committee on resolutions.

The board of trustees of what is known as the Asheville assembly met to-day and accepted the donation of Mr. Miller of Skylands of twenty acres of land adjoining the Vanderbilt property at Asheville, upon which a large temperance tabernacle is to be erected.

Miss Willard is confined to her hotel by illness, and prayers for her recovery were delivered to-day. An interesting feature was the address of Mrs. Maud Balington Booth, fraternal delegate from the Salvation Army. This evening receptions were tendered the delegates at the governor's mansion and at Good Templars' hall.

STRUCK A SNAG.

La Blanche Defeated by a Local Fugilist at Butte, Mont.

BUTTE, Mont., Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—La Blanche, middle-weight champion of America, was defeated in a glove fight this afternoon with George Kessler, a local pugilist. Kessler is a total abstainer, and when not training for a go is working at his trade, telegraph lineman.

La Blanche came here about a week ago from the coast. This town is nearly a mile above sea level, and this season smelter smoke prevails. La Blanche was unacclimated and was not trained a particle. Kessler was in the pink of condition and is thoroughly acclimated.

La Blanche thought he had a picnic and had only to go in and win. He found out his mistake. Kessler was more than his match under these conditions. No bets could be got on La Blanche before the fight. Afterwards his backers offered to back Kessler against him again. The match was for fifteen rounds, Queensbury rules, four-ounce gloves. No severe punishment took place on either side. La Blanche soon became winded. The fight was going against him, he had no show, and in the thirteenth round he deliberately fouled. Kessler wanted to go on to a finish, but La Blanche refused.

A Tailor Shop Burglarized.

WEST SUPERIOR, Special Telegram, Nov. 18.—The tailoring establishment of A. Weinstein, on Tower avenue between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, was entered by burglars via the front door and $300 worth of goods were carried away with them. Included among the articles taken were fourteen pairs of trousers.

Killed in a Questionable Resort.

RHINELANDER, Wis., Nov. 18.—Alex McBean shot and killed Felix Taylor in a disreputable resort near here. McBean escaped to the woods, but afterwards delivered himself up to the sheriff.

CONCERNING SHOES.

Materials Used and the Hard Wear Some Withstand.

The calfskin is one of the most delicate of leather fabrics. Light shoes of this material on the feet of heavy men are often subjected to a strain to which they are unequal. One cause of leather cracking is perspiration. Skins are finished flesh side out and always begin to give way from the grain side, which is next to the foot, and perspiration rots leather and linings very quickly.

Glazed kid is the material of which most fine shoes for women's wear are made. The alum-tanned is preferred. Alum is a preservative, and leather produced with it can hardly be called tanned—it is tawed. If the skins are overlimed, or if the ingredients are not properly mixed, the finished article is liable to crack when made up. The prespiration affects it somewhat, for the leather will soften, and then, when dry, it hardens and breaks. Shoes made from kid won't stand wet weather or mud without either breaking or losing their gloss. Retailers should impress on their customers that kid shoes are to be used tenderly and carefully. The old sumac tannage, pebbles, straight grain, etc., have about gone out of fashion. Some of them are still used, and they are not liable to break.

Grain and imitation goat is very reliable stock. If the former cracks it is because it is too dry or stuffed improperly. Imitation goat, if properly tanned and dressed, is a good wear-resister. The people who buy shoes made from this class of stock are not apt to take pairs a size or so too small for them, and that is another reason why they are less likely to crack. Careless tanning will cause waxed upper and kip to break when in the shoe. If worn in muddy or clay mixed soil, they should be oiled at least once a week and before being dampened.

The custom of stretching shoes is objectionable. A pair may be stretched for length, if too short, or for the width, if too tight. If too closely drawn over the instep, there is an instrument which will give the necessary expansion, but doing so breaks the fiber and weakens the part so treated, and thus impairs the wearing qualities of the shoes.

There is much complaint of the lack of duration in children's shoes. The little folk are restless and paddle in every clay and mud bank they can get at. If a house is being built they will go out of their way to get into the lime or plaster beds. Their shoes may get washed off and dried, but the "life" is all gone out of the leather, and it can be torn like paper.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

She Got His Autograph.

I was in government employ at Fort Smith when a half-breed named Hickett was condemned for murder and sentenced to be hanged. About two weeks before the date of the hanging a party of St. Louis people came that way. Among them was a lone female about fifty years of age, who was greatly concerned about the salvation of the Indian race. When she learned that Hickett was to swing she sent him a Testament and some tracts, and a day later came to him and said:

"It has struck me that I would like the poor man's autograph. Would you be kind enough to hand him this album and ask him to write his name?"

I, of course, agreed to do so. It was a very fine album, costing not less than $10 or $12, and every page was still blank. I passed it in to Hickett and told him what was wanted. He called for me in about two hours and handed the album, neatly wrapped up. I sent it over to the hotel, and fifteen minutes later the lone woman brought it back with eyes rolling in horror. Hickett had written on every page, and he had written: "Going to hell July 28, 1867. Yours truly, and may we meet together there, Jim Hickett."—New York Sun.

Fair Philosophy.

On the Pacific coast they are telling the following story on ex-Senator Fair, who now regularly attends Grace Episcopal church, San Francisco: On a certain Sunday one of his boys went to church, and when he returned the genial ex-senator inquired what the sermon was about. "Well," replied the lad, "one of the things that struck me was the way in which the preacher went for us wealthy people. He said that when the Savior was looking about him for disciples, he went among the poor and lowly and took his followers from among them. Christ, the preacher said, had no rich men among his twelve apostles." "Mebbe the rich men wouldn't serve, my son," remarked the ex-senator, patting with kindly hand the curly head of the boy. "Mebbe they wouldn't serve because they were too busy. Even your father couldn't spare the time to be an apostle, with stocks bobbin' up and down as they are now and some of the best mines on the coast not pannin' out worth a cent."—New York Tribune.

The Old Man Did It

Miss Gushington—And so you were born in the country, Mr. Plowboy; how you must have enjoyed the game of hiding in the barn when you were a boy.

Mr. Plowboy—Well, no, I can't say I enjoyed it very much. You see, father did the hiding and all I could do was jump and yell.—Munsey's Weekly.

We publish this week the call for an immigration convention to be held at Stephen, Minn., Nov. 26. This is a move in the right direction and should receive the hearty support of all. This part of the country has been badly neglected for several years past and with a little good work the tide of immigration can be stopped here instead of finding homes farther west.

WHAT THE FARMERS ARE DOING.

D. R. McGinnis, of the Great Northern railroad, is our authority for the following illustration of what farmers can do in the Red River Valley. He was in Warren, Minn., this week. While in the bank there a farmer came in and asked: "What is the amount of my mortgage?" Getting a reply he said: "Here is the money.

Mr. McGinnis engaged the man in conversation, and got the following from him,

"I commenced here ten years ago, had no money, but a good wife and three babies, and a pair of oxen. Now I don't owe a cent, and have a farm and stock worth $7,000, easy."

The banker said others were paying mortgages every day. To convince himself further of the measure of success of Red River Valley farming, Mr. McGinnis pursued his investigations speaking to the first ten men he found, not singling out individuals, and the most money any one of them brought was $20 and the least any of them is worth today above all debts, is $3,000. Some of them complained that they did not get 40 bushels of wheat per acre, but no one cared to look for a better country.—Grand Forks Plaindealer.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Lieut Col. Sumner, of the Eighth cavalry, left here tonight under orders to proceed immediately to Ft. Meade, Dak., to assume entire charge of the troops there and to move into the hostile Sioux country to settle accounts with the uprising savages under their messiah. The interior department has turned the entire matter over to the war department. Troops at Forts Sully, Robinson and Laramie are ordered to be in readiness to join Col. Sumner, and if the Indians do not immediately return to their tepees and submit to the duly constituted authorities there will be a brief but decisive war which will settle the Sioux Indian problem forever. All of the braves including their messiah, will meet their fate if they do not submit. There will be no temporizing with them. Col. Sumner is an old Indian fighter, who believes that only dead Indians are good indians.—Dispatch.

TO ENCOURAGE IMMIGRATION.

FOR THIS PURPOSE A CONVENTION IS CALLED AT STEPHEN, NOVEMBER 26TH.

In view of the fact that the Red River Valley and Northern Minnesota are today among the most prosperous grain and stock raising regions of the United States, and that they are now enjoying success superior to that of any other section, and that, notwithstanding it is generally supposed in the east that our climate is unhealthy and severe, and that our section has been subjected to a succession of crop failures—the contrary being the case. And now in view of these false impressions, and of the fact that other sections inferior in every respect, in climate, resources and productions are making strenuous efforts to divert and retain eastern immigration and eastern capital to their localities, it is not only our duty but a matter of justice to ourselves that we take measures to secure our rightful share of the influx of home seekers and capital from the east, which will not only populate our unoccupied lands but enhance the value of real estate already occupied. Everyone interested in the prosperity and advancement of our common interests is eligible to participate in the proceedings of the convention, the object of which is to organize the counties of Polk, Marshall and Kittson to carry on immigration work jointly between them. Stephen has been chosen as the best point to hold the convention as this will enable Polk and Marshall county participants to go on the Great Northern morning train returning to their homes on the evening of the same day, while it will be easily accessible to the participants from Kittson county by team. You are earnestly requested to attend yourself and to use your best effort to induce others interested in our common welfare to attend,

M. R. Brown, Polk Co.
L. Loughridge, Marshall Co.
A. W. Donaldson, Kittson Co.

Troy Times: This is the Republican idea: Encourage in every reasonable way the growth of home industries and then give free entry to the things not productible in the United States in return for new markets. The Democratic idea is to discourage home industries by putting them in competition with the cheap labor of Europe, and then to beg for American goods, instead of demanding them as a right which this country is prepared to enforce.

The Sioux Indians of Dakota are stirring up considerable trouble lately. They claim that their messiah has come who will kill all the whites and bring back to life all dead Indians and that the country will again be full of buffalo and game. Troops have been sent to their reservation as a serious outbreak is feared. Sitting Bull is a prominent factor in the trouble.

S. M. Hoff has put in a new and complete tin shop and has employed a practical tinner. If you want any work done in this line give them a call.

The election of a Democratic congress seems to have had a bad effect on the country and they came very near having a panic in New York last week and securities of all kinds sold lower than they have for years.

Washington, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—It is said that Mr. Blaine is at work perfecting his plans for reciprocity, which when made public, as it probably will be before congress meets, will give the leaders of the Republican party some things to relieve them from the depressing effect of the election. He is reticent but as the world knows his earnestness when he takes hold of a thing, it is predicted that recommendations will reinvigorate and give fresh impulse to those of his party who attribute the late political disaster to the McKinley bill. A prominent Republican said to your correspondent today:

"As Mr. Reed has seen fit to unfavorably comment on Mr. Blaine's policy relative to the tariff law, asserting that it did the Republican party more injury than anything else, Mr. Blaine may yet prove to all thinking persons that if it had not been for his reciprocal ideas scattered here and there as saving clauses in that law, the party would have lost the United States Senate as the house in the last struggle. If Mr. Blaine succeeds in his grand scheme of his, and this becomes the chief instrument in restoring public confidence in the Republican party, his popularity will be greater than ever and there will be no such thing as successfully resisting his nomination for the presidency by acclamation in the next Republican national convention."—Tribune.

Early Life of a Philadelphia Astronomer.

David Rittenhouse was born in Roxborough township, near Germantown, Pa., April 8, 1732, and died in Philadelphia, June 26, 1796. He was descended from a family of paper makers residing at Arnheim, Guelderland. His great grandfather, William Rittenhouse, a Mennonite preacher, came from Holland with his family in 1687-88, was the first Mennonite minister in Pennsylvania, and established the first paper mill in this country at the spot where David was born.

David was early put to work on the farm, and was plowing at 14 years of age. An uncle dying had left him a chest of tools and a few books on arithmetic and geometry, with some manuscript mathematical calculations. These furnished palatable food to his mind, and his biographers tell of his having covered the handle of his plow and the fences around the field with his workings of the problems which they set before him.

As the uncle mentioned above was his mother's brother, it is inferred that he inherited his genius from his mother's side. His mechanical talent was shown in his construction of a complete water wheel in miniature when 8 years old, a wooden clock when 17, and a clock with metallic works at a later age. His father was not disposed at first to favor the youth's tastes, but eventually he furnished him with money enough to buy a set of clock making tools; and David built a workshop at Norriton, whither the family had removed, where he carried on the clock making business for several years.—Popular Science.

The Mystery of the Senate Gavel.

The vice president's gavel is of itself a standing evidence that the senate is an orderly body and needs no schoolmaster for a presiding officer to compel quiet. The gavel has no handle. It never did have any. It is simply a little piece of white ivory like the head of a gavel, polished and shining. It would not do in the house at all, for the most that can be done with it is to give a gentle rapping on the desk, and in the other wing the speaker sometimes needs to hammer away like a man with a beetle.

This senate gavel, with which the vice president tells the senators that they are making too much noise, has been in existence and in use as a gavel for many years. It is the identical one, it is said, which was in use when Daniel Webster was in the senate, and probably was used the day he made his reply to Hayne, to still the buzz in the gallery when the great man sat down.

There is a mystery about the gavel, too. Nobody but Captain Bassett, the white haired door keeper, knows what becomes of it during the recess and when congress is not in session. The venerable old Captain Bassett takes it from the vice president's desk when the senate adjourns and hides it somewhere, and it is lost to the world until it is again needed by the vice president.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

McCartney, the Prodigy of Memory.

Prof. Henkle makes mention of a remarkable character whom he met at Salem, Mass., in 1859, Daniel McCartney by name. McCartney was 51 years of age at that time, but proved to the satisfaction of Mr. Henkle that he could remember where he had been, the state of the weather, etc., for each day and hour since he was 9 years old; dates covering a period of forty-two years! These remarkable feats were proved and verified by weather records and newspaper files kept in the city, and of the hundreds of tests resorted to to try his powers he never failed of proving himself a wonder of wonders in a single instance. This prodigy of memory worked at the Salem Republican office, and naturally one would think him able to furnish brains for half a dozen papers, but, on the contrary, they could make no use of him whatever, except to turn the press twice each week.—Journal of Speculative Philosophy.

Speed of Animals.

In respect to the comparative speed of animated beings [illegible] remarked that neither size nor comparative strength seems to have much influence. The sloth is by no means a small animal, and yet it can only travel fifty paces in a day; a worm crawls only five inches in fifty seconds; but a lady bird can fly twenty million times its own length in less than an hour. An elk can run a mile in seven minutes; an antelope can run a mile in a minute; the wind mule of Tartary has a speed even greater than that; and an eagle can fly fifty-[illegible] miles in an hour; while a canary falcon can even reach seven hundred and fifty miles in the short space of sixteen hours.—New York Telegram.

She Spoke Right Out.

Mrs. Pneumonia—I was so provoked at the Art museum today. There was a painting there that they told me was painted by a man by the name of Murillo. If you believe me, it was only a copy of that beautiful chromo of ours over the parlor mantel! I don't know who this Murillo is, but I think it's shameful that he should be allowed thus to cheapen works of art; and I didn't hesitate to let the people know just how I felt about it.—Boston Transcript.

A Young Family.

Probably the youngest family in the state live in a town near Pittsfield. The family consists of three persons, father, mother and infant daughter. At the time of the baby's birth the mother was just 13 years 6 months and 5 days old, while the father lacked one day of being 18 years of age, according to the Pittsfield Advertiser.

In Madrid when an actor has a benefit his admirers send to the theatre little gifts, such as canes, slippers, gaps and such trifles, just as if it were a donation party, and the employes hand these gifts around among the audience for inspection, while next day a complete list of them is printed in the papers.

Mr. John Keowan, the worthy post master at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other." The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of all symptoms of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular. For sale by Justus L. Johnson.

A DOCTOR'S CONFESSION.

He Doesn't Take Much Medicine and Advises the Reporter Not To.

"Humbug?" Of course it is. The so-called science of medicine is a humbug and has been from the time of Hippocrates to the present. Why the biggest crank in the Indian tribes is the medicine man."

"Very frank was the admission, especially so when it came from one of the biggest young physicians of the city, one whose practice is among the thousands, though he has been graduated but a few years," says the Buffalo Courier. "Very cozy was his office too, with its cheerful grate fire, its Queen Anne furniture, and its many lounges and easy-chairs. He stirred the fire lazily, lighted a fresh cigar, and went on."

"Take the prescriptions laid down in the books and what do you find? Poisons mainly, and nauseating stuffs that would make a healthy man an invalid. Why in the world science should go to poison for its remedies I cannot tell, nor can I find any one who can."

"How does a doctort know the effect of his medicine?" he asked. "He calls, prescribes, and goes away. The only way to judge would be to stand over the bed and watch the patient. This cannot be done. So, really, I don't know how he is to tell what good or hurt he does. Some time ago, you remember, the Boston Glode sent out a reporter with a stated set of symptons. He went to eleven prominent physicians and brought back eleven different prescriptions. This just shows how much science there is in medicine."

There are local diseases of various characters for which nature provides positive remedies. They may not be included in the regular physician's list, perhaps, because of their simplicity, but the evidence of their curative power is beyond dispute. Kidney disease is cured by Warner's Safe Cure, a strictly herbal remedy. Thousands of persons, every year, write as does H. J. Gardiner, of Pontiac, R. I., August 7, 1890:

A few years ago I suffered more than probably ever will be known outside of myself, with kidney and liver complaint. It is the old story—I visited doctor after doctor, but to no avail. I was at Newport, and Dr. Blackman recommended Warner's Safe Cure. I commenced the use of it, and found relief immediately. Altogether I took three bottles, and I truthfully state that it cured me."

University students at Ann Arbor, Mich., engaged in a general row, resulting in the arrest of six of their number. No one suffered severe injury.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

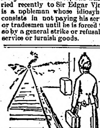
Rich Wives for Ministers.

A clergyman writes in the Chicago Advance: "A friend of mine says that ministers ought to marry rich women. He is a rather self-indulgent fellow. He emphasized his remark by adding that any minister is a fool who does not marry wealth. I scoffed at him and said: 'You are altogether too material. Many women of wealth will not marry ministers, and many women of wealth ought not to marry ministers—they are not fitted for the position that a minister's wife must have. You look at it simply as an exchange of a minister's social position for the wealth which a woman would bring. Such bartering is not honorable. It hurts the minister to thus sell and buy.'"

An Earl's Idiosyncrasy.

From the Chicago Herald.

The Earl of Feversham, the father of the Duchess of Leinster and the Lady Helen Duncomb, who was married recently to Sir Edgar Vincent, is a nobleman whose idiosyncrasy consists in not paying his servants or tradesmen until he is forced to do so by a general strike or refusal to do service or furnish goods.



Gone—all the painful disorders and chronic weaknesses peculiar to the female sex. They go, with the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, all "female complaints" are cured by it. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless—a powerful general, as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, imparting vigor and strength to the whole system. It costs you nothing if it fails to give satisfaction. It's guaranteed to do so, in every case, or the money is refunded. It can be guaranteed—for it does it. No other medicine for women is sold on such terms.

That's the way its makers prove their faith in it. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to derange digestion; a legitimate medicine, not a beverage. Purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system.

World's Dispensary Medical Association, Proprietors, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

No Swiss Race.

There is no Swiss race in the same sense as there is a French, German, or Italian race. Of every 1,000 citizens of Switzerland 702 speak German, 226 French, 55 Italian, and 17 Romansch. They are all Swiss in their devotion to their fatherland, and yet the Ticinese is as purely Italian as the Milanese and the Genevan is as French as the Parisian.—New York Herald.

A FAIRY LAND TALE.

A Beautiful Picture of the Climate of Southern California.

Winter as we understand it east of the Rockies does not exist. I scarcely know how to divide the seasons. There are at most but three. Spring may be said to begin with December and end in April; summer, with May (whose days, however, are often cooler than those of January), and end with September; while October and November are a mild autumn, when nature takes a partial rest, and the leaves of the deciduous trees are gone. But how shall we classify a climate in which the strawberry (none yet in my experience equal to the Eastern berry) may be eaten in every month of the year, and ripe figs may be picked from July to March? What shall I say of a frost (an affair of only an hour just before sunrise) which is hardly anywhere severe enough to disturb the delicate heliotrope, and even in the deepest valleys where it may chill the orange, will respect the bloom of that fruit on contiguous ground fifty or a hundred feet higher? We boast about many things in the United States, about our blizzards and our cyclones, our inundations and our areas of low pressure, our hottest and our coldest places in the world, but what can we say for this little corner which is practically frostless, and yet never had a sunstroke, knows nothing of thunder-storms and lightning, never experienced a cyclone, which is so warm that the year round one is tempted to live out-of-doors, and so cold that woolen garments are never uncomfortable? Nature here, in this protected and petted area, has the knack of being genial without being enervating, of being stimulating without "bracing" a person into the tomb. I think it conducive to equanimity of spirit and to longevity to sit in an orange grove and eat the fruit and inhale the fragrance of it while gazing upon a snow mountain.—Charles Dudley Warner, in Harper's Magazine.

JAPANESE MUSCLE.

They All Have It, for they Train for It from Youth Up.

It is no wonder that the Japanese have a good physical development, for the whole country is run by muscle. Man is the beast of burden. He plows the ground, carries the freight, and does the thousand and one things which are here relegated to horses or to steam. There are but few horses or cattle in the empire, and even in Tokio, a city of a million people, the drays are, in almost all cases, pushed and hauled by men. All this work is done on a diet of rice and tea, and the results seem to surpass those of beefsteak and wheat. The Japanese bring into use a greater number of muscles than we do, in their work and their exercise. The athlete and the laborer use their toes and their feet as we do our hands; and the cooper holds his tub with his toes while he hoops it. The carpenter uses his toes in the manipulation of some of his tools, and the gymnast can walk up a slanting wire or slide down it holding on by his toes. In the ordinary method of sitting the Japanese call a set of muscles into play which we seldom use. The favorite loafing position is squatting on your heels so that the whole weight of your body rests upon your feet so that no portion of your anatomy except your feet touches the ground. The Japanese will sit in this way on his heels for hours at a time and enjoy himself as he chats or smokes. If you will try the experiment you will find yourself tired out in two minutes, and an experience of half an hour in this position will give you aching joints for days.

Mush Is Mush.

The struggle of childhood with synonymous terms is illustrated in the case of a five-year old Tioga boy, who was recently visiting an aunt in the country.

"Jack, take this mug into the dining-room and put it on the buffet," said his aunt one afternoon. Jack marched bravely off, though evidently mystified.

"I know what buffet is, auntie," he remarked as he came back; "why, it's the sideboard."

The next morning at the breakfast table fried mush was served.

"Auntie, what is mush? asked Jack.

"Mush? Why, mush is mush," was the reply.

"Oh!"

Then a moment later he murmured: "Buffet is sideboard, mush is mush; wonder what ham is?"—Philadelphia Press.

Cruel Innocence.

It is a little hard, sometimes, to teach children to be humane. A little girl stepped purposely upon a beatiful caterpillar on the porch and crushed it to death. Her aunt took her in hand.

"Dorothy, dear," said this relative, holding her by the arm, "don't you know that God made that caterpillar?"

"Well," said the child, looking up archly, "don't you think he could make another one.—Boston Transcript.

An Impossibility.

Clara—I think it's a shame I can't entertain a gentleman alone. While Mr. Dashaway was in the parlor last night I just know that you were peeking through the keyhole.

Maud—The idea! Why, the key was on the inside.—New York Sun.

Not With His Pen.

An old negro who had business in a lawyer's office was asked if he could sign his name. "How is dat, sah?" "I ask," the lawyer answered, "if you can write your name?" "Wall, no, sah; I never writes my name. I jes' dictates it, sah."

Not In It.

"Well," said Jonah, as he stood on the shore and watched the whale swim away, "for once I'm glad I'm not in it."—Brooklyn Life.

A REAL AIR-LINE RAILROAD.

Engineer Le Van's Proposed System of Pneumatic Trains.

From Philadelphia to New York in twenty minutes. That is what W. Barnet Le Van, the well known engineer of Philadelphia, proposes shall be one of the first accomplishments of the twentieth century. It is to be done by means of pneumatic tubes ten feet in diameter run in as near an air-line as possible between the two cities, the cars to be propelled by exhausting the air in front of them.

Mr. Le Van first enunciated his system in an address before the Franklin Institute in January, 1882, at which time it met the approbation and indorsement of the practical engineers of that body. Since that time Mr. Le Van has given much further thought to the matter, and developed the system into much more perfect shape.

The principle of pneumatic propulsion has long been in active operation in the transmission of packages and other materials. There is a pneumatic freight road in London which has been in successful operation for many years past. It shoots the cars five miles inside of seven minutes. A friend of Mr. Le Van, who took a trip over this road, said that the only inconvenient sensation was being in the darkness, which would, of course, be obviated in a passenger road. The pneumatic tubes which carry money and small packages through the big stores of the city are on the same principle as Mr. Le Van's proposed line to New York.

In describing his system recently Mr. Le Van said there should be two perfectly round tunnels between the cities, one for up trains and the other for down trains. They should be of brick, finished smooth on the inside and ten feet in diameter. This would be the case when the tunnel runs underground. In passing over rivers and cuts the tunnel would be of boiler iron or steel.

The cars would be cylindrical, made of steel and made to fit air tight in the tunnel by means of leather or rubber packing. Any number of cars could be used, as there would be no need for couplings on the train. In going down an incline the first car could not leave the train without creating a partial vacuum between it and the next car for the reason that each car has its packing between it and the tube. The plan for operating the road is to have stations located every five miles, at which would be placed large exhaust fans of precisely the same pattern as is used in drawing foul air from mines. These would withdraw the air in front of the trains and deliver it behind them, thus providing a double propelling power, both pulling and pushing.

"It would only take a pressure of one pound to the square inch," said Mr. Le Van, "to propel the cars at a rate of 150 miles an hour, and this could be easily attained. The distance from the public buildings in Philadelphia to the city hall in New York is eighty-one miles in an air line, and this could be covered in twenty minutes. There would be no necessity for trains to stop at any station unless it was so desired, for balance gates would be provided which would open automatically for through trains.

He Was a Contented Man.

The El Paso Herald prints this little story on the authority of another paper about a local minister who recently preached at a camp meeting:

After the sermon the customary invitation was given for all who wanted to go to heaven to rise up. All present rose to their feet except one young man who sat pretty well on the outskirts of the audience. Those who desired to go to heaven sat down. Then all who desired to go to hell were requested to rise to their feet, and the aforesaid young man was eyed with a good deal of interest. Still he sat as quiet and composed as a stone. The minister went to him and asked him why he did not rise in either instance. "Wall," replied the husky son of toil, I don't want ter go anywhar. Fremont's good ernuff for me."—(Dallas News.

A Growing Southern City.

"Fifteen months ago, "says a man who has just been there," there were not a dozen people in Middlesborough, Ky. Now it has population of 6,000. An English syndicate worth $20,000,000 is building the town. They have spent $300,000 in straightening a creek which runs through it, and have encircled it with a seventeen mile dummy line. They have put up electric cars and electric lights and have about completed seven furnaces. Business buildings costing less than $10,000 are not allowed to be built—and lots are selling for as much as $450, a front foot. The bonds of the circular dummy line have been gobbled up at 115. The syndicate owns 100,000 acres in and around the place and has already realized a million and a half dollars in the investment; Mr. Arthur, the manager of the syndicate, gets $35,000 a year for his services, and last Christmas they made him a present of $50,000.—From the New York Tribune.

That Tickling

In your throat arises from catarrh, and as catarrh is a constitutional disease the ordinary cough medicines all fail to hit the spot. What you need is a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by building up the general health, and expelling the scrofulous taint which is the cause of catarrh and consumption, has restored to perfect health many persons on whom these diseases seem to have a firm hold. Many unsolicited testimonials prove beyond question that Hood's Sarsaparilla does positively cure catarrh.

Eugenie's Valor in Cholera Times.

The cholera scare that has afflicted Europe to a degree has recalled an incident of the time when Napoleon III. was at the height of his power. The cholera prevailed to a frightful extent at Amiens, yet never a day passed that the Empress did not visit the hospitals to superintend, so far as she could, the noble work of allaying the sufferings of the stricken. One morning a cure rushed into the ward where the Empress was consoling a dying man. "Oh, your Majesty," cried the cure, "two hours ago my vicar was breakfasting with me and now he is dead!"

Eugenie smiled placidly, "That is well."

"Well?" echoed the cure, in amazement.

"Yes, it is well," she answered. "When once cholera becomes as violent as that it ceases."

The Empress was right; from that day the plague abated. Eugenie's valor did much to fortify the people against the epidemic to which very many, I am told, fell victims through sheer fright alone.—Chicago News.

Only Three Hundred Remained.

'Tis said that a party of the townspeople clubbed together and visited New York City. One evening during a ramble upon the street a member of the party became separated from the others. After an ineffectual search he be-thought himself the theatre as being the most likely to attract bucolic fellows. He chose the most pretentious edifice, paid his money and went in. At the first opportunity, between the acts, he arose and inquired in a loud voice:

"Is there a man in this hall by the name of Jones?" If so please stand up?"

One thousand people, as the searcher afterward related it, immediately rose to their feet.

"I mean Mr. Jones, of South Dashville, Me."

THE NATION'S CAPITAL.

It is not believed by the leading Democrats now in Washington that Gen. Baker will contest Lind's seat in the next house of representatives, or that if he does he will receive any encouragement from the Democrats of the Fifty-second congress.

The commissioner of Indian affairs has ordered Special Agent Cooper to go to the Pine Ridge agency in South Dakota and assist the agent there in looking after the Sioux. This was done, so Commissioner Belt said, because of the alarming reports that came from that place and because the agent had apparently good reason to be a little rattled.

Special Agent Mosier writes to the general land office from Tacoma, Wash., that a grove of giant redwood trees, like those in the Yosemite National Park, Cal., had been discovered in Pierce county, Wash. The secretary of the interior has ordered an investigation of the subject through the agricultural division of the census bureau, and congress may be asked to set aside the land on which the trees are standing as a national park. Mr. Mosier says that the people of Tacoma will probably have a flag pole made of one of the tallest trees to be sent to the world's fair. Some of the trees are 400 feet high and 13 feet in diameter.

PEOPLE OF NOTE.

Henry Villard and others, it is reported, are to build a railroad from Puget sound to Alaska, entire trains being ferried across Behring sea.

Joseph M. Carey, ex-delegate to congress, was elected United States Senator from Wyoming. He received every one of the thirty-nine Republican votes in the legislature, while George W. Baxter, the late Democratic nominee for governor, received the vote of every Democrat.

A four-year-old boy had his left arm broken and leg injured, and another child also suffered serious injuries.

Not responding to the call for breakfast, his room was entered and he was found unconscious, having taken morphine, belladonna, nux vomica and other poisons. Physicians pronounce his case hopeless.

A serious riot occured at Glass Crossing, ten miles south of Vicksburg, Miss., in which a negro named Smith Summers was fatally shot, another negro received a wound in the foot and Deputy Sheriff G. H. Smirall was seriously wounded in the side. The disturbance grew out of Simrall's efforts to break up a game of craps in which ten or more negroes were engaged. About forty shots were fired by the mob.

John T. Davis, the crank who shot Miss Gladys Price the organist of the Mariner's church, was arraigned in the Tombs police court, New York, and held to await the result of his victim's injuries. Davis rambled in his talk and reaffirmed his statement that it was his intention to have shot ex-President Cleveland. Miss Price is still confined to the hospital, and it is thought will recover.

Jay Trumbull who keeps a drug store at Merillan, Wis., one night, entered his bedroom in the rear of his store after closing up, he was met with a brace of revolvers in the hands of two determined men, with a command to throw up his hands and keep still. He was then compelled to open his safe, after which he was bound and gagged and thrown on the bed, while his visitors rifled the safe. Mr. Trumbull lay in this condition for about an hour, when Dr. McMillan, who also rooms in the store, came in and released him, the burglars in the meantime having taken everything out of the safe and departed by a back door, through which it is supposed they first gained entrance.

The Frank Courier, of Berlin, states that the lymph used by Prof. Koch for the cure of consumption is prepared in an incubating stove, within a space that is hermetically sealed and sterilized and thereby rendered free from fungus. The interior of air-tight space is divided by an unglazed porcelain diaphram into an upper and lower section. In the upper section is placed a salted broth, in a gelatinous state, containing colonies of the tubercle germs. This mass gradually liquifies and the gelatine drops slowly through the porcelain plate into the lower section. The liquid then contains all the secretory products, but is free from all living or dead germs or reproductive spores, and is the lymph as used.

A short time ago a package of Louisiana lottery prize lists was seized at Winnipeg by custom authorities. The matter was reported to Ottowa, and it is learned that the minister of customs has ordered the release of the package and also informed the officers that they had no authority to seize such packages.

A rumor was started in some unaccountable way that the Citizens' Savings bank, at the Bowery and Canal street, New York, was in trouble. This caused quite a run on the bank, and the police had to keep the excited depositors in order. At the close of the day President Quintard said that about $100,000 had been paid out. He said the bank was all right and could meet all demands. The books of the bank show a surplus of $1,400,000.

The excitement at New Orleans over the Italian or rather anti-Italian issue growing out of the recent assassination of Chief of Police Hennessy is becoming more intensified, and it is feared that serious disturbances are yet in store. An Italian Catholic priest who is also the editor of an Italian newspaper, has issued a call on the Italian government to place an Italian man-of-war in the Mississippi river for the protection of the Italian residents.

Hon. John H. King of Chamberlain, S. D., railroad commissioner, said in an interview that the Indian scare "is so ridiculous as to be almost a fake." He says the Indians well know if they were to countenance an uprising they would forfeit all their rights under solemn treaties, compacts and agreements since 1868, and would lose all claims to lands on the united portion of the Sioux reservation and all the millions of dollars to be paid them under these treaties and under the last agreement made with Gen. Crook.

The dreadful spotted fever, that made its appearance last March near Fountain Head, about fifteen miles from Gallatin, Tenn., killing about 90 per cent. of the victims, has reappeared. James Simpson, living in the affected section, lost three grown sons, all in about two days. He has since moved within about three miles of Gallatin, and now his daughter has a genuine case. The young lady is about thirteen years old, and the doctors do not know how to handle the disease. Spotted fever is an epidemic cerebro-spinal menengitis, and is a disease of the nineteenth century. The death rate is 80 per cent. Its average duration is about fourteen days, but death often occurs in a few hours.

SURE TO BE A FIGHT.

Rumors That an Attempt Will Be Made to Disarm the Indians.

No Doubt But That the Move Would Precipitate a Battle.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 26.—Pine Ridge agency, ordinarily dreary enough, is to-day a scene of extraordinary activity. The Indians draw part of their rations to-day, but instead of coming in as usual, the bucks are dancing the weird ghost dance back among the buttes a dozen miles from the agency and have sent the old men and the squaws in for rations.

On the plateau, where the agency is located, brown walled by barren buttes, Companies K, F, I, N, D, of the Ninth cavalry, are camped, also four companies of the Second infantry. Two more companies of the Second will arrive this afternoon, and it is said that reinforcements will soon arrive in the form of cavalry from Fort Rielly, Kan.

I rode part of the way from Rushville this morning in company with Col. Guy V. Henry, of the Ninth cavalry, and later I passed his scout, the famous Frank Grovard, who acted in a similar capacity for Gen. Crook in 1876. Both Col. Henry and his scout are confident that there will be a conflict between the troops and the Indians within a few days.

The officers at Pine Ridge are very much annoyed by some sensational press reports that have been published, and talk some of quarantining the reservation against newspaper correspondents. They consider the situation to be critical enough in reality without resorting to exaggerations.

Indian Agent Royer to-day increased his force of Indian police from 38 to 100. The new men were taken into a large room adjoining the agent's office this afternoon, shorn of their long hair and fitted out with uniforms, in which they are strutting around this afternoon, much to the disgust of the feminine portion of the ghost dancers' contingent, who are in after rations while the hostile men are busy pawing up trouble.

It is understood that the force of fighting men at this agency has been reinforced by 200 Rosebud braves. Wednesday is the regular day for issuing beef, but it is not yet decided by the agent and commanding officer, Gen. Brooke, whether or not to issue. There are rumors that some day this week an attempt will be made to disarm the Indians, then there will be trouble.

SCARED THE INDIANS.

A Stampede of Redskins on the Approach of Soldiers.

PINE RIDGE, S. D., Nov. 26.—Last night something of a scare was occasioned when the water call was sounded. The cavalry had been going to a creek about half a mile from the post to water the horses. Along this creek during the last twenty-four hours a village of ghost dancers' tepees has sprung up.

Last evening the black troopers mounted their horses with carbines loaded and cartridge belts in place. Then in command of a lieutenant instead of the usual orderly sergeant they slowly cantered to the creek. After the horses had drank their fill they crossed into the Indian village. The stampede that followed was almost instantaneous. Squaws and papooses ran screaming into the teepes, while the bucks hastily mounted their ponies and fled to the hills. But the troopers had only crossed in order to turn and go back to camp. Nearly all the Indians who draw rations here are now encamped near the post. It may be that this will settle the matter without trouble, and it may bring on a fight. Special Agent Cooper thinks that any pretext may be seized upon by the Indians for forcing the issue. The dancing is dying out, but he is not sure whether it is treachery or obedience that is causing the relaxation.

A number of Rosebud Indians are here without passes, and their presence bodes no good. All are unanimous in their assertions of good will, but they are carefully measuring the strength of the troops the while. Little Wound, one of the leaders of the ghost dance, has refused to come into the agency, saying that if the agent wanted to see him he must call at the Little Wound's tepee. A squaw hanged herself Saturday night to add to the excitement. At present it is a toss up between peace and war.

KILLED BY INDIANS.

A Half-Breed Murdered for Not Engaging in a Ghost Dance.

BLUNT, S. D., Special Telegram, Nov. 26.—Gov. Mellette has been appealed to by the city council for guns and ammunition. Oneida, the county seat of Sully county, is in a terrible state of alarm, and the governor has been asked to send guns and ammunition at once.

Shields, a noted chief heretofore living on the lately ceded Winnebago reservation, but who has been participating in the ghost dance at Rosebud, is in town to-day. His actions are suspicious, and the city marshal will hold him until it is settled that he is not here as a spy. He claims the Indians are not contemplating any trouble. The very fact that better Indians of known integrity differ with him, gives the lie to his statement. A later report states that Oneida has been supplied with 100 guns and 700 rounds of ammunition from Fort Sully. A stage driver who came from Fairbank, opposite Fort Bennett, to-night says a half-breed was killed by Indians near that place because he refused to participate in the ghost dance. The town of Fairbank is depopulated and the settlers have fled. Gov. Mellette says he can furnish us no guns, and an appeal has been sent to Fort Sully.

ANOTHER ASSIGNEE.

Banker Prettyman's Appointee Deposed by a Judge.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Judge Prendergast today discharged Cashier Charles Johnson as assignee of Prettyman's bank and the North Division Lumber company. The judge appointed in Johnson's stead the Jennings Trust company, and entered an order directing the new assignee to take charge at once.

This move was the result of a vigorous protest against Johnson by the creditors, who made allegations that two men supposed to be Prettyman and Johnson had secretly visited the bank the night after the failure, also that Johnson, who is closely associated with Prettyman's affairs, was not a disinterested person. The testimony was also adduced to support the theory that a certain creditor had been favored with funds at the bank after the assignment.

Mr. Prettyman, whose total liabilities in the bank, his lumber company and other ventures have been estimated all the way from $300,000 to $1,000,000, was present during the discussion, with an imperturbed countenance, and at the end said he would prefer to say nothing in court until he had seen his attorney. The court thereupon adjourned the examination until to-morrow. Prettyman asserts that the assets will fully cover the liabilities. The assignment, he said, was the result of a disagreement between himself and his partner, H. H. Bishop.

MURDER IN A COURT ROOM.

Two Men Killed and Another Injured by a Prisoner.

PANAMA, Nov. 26.—The town of Rivers, in Nicaragua, was recently the scene of a terrible tragedy, almost unparalleled in criminal history.

Tomas Martinez was arraigned for trial, charged with attempting to murder Dr. Trinidad Flores. When the charges were read and the accused called on to plead, he stepped four paces to the front, and, putting his hand into his inner breast pocket, exclaimed:

"Gentlemen, I know that the jury will condemn me, but before being condemned I must get rid of this one."

He thereupon drew a revolver and shot Dr. Flores dead. Senor Gustavo Chameroso, who stood next to Dr. Flores, picked up a chair, but almost immediately fell to the ground, being shot through the brain. At this juncture Senor Gregorio Rogas, an old gentleman, father-in-law of the first victim, bravely closed with the prisoner, who did not hesitate to draw the trigger, and the ball passed through Senor Roga's mouth, coming out of the back of his neck. Senor Rojas is in a precarious condition, but the physician attending him says he will probably recover.

After shooting Senor Rojas the prisoner made a dash for liberty and escaped to the country, but was captured three days later.

CONTINUING EXPERIMENTS.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Prof. Lister, a leading English surgeon, has arrived here with his niece, whom he brings for treatment by Prof. Koch. THE LAST RESORT.

Burdens of Life Too Heavy for a Young Girl to Bear.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Jessie Adamson, aged nineteen, a saleslady, committed suicide early this morning by taking poison. She came here from Chicago, and went to work in a store, but was recently discharged. She had been living on her savings, but they soon melted away, and her landlady demanded her money.

The girl grew despondent and promised to do her best to pay for her lodging. But no money came in, and as the only way out of her difficulties appeared to be suicide she resolved to die. On the bureau of the room in which she died were several letters which she had written before taking the poison. The first was addressed to the boarding house keeper, and in it the girl said she was very sorry not to be able to pay her, and that as she found the task an impossibility she had decided to end all. She gave with this her mother's address at 80 West Cortland street, Chicago. Another was a letter addressed to an unknown person named "Will," asking him to inform her father of her death and to give him her love. A third letter was addressed to an aunt named Mrs. Lizzie Byron, who is at present a patient in the Woman's hospital in this city. It asked forgiveness for the expenditure of $20 entrusted to the suicide.

He fired the three balls into the bear, resulting in only aggravating the animal. He was so close that he could not escape, and the animal attacked him, tearing off his clothes and terribly lacerating his face and body. The hunter used his Winchester as a club, and succeeded in getting in a chance blow on the animal's head, which stunned him, and he then pounded his brains out with the broken barrel of his gun. He was not very far from home, which he reached in a badly used up condition.

Most of the hay cut by the farmers of the James River Valley this year has come from the dry beds of lakes and ponds. In several instances there have been found, in these now-natural meadows, the mounds and section stakes placed there by surveyors in 1872—eighteen years ago. This shows the ponds were dry then as now. But for six or seven years following the survey in 1872 the lakes began filling up and every sign now shows they will shortly do so again.

The climate is well adapted to sheep, and with a little experience, careful farmers will learn how to care for them and will find them very profitable.

Settlers south of Mandan are leaving their ranches and farms because they believe that an Indian uprising is pending. Indians are trading horses and other property for guns and ammunition. Local hardware men have sold all their ammunition to them. Joseph Buckley rode in from the reservation, and says the Indian authorities are harboring a feeling of false security and the danger will be found out when too late. The mayor of Mandan has called a public meeting, and the government will be petitioned for guns to arm citizens. The Indians say they will have everything to gain and nothing to lose by an uprising. If they are beaten their rations will be doubled, as in the past.

The incoming legislature will have a hard struggle on the prohibition question. This subject has to some extent been lost sight of in the excitement attending the senatorial contest. A considerable number of the members of both houses were elected on that issue, and it is believed by the liquor element that a bill can be passed resubmitting the question of prohibition. A majority of the Red river valley members, the Stutsman delegation, most of the Missouri slope members and a few others scattered over the state are anti-prohibitionists, and will support a bill to resubmit the question. The Ramsey and Nelson delegations are for absolute prohibition and there are also some voters on that side from Walsh, Traill and Cass counties.

But their dead were left and the graves remained unmarked until two years ago, when a plain monument about eight feet high was erected. It bears this inscription: "This monument was erected in 1888 in memory of those members of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, who died in 1846-47-48, during their exodus to seek a home beyond the Rocky mountains."

The Kill or Capture Idea.

New York Press: Capt. Willard Bullard, health inspector, had many reminiscences to recount. Among them was the following:

"At the time Gen. Sickles assumed command of the Second division of the Third corps after the second Bull Run he gave an elaborate dinner to the officers of his new division. After wining and dining these, he sent for the officers of his old Excelsior brigade, and said: 'Now, boys, we will have a family gathering,' and pointing to the table he said, 'Treat it as you would the enemy,' which the boys did.

"Capt. Byrnes, a typical Irishman, after dinner, passed out, saying he was going to his tent. Gen. Sickles sauntered out, and caught the captain stowing away three bottles of champagne in his saddle-bags.

"'What, what!' gasped the general. 'What are you doing, captain!'

"'Obeying orders,' responded the captain in a firm voice

"'How is that?' said the general serenely.

"'You told us to treat that dinner as we would the enemy, and you know, general, what we can't kill we capture,' replied the witty Irishman."

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

Wheat is 79 cents.

These are sorry times for the average turkey.

Henry Rhinehardt, of Fisher, came up to day on business.

Fred Ames went over to Fisher last Monday on business for a few days.

Let us be thankful for the things we have and work for the things we wish.

The price of wheat has been raised ten cents a bushel on all grades the last few days.

Mrs. E. T. Morgan is preparing to spend the winter with relatives in North Dakota.

Health, Happiness and Prosperity is the SPECTATOR'S Thanksgiving wish to all its patrons.

Geo. Williams returned today, He has been threshing in the southern part of the county.

C. G. Rapp returned from St. Paul last Monday where he has been buying a new stock of goods.

Don't fail to attend the dance to-morrow evening. The band boys promise to give a good time to all.

The late raise in the price of wheat will probably cause a large amount of wheat to be marketed in the next week.

We are still enjoying the best of weather. This does not promise as severe a winter as has been predicted.

Rev. J. B. Hingely, presiding elder of the M. E. Church, preached a very interesting sermon here last wednesday evening.

Hoff & Burkee Bros. report that they are selling flannel and dress goods cheaper than ever and they have some rare bargains.

S. M. Hoff has put in a new and complete tin shop and has employed a practical tinner. If you want any work done in this line give them a call.

Rev. Chapman wishes us to announce that church services will commence next Sunday evening at 7:30 instead of at 8 as announced,

Hanson has just received a very large stock of Christmas goods. It will pay you to look over his stock which is the finest of the kind ever brought to St. Hilaire.

Every business man in St. Hilaire reports that he is having a good business better in fact, than he ever had before which would indicate that our town is in a prosperous condition.

Sixteen cars of wheat was shipped from here last Monday, it is estimated that nearly 100,000 bushels has been bought here so far this fall and that more than one half of the wheat is yet to be bought.

This week will see the last of the threshing in this section of the country, They have had fine weather to finish the work and all will succeed in getting their threshing done Next year more machines will be needed.

The flour mill has been doing a big business lately. They will commence again next week to run night and day. They are turning out a good grade of flour and give the best of treatment, all of which the farmers seem to appreciate.

The number of miles of railroads, including side tracks, according to the official report issued by the State Commerce Commission on June 30th 1889 was 20,094,959 miles. Number of engines 29,046: number of cars, passenger 25,675; number of freight cars, 854,031; company service cars 31,557: fast freight 49706; Total number of cars 1,097,581

C. O. Moe was in town last Monday purchasing goods for his store near Thief Lake. He has started a store about two miles this side of Thief Lake and informs us that there is some very fine country in that vicinity. A large number of settlers have been settling in that country the past year, For stock raising it excells any place in Northern Minnesota.

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving and we all have many things to be thankful for. The past season has in the main been a prosperous one for the farmer. He has been blessed with a good crop which he is able to sell at a fair price, Farm produce of all kinds has risen in value and it is evident that better times are in store for farmers and business men in the Red River Valley. Let us all be thankful tomorrow for the prevalence of health and the prospects of good times in the future and plenty enough to live on at present. Many people have been thankful for less. Let us celebrate.

Curious, isn't it? From Mr. Gladstone down the Free Trade doctrinaires of England are demonstrating with mathematical certainty that Protection means ruin to American Industry and degradation to American workingmen; yet British capital finds in America its favorite field for investment and British workingmen emigrate to America more numerously than to any other part of the world. Very curious.—N. Y. Tribune.

The English nation has paid $173,113,115 to support royalty since the accession of Victoria to the throne. Of this vast sum $125,000,000 has been consumed in the immediate expenses of the royal household; while $16,500,000 of it has filtered through the fingers of the prince of Wales. His debts are said to represent at least half as much again; and yet the people shout and the band plays "God save the Queen!" with as much enthusiasm as of yore.

If the bad Indians really become more troublesome than is needful for the romances of correspondents, they might be used as objects for the experiments in new divices for making war dangerous and annoying. There are dynamite, electricity, smokeless powder, and a lot of other improvements that have had no considerable test in actual use. In fact, they are likely to be so effective that prudent white people will be reluctant to go to war, A class of Indians, most of the old stock, cannot be made good Indians unless by killing. Experiments may be in the interest of humanity as well as science.—St. Paul Globe.

Charlie Wisner, well known on both sides of the Ruby, was in the city on Friday last enroute for Chicago, where he will take a course in medicine. For some years past Mr. Wisner has felt a great desire to abandon mercantile pursuits and "go on" for a doctor, and now that he has acquired a handsome competency by strict attention to business he can gratify his taste At present Mr Wisner is at Thief River Falls, but when he turns out a full-fledged deciple of Æsculapius he will hardly practice medicine where snake root is the chief product of the soil. He may possibly locate in E. G. Forks. The Courrier wishes Dr. Wisner much joy in his new venture.—Courrier.

The power of the local press is unlimited. It attracts wealth from abroad and makes known the resources and capabilities of the city or town. Each advertisement in a local paper is an advertisement of the town; it is the voice of the busy merchant to his customers and also those at a distance. It acts in many ways to benefit the town and increase its business prosperity, For those and various other reasons, it is the part of wisdom and honesty for men interested in the growth and prosperity of the town or city to patronize those who patronize them, and to support and build up home institutions rather than those abroad. In other words, advertise in your home paper and show to distant communities that you appreciate the effort made to develope your town or city,—LeSueur News.

Congressman S. G. Comstock came down from Moorhead yesterday, seemingly not at all vexed over the recent Democratic and Alliance landslide, which swept over his district and politically buried him out of sight. Mr. Comstock attributes the defeat of the Republican party to the same causes given by Russell Harrison and Congressman Hansbrough and other republicans, namely: "The damnable lying about the McKinley tariff bill." In his district of course, he said there was an Alliance tidal wave, and on that wave Mr. Halvorson was carried to victory, much to everybody's surprise as well as to Mr, Halvorson himself. Regarding the Lodge Fedral election bill, Mr. Comstock said: "I believe that it to some extent caused the defeat of the party, but for the life of me I cannot see on what honorable grounds people oppose it, Every one asks for a fair election. That was what that bill wanted to establish. I believe that the bill is right and just, and anyone who opposes it will oppose the ten commandments." Mr. Comstock announced that after March 4t next he would step out of politics, return to his private business and probably attend to that solely hereafter.—Minneapolis Times.

Red Lake Falls News: The immigration convention called at Stephen, Marshal Co., Nov. 26th, is a commendable movement in the proper direction. It is evident the people of the Red River Valley are awakening to a sense of their duty. The feeling of renewed confidence in the fertility of our soil the abundant crop of '90, the prospects of '91, the vast amount of uncultivated lands, all combine to show what nature has done to make homes for those who are sufficiently favored by a kind providence and now enjoy a home in our midst. The time has come when a benificent nature must be aided and by strenuous efforts; Our rich farming country is deserving of more than it has received in the way of immigration the last few years. With a climate noted for its healthful advantages, with a soil unequalled, with the opening of the vast pineries of the Red Lake region there is no reason why we should not be able to induce sufficient immigration to occupy every quarter section of good land in the Red River valley. We know our advantages—it is our duty to let others know what we can do for them Let us therefore unite in this one grand work of inducing people to come among us. Let every community send delegates to the convention on the 26th, that a system of work may be adopted that will redound to our benefit and help enrich us one and all. Let Red Lake Falls put her shoulder to the wheel and send a delegation of representative men to the convention. Now is your time; don't neglect this opportunity and permit this question to lie dormant in the future as it has in the past.

THE LAST LEAF.

We see the patriarch still Briskly treading Beacon Hill
Full of joy;
For his heart is pure and glad
As the good Sir Galahad,
Or a boy!

By the teacups when he sat,
The unrivaled Autocrat,
Did he know
He would some day cling, ah me!
Last leaf on the lonely tree,
Bent with snow?

Had he felt and had he known
He would wear the bays alone
Still I hold
Never would have blanched his cheek,
Still his harp had blessed the weak,
Charmed the old.

His the gospel of good cheer,
Doctor's art and poet's ear
Joined to bless;
Heart with humankind in touch,
Like the Master healing each
In the press.

Writing no impassioned screeds
To uphold a party's creeds
Or its wrongs;
Broader than his Brahmin caste,
He has won the world at last
With his songs.

Still he walks the Boston streets,
And he smiles at those he meets
As he roams
Ah! we love that gray haired man;
Grasp his hand, then, if you can:
That's our Holmes!
—L. [illegible] in Boston Traveller.

Japanese Frugality.

Some remarkable statements are made by Professor Rein, a scientist who has been investigating the material resources of Japan. They reveal a national frugality and economy of a marvelous type. The area of Japan is less than that of California. Its cultivated land is less than one-tenth of its total acreage, yet its products support about 38,000,000. In Japan 2,560 persons subsist from each square mile of tilled land. A people existing in such circumstances must, from necessity of preservation, be provident, painstaking, hard working, ingenious and frugal. The Japs appear to deserve all these adjectives. Agriculture with them is literally market gardening, because the soil is required to produce more than any other place in the world.—Once a Week.

Postage Stamps Good Until Used.

Persons having old postage stamps sometimes think they are rendered worthless by the issue of new ones This is not so. The only obsolete stamps are those of the issues of 1847 and 1851, very few of which are now in existence in the north, and these are generally worth more than their face value for collectors. The issues of 1861, 1869 and 1870 are as good in the payment of postage as the new issues. The reason the issues of 1847 and 1851 are not accepted is because large amounts of these were outstanding in the south at the time of the rebellion, and the present holders of them probably secured them without rendering an equivalent to Uncle Sam. —Hartford Courant.

King Leopold and Queen Victoria.

King Leopold of Belgium speaks and writes English with ease and accuracy. He never lets a Sunday pass without writing an autograph letter to his friend and ally, Queen Victoria. Whenever he travels he takes with him his confidential English attendant, Mr. Charles Murray, who has been in his service nearly a quarter of a century. Although the king of the Belgians has aged perceptibly during the past ten years, he has never lost the equanimity of temper which made him so popular in his youth. The king is now 55 years of age, but his health is good and he expects to live many years more.—New York World.

Where Some Jersey Cows Come From.

There was a time when nobody in this country paid $400 for a cow. Now we are not surprised to read of one dairy farmer buying a hundred Jerseys, in Colorado, paying that amount in cash for every one of them. It still seems a little odd, however, to get the heifers of the Isle of Jersey from a Rocky mountain ranch.—Boston Transcript.

The board of County Commissioners were called to meet in a special session on Wednesday but oweing to a lack of quorum of the board being present, no business could be transacted. It is rumored that the board was called together for the purpose of enabling some of the new county officers to qualify. They claiming that when officers have been appointed to fill vacancies, they are only appointed until the next general election or until their successor is elected and qualified. The offices of sheriff, county attorney and superintendent of schools were all filled by appointments, and the incumbents claim that they were appointed to fill the unexpired term of their predecessors which expires January 1st next. The question is a disputed one, the meaning of the statute not being plain and the opinion being about equally divided on the question. The boys should not be too anxious to assume office, if they do their constituents may begin to think that they were not entirely unselfish in seeking the election to office, and that they are just what their opponents were claiming that they were just before election, namely, chronic office seekers and disgruntled politicians.—Thirteen Towns.

THE RECORD IN THE BRAIN.

Extraordinary Instances of Word Blindness and Word Deafness.

All persons are consciously and unconsciously recording in their brain cells records innumerable. Things that we seek out or leave their impress there; stamp comes upon stamp like the various writings in an old palimpsest, in which the lower writings seem entirely obliterated until they are revealed by the processes of the antiquarian. So when the vision of the higher centers is sharpest it can see through the maze, and it may in a moment decipher the records of a lifetime, or when the restraining influence of the higher centers has been removed during delirious unconsciousness [illegible] words, broken sentences, or [illegible] periods, and [illegible] give to bystanders glimpses of the passing visions.

When we are trying to recollect a thing we are simply searching here and there among the records in the brain to see if by chance we can find the leaf that we want to read. What an index catalogue is to the searchers in a library, that to the searcher of brain records are the laws of association; and precisely as a purely alphabetical or arbitrary catalogue may assist the student, so may an artificial system of mnemonics assist the brain delver. The separateness of memory and consciousness is also illustrated by some of the extraordinary phenomena which are connected with the so called local memories.

Among the local or isolated memories the most distinct and sharply cut is the memory for words. The forms of aphasia known as word blindness and word deafness are very strange. The sufferer from word blindness can write and will understand what is said to him; he will talk to you and perhaps talk you to death; but hand him a book, a newspaper, or even the letter he himself has written, and he cannot read a word.

Thus an active man of business having written a letter, giving directions for an important matter, attempted to read it in order to see if it was correct, but was astounded to find that he could not make out a single word; he had been suddenly stricken with word blindness. The sounds of the words and the words themselves had remained to him, but the recollection of the written forms of the words was gone.

In a case of word deafness the person can talk and can write, but, although his hearing is perfect, he cannot recognize the spoken words. The sound of the voice is plain to his sense, but conveys no thought to him.—Dr. H. C. Wood, in Century.

He Didn't Delay.

The ease with which foreigners coming to this country mix with our population and don the manners of the natives in hustling for a livelihood was forcibly illustrated on the arrival of the English steamer Parisian at Portland. Among the Parisian's passengers was an Italian scissors grinder, who stood near the gangway with his machine on his back and who was one of the first to set foot on the wharf. If he had any "first impressions" of America, he did not make note of them as did Max O'Rell and other distinguished foreigners. He had no luggage to look after, other than his apparatus for putting an edge on knives and, being free from care he was apparently light hearted and gay. [illegible] his head about looking [illegible] house, but at once [illegible] placed his tools in readiness for use, and within thirty minutes after getting on shore he was seen going up India street ringing his bell for business. Welcome, welcome, blithe grinder, to the ranks of our useful citizens!—Lewiston Journal.

Cabby Found Asleep.

A somnolent cabman was enjoying a comfortable nap on his box, in the Rue de Metz when an enterprising person came along, cut the reins, unharnessed the steed of the sleeping Jehu, mounted the animal and tried to gallop it up the Faubourg Saint Martin. The nag, however, was almost as sleepy as its master, and refused to proceed at a pace fast enough to enable the street brigand to get away.

The cabman having been aroused from his slumbers by a good Samaritan who had observed the thief, rubbed his eyes and tried to ornament his features with a feeble smile, which was accompanied by a muttered malediction. At length, deeming energy imperatively necessary, cabby seized his whip and proceeded briskly after the disappearing annexer of nags, who was ultimately conducted to a police station where he treated the adventure as a pure joke. This species of horse play was, however, neither relished by the victimized cabman nor by the police, who sent the thief to the lock up.—London Telegraph.

Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of all symptoms of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular. For sale by Justus L. Johnson.

CHASING COYOTES.

They Can Outrun Even the Nimble-Footed Jack Rabbit.

The hills south of Pasadena are the haunts of the wily coyote—the native dog of southern California, the wolf of the mesa; for he combines the characteristics of both. At night he sallies forth in the direction of San Gabriel, Alhambra, Pasadena, and the neighboring towns, passing through the outskirts, and lurking around back door-yards—a veritable scavenger. When alarmed, he is alert, and easily out-distances the fleetest common dog. Occasionally he is seen by the light of the moon dashing away, with a yelping laugh or cry, followed by a half score of dogs; and it is said that the coyote will at times allure the dogs on until one is in the fore, then turn, and lead the victim to an ambush where several coyotes are lying in wait. Seemingly at a signal, they will pitch upon him, and send him home torn and bleeding, if not seriously injured. Almost every canon in the range is the vantage ground of one or more coyotes. As the sun rises they leave the plains, and make their way to the hills, where they sleep on the soft grass, or lie on the ledges of rock that overlook the ravines.

The coyote is about the size of a setter dog, often smaller, with a bushy, wolf-like tail, big, prominent ears, and an exceedingly odd expression. A glance at the animal would not convince one that it was adapted by nature to remarkable bursts of speed, yet such is one of the attributes of this singular creature. It can outrun the jack rabbit, and I doubt if the fast greyhounds of England, that are trained to chase the English hare, could compete with it. The swiftest of California dogs are required to capture it, and then Master Coyote succumbs only after a one or two mile run at race-horse speed—not the run of a fox before the hounds, but a chase where the game is ever in sight, and the horses are put to the utmost speed, as upon the track. No wonder, then, that the coyote has attracted the attention of the cross-country rider, and is considered game well worthy the best mettle of horse and rider.—Harper's weekly.

Care of the Teeth.

Nothing is more conducive to sweetness of breath, and consequently of general health of the mouth than to brush the teeth regularly shortly before retiring, that all particles of food, as well as the natural secretions, may be removed. Castile soap is the best which can be used for cleansing the mouth, with which a little magnesia may be employed, says Good Housekeeping; a solution of oil peppermint in water makes an agreeable and useful mouth wash; while a silken thread may be employed to cleanse the spaces between the teeth which can be effectively reached in no other way. A fine tooth powder can be made of six ounces of prepared chalk, cassia powder half an ounce and an ounce of orris root. These are to be well mixed and may be colored with red lake or any other innocent substance, according to fancy. Cleanly habits should be a part of every child's education; and if they have been neglected in that formative period of life, let them be taken up and studied and practiced later on, for in this respect we are surely "never too old to learn." It should also be understood that merely external and visible treatment is not all that is necessary. Let parents impress this lesson earnestly in the interest of health, decency and morality.

Mineral India Rubber Asphalt.

Another article formerly considered worthless has been added to the useful products, and is known as mineral India rubber asphalt. It is produced during the process of refining tar by sulphuric acid, and forms a black material very much like ordinary asphalt and elastic India rubber. When heated so that the slimy matter is reduced to about sixty per cent of the former size, a hard substance is produced resembling ebony. It can be dissolved in naphtha, and is an excellent non-conductor of electricity, and therefore valuable for covering telegraph wires and for other purposes where a non-conducting substance is needed. Dissolved, the mineral India rubber produces good water-proof varnish. The manufacture of the material is said to be very profitable and to pay the inventor 400 to 500 per cent.—Electrician.

Prayed For His Mother Also.

A little boy who had been punished for an exhibition of ugliness was sent to bed with instructions to pray that he might be a better boy in future and that his temper might be reformed. His mother stole to the door of his room to make sure that her commands were carried out, and this is the prayer that she heard: "O, Lord, please take away my bad temper. And while you are about it you might as well take mother's."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Same Way with the Forefathers.

"How do you like the boys in this country?" some one asked the English lad.

"I can't understand 'em," he answered. "When you lick a boy in England, he says, "I've had enough; the fight is yours;" but when you lick a boy in America he gets up off the ground and says, "Now I'm going to take a rock to ye."

A Gallant Deed.

An incident of the battle of Waterloo, heard from the duke himself, was told by Lord Shaftesbury, the philanthropist, to the late Sir George Burns, in whose biography it is given by Mr. Edwin Hodder. At one moment in the battle the duke of Wellington was left alone, his aides-de-camp having been dispatched with messages A gentleman in plain clothes rode up to him and said: "Can I be of any use, sir?" The duke looked at him and instantly said: Yes; take that pencilnote to the commanding officer" (pointing to a regiment in the heat of the engagement.) The note was taken and delivered, its bearer galloping through the thick of the fight to execute his commission. After the battle the duke made every inquiry but never could find out to whom he was indebted for this brave service. He told Lord Shaftesbury that he considered this one of the most gallant deeds that had ever come under his notice, seeing that it was done without prospect of honor or reward.—London Daily News.

Put to Flight by Porcupines.

Although it is a fact that there are porcupines in this part of the state, one is so rarely seen that few people are aware of it. John Weeks of Friendship has lived on a farm there for forty years, and it was not until a few days ago that he had any idea that he was living neighbor to such a thing as a porcupine. He was digging potatoes in one of his fields, when a dog that was with him suddenly bristled up and made a dash for a row of bushes along one edge of the field a couple of rods away. The dog came out of the bushes as suddenly as he had dashed in, and with him was a little animal which Farmer Weeks had no difficulty in recognizing as a porcupine. The dog was yelping at the top of his lungs, and lost no time in getting away from the spiny little beast he had so inconsiderately attacked. His nose and head were filled with quills the porcupine had shed. Farmer Weeks, provoked at the plight his dog was in, rushed upon the porcupine, which remained at the edge of the bushes, every quill erect, and attacked it with his hoe. The little animal squealed and shook itself until its quills rattled like castanets. Instantly two other porupines came running to its aid, and they looked so fierce and belligerent that Farmer Weeks beat a retreat and followed his dog, who had gone yelping home. After the farmer and his family had pulled the porcupine's weapons out of the dog's face and head, Weeks took his gun and went out to shoot the porcupines. He succeeded in killing one of them, but the other two got away.—Hornellsville Correspondence New York Sun.

THE DREADED MAFIA.

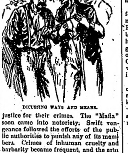
SOMETHING ABOUT THE ITALIAN ASSASSINS IN NEW ORLEANS.

Origin of the Mafia—Its Rise and Progress in This Country—Its Methods and Acts of Vengeance—Bold Actions of Chief Hennessy.

[Special New Orleans Correspondence.]

The murder of David C. Hennessy, chief of police of the city of New Orleans, by order of the "Mafia" (a gang of Sicilian thieves and cutthroats who have made the great Southern metropolis their headquarters), has startled the country with the possibilities of crime and public danger involved in the wholesale importation of European paupers and criminals to this country.

What is the "Mafia?" It is a secret organization composed entirely of Sicilians, and was founded by an Italian cutthroat boasting the name of Mafia at Palermo about 100 years ago. Mafia was a noted thief, counterfeiter, and brigand, and the object of his society was to organize all representatives of his ilk, so as to protect, by threats, terrorism, and secret assassination such members as might be brought to the bar of justice for their crimes. The "Mafia" soon came into notoriety. Swift vengeance followed the efforts of the public authorities to punish any of its members. Crimes of inhuman cruelty and barbarity became frequent, and the arm of civil justice was almost paralyzed by the boldness and vindictiveness of the assassins.



DICUSSING WAYS AND MEANS.

For the better part of a century, during the reign of revolution and despotism in Italy, the "Mafia" flourished and had pretty much its own way. It was undoubtedly at times in alliance with the police powers of the government, and brigandage and robbery reigned supreme in Italy outside of the large cities, and often in the very centers of population.

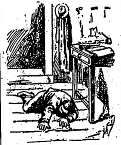
Of late years, however, the restoration of a stable government in Italy has led to the gradual suppression and expulsion of the Mafia. Undoubtedly members of the gang came to this country and established an organization here.

Vincenzo Arditi was one of these. For some grievance he set fire to a house in New Orleans, seeking to burn the owner to death at the same time. He was sent to the penitentiary; organized a branch of the Mafia among his fellow criminals; escaped from prison, and was next heard of at St. Louis, where he committed a murder. He next went to Chicago, opened a saloon, organized a gang of cutthroats there, and left a fellow countryman whom he suspected of treachery, lying dead on the floor of his room, using a knife so long that it stuck out from both sides of the dead man when he was discovered where he fell.

Arditi escaped to New York, opened a store, which he fired to obtain the insurance, and, failing his purpose, horribly mutilated a fellow countryman whom he believed to be instrumental in causing his defeat.

He invited his victim to a private apartment to have a glass of beer, offered a beaker with one hand, and with the other, by one stroke of the razor, laid the poor wretch's face open from his forehead to the point of his chin. When the wounded man, almost by a miracle, recovered, and was able to leave the Chambers Street Hospital, he was afraid to complain against Arditi, who went scot free.

In October, 1888, Antonio Flaccomio was assassinated in the shadow of the Cooper Union Building, in New York city. Flaccomio had been adjudged a traitor to the organization, of which at one time he was a prominent member. The cause of his assassination was the testimony that he gave shortly before his assassination against some of his countrymen, who were counterfeiters, as well as brother members of La Mafia. Flaccomio was sentenced to death, and two brothers, Carlo and Vincenzo Quarrara, were selected to kill him. The former plunged the stiletto into the doomed man's heart.



THE VENGEANCE OF THE MAFIA.

The secret service of the United States has been aware for several years of the operations of La Mafia in this country. Their counterfeiting, which is their diversion, as well as a part of the duties of their profession and crime, could not fail sooner or later to bring them before the eye of the Government detective force. Sabastiano Lanza, who held meetings with a regular group at 95 Thompson street, New York city, sold Mafia counterfeits at 40 cents on the dollar to colored people, boys, girls, his own countrymen, and any American he could find simple minded enough to buy.

Each counterfeit distributor organized a group around him and turned his revenues into the general Mafia treasury. Lanza was watched and arrested on the charge of counterfeiting.

Eight out of the ten of the Mafia murders committed in this country were ostensibly done in the heat of passion over a game of cards. Flaccomio had been playing a game of cards called "inca" shortly before he went to his death on the fatal Sunday night in the shadow of the Cooper Institute. But that is a ruse of the Mafia in a majority of cases. The killing and quarreling are alike arranged beforehand. The murderer has no fear of his fellow countrymen appearing in court as witnesses against him. They dare not testify against him, much less accuse him.

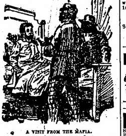
The Mafia probably made a mistake in locating in this city. There still exists here and throughout the Southwest a sentiment of personal honor or "chivalry," as it is called, that leads society generally to abhor the secret assassin. True courage and grit is honored. The man who faces his enemy in a fair fight is a hero.

Such a man was David C. Hennessy, chief of police of New Orleans. He was a type of the cool and fearless Southerner. He was born in this city. His father "died with his boots on," having fallen by a pistol shot in an affray in a well known bar room. "Dave" grew to manhood a delicate and slender stripling, but with the cool courage and fearlessness of a lion. He had a special talent for detective work, and, before he was twenty, was a special officer on the police force in this city.

In 1879, Michael Hennessy, a cousin of D. C. Hennessy, was shot by Thomas Deveraux in a saloon in this city. Hennessy happened to enter during the brawl, and, as his cousin fell dead, pulled his pistol and blew Devereaux's brains out. He was tried for murder and acquitted.

After this he rapidly rose in his profession as a detective. One of his most notable feats was the clever capture of Exposito, the famous chief of Italian brigands, and the promptness with which he secured the arrest of the Provenzano gang, after the attempted assassination of a number of Italians at the corner of Claiborne and Esplanade streets, was warmly commended by every law abiding citizen of New Orleans.

From this time he set himself to root out the Mafia, of whose organization and existence here he had the fullest knowledge. He knew that his efforts would lead to his assassination, and often stated that he expected death at any moment. His reckless bravery was well known, however, and, although he was of moderate stature and slender figure, and continually went about day and night unaccompanied, the desperadoes hesitated to attack him.



A VISIT FROM THE MAFIA.

It is pretty well settled that Hennessy's murderer was Macheca, a prominent Italian fruit vender. Of late years he had not prospered in business, and it is surmised that he joined the Mafia and resolved to handle counterfeit money, and that he suspected Chief Hennessy of having obtained knowledge of his operations.

Public sentiment is thoroughly aroused here, and there is no doubt that the Mafia will be thoroughly ferreted out and crushed so far as this city is concerned.

The police authorities here have obtained some very interesting facts in regard to the history of the Mafia from the Italian counsel.

La Mafia is a modern organization based on medieval sentiment. It is related to the Camorra, of Naples. It is a society confined not to Italians, but to Sicilians, the baser kind of Greeks, who bring their national customs, their secret societies and traditions of murder with them. If a Sicilian believes that he can provide for the protection of his person and property without having recourse to law that person is a Mafiosa.

Murder is the corner stone of the social fabric of Sicily. A Sicilian wishes to sell a farm. A Copo Mafia wishes to buy it. Nobody dares to bid against him. If anybody is so foolhardy he would be shot next day from behind a wall or the corner of a house. If a Copo Mafia runs for the mayoralty of a village nobody runs against him. He invariably has a unanimous election. His hands may be red with a dozen murders, and his pockets filled with blackmail. Not a servant can be discharged without reference to the unseen Mafia. The Mafiosi rule their district as despots. If they have rivalries the knife decides it.

With the advent of Victor Emanuel the power of the Mafia began to decline. It still has a hold in Naples and throughout Sicily, and occasionally its power is made known by secret assassinations. Most of the prominent members of the society, however, have been compelled to flee from Italy.

The organization in this country has begun its struggle with Anglo Saxon law and order. There is happily no question as to the result.

St. Clair

Concise.

A Western man who owned a great farm in Dakota was obliged to cross the water for business purposes. For three months he heard nothing from the man whom he had left in charge of the farm, and at last he became somewhat disturbed. He was an illiterate person, though a capital farmer, and the writing of a telegram was a matter of some difficulty. At last he sent off the following comprehensive message: "Is things all right at the farm?" Impatiently he awaited the answer. It would be expensive, he felt sure, whether it brought good or bad news, judging by his own experience. But his trusty foreman was a person of few words and strict ideas of economy, and the envelope which his anxious employer received as soon as possible contained simply this message: "Things is."

A Pretty Mole Brings Good Luck.

According to the New York Sun, a mole doesn't mar a woman's beauty; per contra, it brings good luck. A very well known French woman has her gowns cut extremely low in the back that she may display to her admirers a large black mole, which is a little lower than midway between her neck and her waist. The Arabs, wanting to describe a beautiful woman, say of her: "Her face is like to the moon in the fullness of its glory, her cheek is like jasmine with moles on it, her hair is like the horses' tails."

He Took the Best One.

At a moment when the battle of Sadowa was as yet undecided, and when, indeed, the Prusisans appeared to be losing ground, Bismarck was wandering over the battle-field like a soul in agony. Certain historians have gone so far as to say that he kept a loaded revolver in his holster for the express purpose of blowing out his brains if the Austrians had won the day. Presently he fell in with Von Moltke, who was quietly looking on at the fight. Being anxious to arrive at an idea of the exact state of affairs, he pulled out his cigar-case, in which only two "londres" were left—one of them extra good, and the other of very inferior quality. He handed the case to Von Moltke, who, after examining the cigars for a long time, silently helped himself to the best. That was enough for the chancellor, and he remarked to some one near at hand: "When I saw Von Moltke use such deliberation in choosing his cigar, and above all when he chose the best, I knew that was a sign that things were going well with us."

If mince meat is chopped, salted and sweetened and canned while hot, and after a few days reopened and the cans filled up with cold West India molasses, it will prevent its moulding.

Ringing Noises

In the ears, sometimes a roaring, buzzing sound, or snapping like the report of a pistol, are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also results from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for catarrh, which it cures by eradicating from the blood the impurity which causes and promotes this disease. Try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh, and received great relief and benefit from it. The catarrh was very disagreeable, especially in the winter, causing constant discharge from my nose, ringing noises in my ears, and pains in the back of my head. The effort to clear my head in the morning by hawking and spitting was painful. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me relief immediately, while in time I was entirely cured. I am never without the medicine in my house as I think it is worth its weight in gold." Mrs. G. B. Gibb, 1029 Eighth street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

THE WEEK'S DIGEST.

A Brief Record of the Happenings of the Past Week.

WASHINGTON.

The treasury department has decided that grain taken to Canada to be ground cannot be returned to the United States without payment of duty.

A committee of ladies appointed by the national convention of the W. C. T. U., held at Atlanta, Ga., called on the president and secretary of war and urged him to issue an order forbidding the sale of beer and light wines at military garrisons.

Postmaster Gen. Wanamaker says in regard to criticisms made upon him by a Pennsylvania clergyman because mails are carried and postoffice business is transacted on Sunday. Mr. Wanamaker says he thinks congress is the proper place to go for action in the matter, but if any community, by the petition of a considerable majority of its population, asked for the absolute closing of its office on Sunday the request would receive favorable consideration.

PERSONAL.

H. S. H. Clarke, first vice president and general manager of the Missouri Pacific, is to succeed Adams as president of the Union Pacific.

A. V. H. Carpenter, general passenger agent, and James P. Whaling, general auditor of the Milwaukee & St. Paul road are to be retired on half-pay for life.

CASUALTIES.

In New York Carlo Durot and Joseph Dego were killed and Rafella Roato and Carmen Hurod seriously injured by the explosion of a dynamite cartridge.

The schooner William Jones, lumber-laden, was driven ashore near the mouth of the Manistee (Mich.) harbor and totally wrecked. The crew were rescued.

An appalling accident occurred at St. John, N. B. The nest of boilers in E. D. Jewett's mill at South Bay exploded with terrific force, instantly killing five persons and injuring several others.

While hunting in Mississippi Senator Wade Hampton of South Carolina was accidently shot by his son, two small shot striking him in the left eyelid. Though confined to a dark room, the injury is not considered in any way serious.

Word has been received from Seven Lakes, New Mexico in the Galtinas mountains, that four sheep herders were killed recently, by a hail storm. Sixteen others and 1,600 head of sheep are missing. The messenger says that it was the severest hailstorm ever known in the mountains.

A carriage containing Charles Lisherness, wife and child was struck by the night train from Bath, near Cowleys, Maine. The engine scooped the seat from the carriage, and when the train was stopped the three were found sitting on the seat of the carriage, resting on the cowcatcher. Mr. Lisherness struck the boiler head and was badly injured, but the others were uninjured.

L. W. Morgan, while repairing an electric light wire in San Francisco, received the full force of 1,000 volts of electricity. The wire was forty-three feet from the ground, from which Morgan hung by his hands. A fellow workman tried to bring him down, but his grasp on the wire could not be broken and the wire had to be cut. He dropped unconscious into the arms of his rescuer, who brought him safely to the ground. The palm of Morgan's hands were burned to the bone, and after regaining consciousness he suffered intensely. Morgan will probably recover.

WICKEDNESS.

Barney Brell killed his wife and himself at Glade Run, Pa. They had lived a cat and dog life for twenty-five years.

Near Ash Grove, Mo., Jennie Kennedy was seriously stabbed by a masked man, who then tied her to a tree and tried to burn her to death. A jilted lover is suspected.

L. M. Noyes, ex-postmaster of Akron, Ind., has been arrested in Chicago, charged with forgeries aggregating several thousand dollars. He admitted his guilt.

In Philadelphia William Pennington and Richard Corsey, colored, fought with razors in a dark room. Corsey was badly injured and Pennington will die.

The wife of Congressman-elect Coombs of Brooklyn committed suicide by jumping from the sixth story of a hotel. The lady was a poetess and novelist.

A branch of the Granite State Provident association at Cleveland, Ohio, is closed, its agents missing, and policy holders out $15,000.

The race riot at Bishopville, S. C., is not yet ended. Seven negroes were wounded in the conflict, one of them fatally. Posses have been sent from Columbia and more bloodshed is almost certain to follow.

At Green Ridge, Pa., Joseph Ford quarreled with his wife and struck her, whereupon his twelve-year-old son seized a shotgun and discharged the contents in his father's neck. Ford cannot recover.

Lieut. Frank L. McNair of Kirkville, Iowa, prominent in political and Grand Army circles, has committed suicide by drowning himself in a pond. Mental aberration was the cause.

T. B. Allen and John Pichett fought with knives on a ferry boat at Chattanooga, Tenn. Allen received thirteen cuts, one of which may prove fatal. Pichett was cut four times and he died in a few minutes after.

Six persons in a Chicago boarding house have been poisoned. The supposition is that the poison was put in a mutton stew by a colored waiter who had been discharged. Two of the victims are in a serious condition.

Mrs. Myron Marston, a widow aged seventy, living at White River Junction, Vt., was brutally murdered by unknown persons. The woman has considerable property, but was not accustomed to keep much with her, and nothing is missing.

Three tramps went to Carrey, Ohio, captured the nightwatchman and confined him in the calaboose, and burglarized three or four stores and then held up the night clerk of the Galt House, securing a number of valuables. No clue.

In Pittsburg, Messrs. Kimberly, Eggleston and Snyder, local officers in the Granite State Provident association, were given a hearing and held in $3,000 bail each on the charge of conspiracy. The court was jammed with victims anxious to testify.

At Salem, Mass., G. W. Gilbert, a former scout with Buffalo Bill and a well known citizen, thrashed C. W. Cochran, editor of the Call, on the street for publishing an article reflecting on an enterprise with which Gilbert is connected.

The reported robbery at Milwaukee, of William Clarke of Sheboygan, Wis., of $19,500 seems to take on an entire new phase, and hints are to the effect that no highwayman held him up, but that the money has mysteriously disappeared as part of a singular plan. The police department promises startling revelations.

There is trouble on the Menominee reservation in Wisconsin. One hundred and fifty armed Indians surrounded the logging camp of Henry Sherry, on the sixteenth section, near Evergreen river, and burned the camp after the men had retired. Eleven horses and fourteen oxen and the camp outfit for fifteen men were all destroyed. The thirteen white men were unharmed and fled for their lives. The Indians claim the white men are trespassers, although the sixteenth section belongs to the state.

The arrest of John Chugg, a Union Pacific conductor, reveals the fact that the company has been swindled out of thousands of dollars during the last year. Local passenger conductors between Salt Lake City and local points have been in the habit of taking up tickets, and, without canceling them, putting them in their pockets, after which they were sold to scalpers. Some of the tickets were sold as often as five times. The case was brought to light by detectives, who discovered Chugg's wife in the act of disposing of a bundle of 200 tickets. All the scalpers in the city, it is said, are implicated and will be arrested.

The King of Holland is dead. On the evening of Nov. 23, there was a sudden change for the worse in the kings condition, the symptoms being those of uraemia. The queen was immediately sent for, and staid at the patient's bedside during the night. Life ebbed away quietly. The public buildings are closed, and all amusements have been suspended. The ministers assembled in council at noon. The [illegible] all the royal places are closed, as are the flags at half-mast.

IN GENERAL.

Officers of the Erie road have refused a request for an advance in wages. The men refuse to say whether they will strike.

It is reported that Oscar Neebe, the anarchist, will be liberated from Joliet prison, where he has been serving a fifteen year sentence for complicity in the Haymarket riot.

Mrs. Charles Wykoff, at Mount Ætna, Ind., gave birth to a pound-and-a-quarter infant. After two weeks the child weighs a pound and a half, and seems quite healthy.

The Oregon Improvement company, through solvent, will apply for the appointment of a receiver. This is due to the condition of the money market.

F. B. Crocker, president of the Denver board of public works, who has been missing for several days, has not been heard of. It is now generally believed that he became insane over public matters, and has wandered away and committed suicide.

Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, P. T. Barnum is still a very sick man, and his condition excites the alarm of the family. It may be said with certainty that the old showman's days seem to be drawing to a close.

A sequel to the Kemmler case, that of a Japanese murderer, is argued in the supreme court, the contention being that the execution of Kemmler shows that electrocution is a shocking and cruel method of executing the death penalty.

Elbert Rapplege, the correspondent of the Mail and Express of New York, has arrived in Astoria, Ore., having made the journey from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans in a canoe, with the exception of a few short portages around the rapids.

The failure of the banking firm of Oostendorp of Antwerp was announced. The firm's liabilities amount to $1,000,000. Its assets consists largely of land in the Argentine Republic. A large number of firms are affected by the failure.

The story of Indian troubles at the Kasheena agency, Wis., when Sherry's camp was said to have been surrounded by Indians, proved to be a canard. The story of the outbreak was started by some of Sherry's men in order to create excitement and make themselves heroes in the eyes of the people.

It is stated on good authority that the Union Stock Yards and Transit company of Chicago have declared war on Armour, Swift, Morris and Libby, the "Big Four" packers who recently purchased a large tract of land in Indiana for the purpose of erecting stock yards in competition with the Union stock yards of Chicago.

Dr. Fritz Daum of Kansas City has received from Berlin some of Dr. Koch's consumption virus, and inoculated S. T. Austin of Kansas City, Kan., a man in an advanced stage of consumption. The effects were almost immediate. The circulation was better, and in a few minutes the cough decreased, and the expectoration of the patient was much easier. Later in the day he found Mr. Austin much improved in health, and administered another half-drachm. The same good effects were noticed.

Agent Wright, of the Rosebud agency, in South Dakota, who was some time ago suspended, was reinstated by Secretary Noble. A special agent recommended Wright's suspension pending an investigation of the cause of a discrepancy of about two thousand in the number of Indians for whom Wright had been drawing rations. The census showed 5,400; Wright's roll called for rations for 7,500. Investigation showed that the list was the one given Wright by his predecessor, Spencer. If rations were issued for more Indians than were on the reservation, the extra quantity was divided up by the Indians, who had a good thing in thus perpetrating a fraud on the government.

THE MESSAGE.

President Harrison Launches Something Like Twelve Thousand Words Upon Congress.

In His Opinion the New Tariff Law Is Precisely What the Country Needs.

To the Senate and House of Representatives: The reports of the several executive departments which will be laid before congress in the usual course will exhibit in detail the operations of the government for the last fiscal year. Only the more important incidents and results, and chiefly such as may be the foundation of the recommendations I shall submit, will be referred to in this annual message.

The vast and increasing business of the government has been transacted by the several departments during the year with faithfulness, energy and success. The revenues, amounting to above $450,000,000, have been collected and disbursed without revealing, so far as I can ascertain, a single case of defalcation or embezzlement. An earnest effort has been made to stimulate a sense of responsibility and public duty in all officers and employes of every grade, and the work done by them has almost wholly escaped unfavorable criticism.

Pursuant to the invitation authorized by congress, the representatives of every independent state of the American continent and of Hayti met in conference in this capital in October, 1889, and continued in session until the 19th of last April. This important convocation marks a most interesting and influential epoch in the history of the Western hemisphere. It is noteworthy that Brazil, invited while under an imperial form of government, shared as a republic in the deliberations and results of the conference. The recommendations of this conference were all transmitted to congress at the last session.

The legislation of congress at the last session is in conformity with the propositions of the conference, and the proclamation therein provided for will be issued when the other powers have given notice of their adhesion.

Toward the end of the past year the only independent monarchical government on the Western continent, that of Brazil, ceased to exist and was succeeded by a republic. Diplomatic relations were at once established with the new government, but it was not completely recognized until an opportunity had been afforded to ascertain that it had popular approval and support. When the course of events had yielded assurance of this fact no time was lost in extending to the new government a full and cordial welcome into the family of American commonwealths. It is confidently believed that the good relations of the two countries will be preserved, and that the future will witness an increased intimacy of intercourse and an expansion of their mutual commerce.

The peace of Central America has again been disturbed through a revolutionary change in Salvador, which was not recognized by other states, and hostilities broke out between Salvador and Guatemala, threatening to involve all Central America in conflict and to undo the progress which had been made toward a union of their interests. The efforts of this government were promptly and zealously exerted to compose their differences, and though the active efforts of the representatives of the United States a provisional treaty of peace was signed Aug. 26, whereby the right of the republic of Salvador to choose its own rulers was recognized. Gen. Ezeta, the chief of the provisional government, has since been confirmed in the presidency by the assembly, and diplomatic recognition duly followed.

In pursuance of the concurrent resolution of Oct. 1, 1890, I have proposed to the governments of Mexico and Great Britain to consider a conventional regulation of the passage of Chinese laborers across our southern and northern frontiers.

On the 22d day of August last Sir Edmund Monson, the arbitrator selected under the treaty of Dec. 6, 1888, rendered an award to the effect that no compensation was due from the Danish government to the United States on account of what is commonly known as the Carlos-Butterfield claim.

Our relations with the French republic continue to be cordial. Our representative at that court has very diligently urged the removal of the restrictions imposed upon our meat products, and it is believed that substantial progress has been made towards a just settlement.

The Samoan treaty, signed last year by the representatives of the United States, Germany and Great Britain, after due ratification and exchange has begun to produce salutary effects. The formation of the government agreed upon will soon replace the disorder of the past by a stable administration, alike just to the native and equitable to the three powers most concerned in trade and intercourse with the Samoan islands. The chief justice has been chosen by the king of Sweden and Norway, on the invitation of the three powers, and will soon be installed. The land commission and the municipal council are in process of organization. A rational and evenly-distributed scheme of taxation, both municipal and upon imports, is in operation. Malietoa is respected as king.

BEHRING SEA.

Hopes for a Satisfactory Adjustment of the Sealing Trouble.

The new treaty of extradition with Great Britain, after due ratification, was proclaimed on the 25th of last March. Its beneficial working is already apparent.

The difference between the two governments touching the fur seal question in the Behring sea is not yet adjusted, as will be seen by the correspondence which will soon be laid before congress. The offer to submit the question to arbitration, as proposed by Her Majesty's government, has not been accepted, for the reason that the form of submission proposed is not thought to be calculated to assure a conclusion satisfactory to either party. It is sincerely hoped that before the opening of another sealing season some arrangement may be effected which will assure to the United States a property right, derived from Russia, which was not disregarded by any nation for more than eighty years preceding the outbreak of the existing trouble.

In the tariff act a wrong was done to the kingdom of Hawaii, which I am bound to presume was wholly unintentional. Duties were levied on certain commodities which are included in the reciprocity treaty now existing between the United States and the kingdom of Hawaii, without indicating the necessary exception in favor of that kingdom. I hope congress will repair what might otherwise seem to be a breach of faith on the part of this government.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

Revenues and Expenditures of the Government During the Year.

The revenues of the government from all sources for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, were $463,963,080.55, and the total expenditures for the same period were $358,618,584.52. The postal receipts have not heretofore been included in the statement of these aggregates, and for the purpose of comparison the sum of $60,882,097.92 should be deducted from both sides of the account. The surplus for the year, including the amount applied to the sinking fund, was $105,344,496.03. The receipts for 1890 were $16,030,923.79 and the expenditures $15,739,871 in excess of those of 1889. The customs receipts increased $5,835,842.88, and the receipts from internal revenue $11,725,191.89, while, on the side of expenditures, that for pensions was $19,312,075.96 in excess of the preceding year.

The treasury statement for the current fiscal year, partly actual and partly estimated, is as follows: Receipts from all sources, $406,000,000; total expenditures, $354,000,000, leaving a surplus of $52,000,000—not taking the postal receipts into account on either side. The loss of revenue from customs for the last quarter is estimated at $25,000,000, but from this is deducted a gain of about $16,000,000, realized during the first four months of the year. For the year 1892 the total estimated receipts are $373,000,000, and the estimated expenditures $357,852,209.42, leaving an estimated surplus of $15,147,790.58, which, with a cash balance of $52,000,000 at the beginning of the year, will give $67,147,790.58 as the sum available for the redemption of outstanding bonds or other uses. The estimates of receipts and expenditures for the postoffice department, being equal, are not included in this statement on either side.

The act "directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of treasury notes thereon," approved July 14, 1890, has been administered by the secretary of the treasury with an earnest purpose to get into circulation at the earliest possible dates the full monthly amounts in the treasury notes contemplated by its provisions, and at the same time to give to the market for silver bullion such support as the law contemplates. The recent depreciation in the price of silver has been observed with regret. The rapid rise in price which anticipated and followed the passage of this act was influenced in some degree by speculation, and the recent reaction is in part the result of the same cause and in part of the recent monetary disturbances. Some months of further trial will be necessary to determine the permanent effect of the recent legislation upon silver values; but it is gratifying to know that the increased circulation secured by the act has exerted and will continue to exert a most beneficial influence upon business and upon general values.

I notice with great pleasure the statement of the secretary that the receipts from internal revenue have increased during the last fiscal year nearly $12,000,000 and that the cost of collecting revenue was less by $90,617 than for the same purpose in the preceding year. The percentage of cost of collecting the customs revenue was less for the last fiscal year than ever before.

The customs administration board provided for by the act of June 10, 1890, was selected with great care and is composed in part of men whose previous experience in the administration of the old customs regulations had made them familiar with the evils to be remedied, and in part of men whose legal and judicial acquirements and experience seemed to fit them for the work of interpreting and applying the new statute. The chief aim of the law is to secure honest valuations of all dutiable merchandise and to make these valuations uniform at all our ports of entry. It had been made manifest by a congressional investigation that a system of undervaluation had been long in use by certain classes of importers, resulting not only in a great loss of revenue, but in a most intolerable discrimination against honesty. It is not seen how this legislation, when it is understood, can be regarded by the citizens of any country having commercial relations with us as unfriendly. If any duty is supposed to be excessive, let the complaint be lodged there. It will surely not be claimed by any well disposed people that a remedy may be sought and allowed in a system of quasi smuggling.

OUR GROWING NAVY.

Nine New Vessels Put In Commission During the Year.

The construction and equipment of the new ships for the navy have made very satisfactory progress. Since March 4, 1889, nine new vessels have been put in commission, and during this winter four more, including one monitor, will be added. The construction of the other vessels authorized is being pushed, both in the government and private yards, with energy, and watched with the most scrupulous care.

The experiments conducted during the year to test the relative resisting power of armor plates have been so valuable as to attract great attention in Europe. The only part of the work upon the new ships that is threatened by unusual delay is the armor plating, and every effort is being made to reduce that to the minimum. It is a source of congratulation that the anticipated influence of these modern vessels upon the esprit de corps of the officers and seamen has been fully realized. Confidence and pride in the ship among the crew are equivalent to a secondary battery. Your favorable consideration is invited to the recommendations of the secretary.

NOBLE'S REPORT.

Review of the Work in the Department of the Interior.

The report of the secretary of the interior exhibits with great fullness and clearness the vast work of that department and the satisfactory results attained. The suggestions made by him are earnestly commended to the consideration of congress, though they cannot all be given particular mention here.

The several acts of congress looking to the reduction of the larger Indian reservations, to the more rapid settlement of the Indians upon individual allotments, and the restoration to the public domain of lands in excess of their needs, have been largely carried into effect, so far as the work was confided to the executive. Agreements have been concluded since March 4, 1889, involving the cession to the United States of about 14,726,000 acres of land. These contracts have, as required by law, been submitted to congress for ratification and for the appropriations necessary to carry them into effect. Those with the Sisseton and Wahpeton, Sac and Fox, Iowa Pottawattamies and absentee Shawnees and Cœur d'Alene tribes have not received the sanction of congress. Attention is also called to the fact that the appropriations made in the case of the Sioux Indians have not covered all the stipulated payments. This should be promptly corrected. If an agreement is confirmed all of its terms should be complied with without delay and full appropriations should be made.

The policy outlined in my last annual message in relation to the patenting of lands to settlers upon the public domain has been carried out in the administration of the land office. No general suspicion or imputation of fraud has been allowed to delay the hearing and adjudication of individual cases upon their merits. The purpose has been to perfect the title of honest settlers with such promptness that the value of the entry might not be swallowed up by the expenses and extortions to which delay subjected the claimant. The average monthly issue of agricultural patents has been increased about 6,000.

The disability pension act, which was approved on the 27th of June last, has been put into operation as rapidly as was practicable. The increased clerical force provided was selected and assigned to work, and a considerable part of the force engaged in examinations on the field was recalled and added to the working force of the office. The examination and adjudication of claims have, by reason of improved methods, been more rapid than ever before. There is no economy to the government in delay, while there is much hardship and injustice to the soldier. The anticipated expenditure, while very large, will not, it is believed, be in excess of the estimates made before the enactment of the law. This liberal enlargement of the general law should suggest a more careful scrutiny of bills for special relief, both as to the cases where relief is granted and as to the amount allowed.

The increasing numbers and influence of the non-Mormon portion in Utah are observed with satisfaction. The recent letter of Wilford Woodruff, president of the Mormon church, in which he advised his people "to refrain from contracting any marriage forbidden by law," has attracted wide attention, and it is hoped that its influence will be highly beneficial in restraining all infractions of the laws of the United States. But the fact should not be overlooked that the doctrine or belief of the church that polygamous marriages are rightful and supported by divine revelation remains unimpaired. President Woodruff does not renounce the doctrine, but refrains from teaching it, and advises against the practice of it because the law is against it. It is quite true that the law should not attempt to deal with the faith or belief of any one; but it is quite another thing, and the only safe thing, so to deal with the Territory of Utah as that those who believe polygamy to be rightful shall not have the power to make it lawful.

The admission of the States of Wyoming and Idaho to the Union are events full of interest and congratulation, not only to the people of those states, now happily endowed with a full participation in our privileges and responsibilities, but to all our people. Another belt of states stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The work of the patent office has won from all sources very high commendation. The amount accomplished has been very largely increased, and all the results have been such as to secure confidence and consideration for the suggestions of the commissioner.

The enumeration of the people of the United States under the provisions of the act of March 1, 1890, has been completed and the result will be at once officially communicated to congress. The completion of this decennial enumeration devolves upon congress the duty of making a new apportionment of representatives "among the several states according to their respective numbers."

THE NEW DEPARTMENT.

Especial Attention Called to the Report of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The report of the secretary of agriculture deserves especial attention in view of the fact that the year has been marked in a very unusual degree by agitation and organization among the farmers looking to an increase in the profits of their business. It will be found that the efforts of the department have been intelligently and zealously directed to the promotion of the interests intrusted to its care.

A very substantial improvement in the markets prices of the leading farm products has been realized during the year. The price of wheat advanced from 81 cents in October, 1889, to $1.00¾ in October, 1890; corn from 31 cents to 50¼ cents; oats from 19¼ cents to 43 cents, and barley from 63 cents to 78 cents. Meats showed a substantial but not an large increase. Export trade in live animals and fowls show a very large increase; the total value of such exports for the year ending June 30, 1890, was $33,000,000, and the increase over the preceding year was over $15,000,000. Nearly 200,000 more cattle and over 45,000 more hogs were exported than in the preceding year. The export trade in beef and pork products and in dairy products was very largely increased, the increase in the article of butter alone being from $15,504,988 pounds to 29,748,042 pounds, and the total increase in the value of meat and dairy products exported being $34,000,000. This trade, so directly helpful to the farmer, it is believed will be yet further and very largely increased when the system of inspection and sanitary supervision now provided by law is brought fully into operation.

The information given by the secretary of the progress and prospects of the beet sugar industry is full of interest. It has already passed the experimental stage and is a commercial success. The area over which the sugar beet can be successfully cultivated is very large, and another field crop of great value is offered to the choice of the farmer.

The secretary of the treasury concurs in the recommendation of the secretary of agriculture that the official supervision provided by the tariff law for sugar of domestic production shall be transferred to the department of agriculture.

THE NEW TARIFF.

Its Permanent Effects Upon Trade and Prices Still Largely Conjecture.

The general tariff act has only partially gone into operation, some of its important provisions being limited to take effect at dates yet in the future. The general provisions of the law have been in force less than sixty days. Its permanent effects upon trade and prices still largely stand in conjecture. It is curious to note that the advance in the prices of articles wholly unaffected by the tariff act were by many ascribed to that. Notice was not taken of the fact that the general tendency of the markets was upward from influences wholly apart from the recent tariff legislation. The enlargement of our currency by the silver bill undoubtedly gave an upward tendency to trade and had a marked effect on prices; but this natural and decided effect of the silver legislation was by many erroneously attributed to the tariff act.

There is neither wisdom nor justice in the suggestion that the subject of tariff revision shall be opened before this law has had a fair trial. It is quite true that our tariff schedules are subject to objections. No bill was ever framed, I suppose, that in all its rates and classifications had the full approval even of a party caucus. Such legislation is always and necessarily the product of compromise as to details, and the present law is no exception. But in its general scope and effect I think it will justify the support of those who believe that American legislation should conserve and defend American trade and the wages of American workmen.

The reciprocity clause of the tariff act wisely and effectively opens the way to secure a large reciprocal trade in exchange for the free admission to our ports of certain products. The right of independent nations to make special reciprocal trade concessions is well established, and does not impair either the comity due to other powers, or what is known as the "favored nation clause," so generally found in commercial treaties. What is given to one for an adequate agreed consideration cannot be claimed by another freely. The state of the revenues was such that we could dispense with any import duties upon coffee, tea, hides, and the lower grades of sugar and molasses. That the large advantage resulting to the countries producing and exporting these articles by placing them on the free list entitled us to expect a fair return in the way of customs concessions upon articles exported by us to them was so obvious that to have gratuitously abandoned this opportunity to enlarge our trade would have been an unpardonable error.

The indications thus far given are very favorable to action by the countries from which we receive our large imports of coffee and sugar, and it is confidently believed that if steam communication with countries is improved and enlarged, the next year will show a most gratifying increase in our exports of breadstuffs and provisions, as well as of some important lines of manufactured goods.

PENDING LEGISLATION.

Its Proper Consideration Will Require That No Working Day Be Lost.

In addition to the important bills that became laws before the adjournment of the last session, some other bills of the highest importance were well advanced toward a final vote, and now stand upon the calendars of the two houses in favored positions. The present session has a fixed limit, and if these measures are not now brought to a final vote, all the work that has been done upon them by this congress is lost. The proper consideration of these, of an apportionment bill, and of the annual appropriation bills will require not only that no working day of the session shall be lost, but that measures of minor and local interest shall not be allowed to interrupt or retard the progress of those that are of universal interest. In view of these conditions, I refrain from bringing before you at this time some suggestions that would otherwise be made, and most earnestly invoke your attention to the duty of perfecting the important legislation now well advanced. To some of these measures, which seem to me most important, I now briefly call your attention.

UNADJUSTED LAND GRANTS.

A Commission for the Trial of Question of Title Needed.

The subject of the unadjusted Spanish and Mexican land grants and the urgent necessity for providing some commission or tribunal for the trial of questions of title growing out of them were twice brought by me to the attention of congress at the last session. Bills have been reported from the proper committees in both houses upon the subject, and I very earnestly hope that this congress will put an end to the delay which has attended the settlement of the disputes as to title between the settlers and the claimants under these grants. These disputes retard the prosperity and disturb the peace of large and important communities. The governor of New Mexico, in his last report to the secretary of the interior, suggests some modification of the provisions of the pending bill relating to the small holdings of farm lands. I commend to your attention the suggestions of the secretary of the interior upon the subject.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS.

Free and Honest Elections the First Essential of National Life.

If any intelligent and loyal company of American citizens were required to catalogue the essential conditions of national life, I do not doubt that with absolute unanimity they would begin with "Free and honest elections." And it is gratifying to know that generally there is a growing and non-partisan demand for better election laws. But against this sign of hope and progress must be set the depressing and undeniable fact that election laws and methods are sometimes cunningly contrived to secure minority control, while violence completes the shortcomings of fraud.

One cannot be justly charged with unfriendliness to any section or class who seeks only to restrain violations of laws and of personal right. No community will find lawlessness profitable. No community can afford to have it known that the officers who are charged with the preservation of the public peace and the restraint of the criminal classes are themselves the product of fraud or violence. The magistrate is then without respect and the law without sanction. The floods of lawlessness cannot be leveled and made to run in one channel. The killing of a United States marshal carrying a writ of arrest for an election offense is full of promptings and suggestion to men who are pursued by a city marshal for a crime against life or property.

I venture again to remind you that the brief time remaining for the consideration of the important legislation now awaiting your attention offers no margin for waste. If the present duty is discharged with diligence, fidelity and courage, the work of the Fifty-first congress may be confidently submitted to the considerate judgment of the people.

FIENDS AT WORK.

Scouts Confirm the Reports of Outrages Committed by the Indians.

The Hostiles in Convenient Proximity to Their Retreats in the Bad Lands.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Dec. 3.—Scouts have been sent out to warn settlers along the line of the Cheyenne river. The hostiles are on White river at the mouth of Hay creek, seven miles from the government herd of 5,000 cattle.

All the ranches on White river have been robbed, ponies stolen and cattle killed.

Four spies sent out Friday morning have not returned, and it is feared they have been killed.

Signal fires north of the White river announce the approach of the Cheyennes.

The hostiles sent word to the friendly Indians here that all spies would be killed.

Half-breed settlers are fleeing to the agency, all reporting heavy losses in cattle and ponies.

GETTING IN THEIR HORSES.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Special Telegram, Dec. 3—The feature in the events of to-day is the skirmish that ranchmen are making to get their horses in some safe quarter where the Indians cannot get them. Scouts came in this morning and confirmed the reports of outrages by the Indians. The Indians have been living very comfortably for two or three days by calling on Batiste Rieveau whenever they felt hungry and ordering him to go out and kill a steer.

The military are perfectly safe at the present writing, and are in nowhere near as much danger as the interests of the settlers.

WITH WAR PAINT ON.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Dec. 3.—A government scout who has just left a hostile camp claims that he found quite a band of Indians on Pass and Black Pipe creeks in war paint and with pickets posted. There is nothing to verify his story. The Indians having drawn their rations, are leaving quietly for their villages.

Little Wound has made another effort to persuade his braves to forego hostilities, and he barely escaped from them with his life. Scouts are returning constantly and report increased preparations for war.

Gen. Brooke is restless over the non-receipt of orders to act.

The hostiles report the rounding up of 2,000 government cattle and horses.

WANTED, A BLIZZARD.

The Elements Can Put a Stop to the Ghost Dances.

STANDING ROCK AGENCY, N. D., Special Telegram, Dec. 3.—The diurnal report that Sitting Bull would be in the agency to-day made its appearance at guard mount and was contradicted and disappeared by stable call. It is considered probable that Bull will come on next Saturday, ration day, and when he comes he will be arrested. Maj. McLaughlin said to your correspondent to-day:

> There is no reason why Sitting Bull should not be arrested as soon as he comes within reach of the agency. He has broken his promise to send his children to school, and he did not come in last ration day as ordered. I expect him on Saturday, and we may get him before that time. I have ten scouts under the command of Shave Head, as trustworthy as he is brave, and these men will patrol the trails leading from Sitting Bull's camp to the agency. If the old recalcitrant comes within the power of these scouts they will bring him in instanter. I had hoped that we were to have some cold weather, as that would stop the crazy dancing more quickly than anything else. White muslin and paint are not the best protectors against Dakota cold. But the thermometer does not go down as fast nor does the wind blow as hard as I could wish. Sitting Bull should be captured and confined of that there is no doubt. His influence is strongly and constantly for evil, and while he does not participate in the ghost dances to the extent of jumping about and yelling, he is present all the time, and keeps the frenzy at its highest pitch. Running Antelope has joined the dancing party, but would come in if I sent for him. Gall and John Grass are thoroughly loyal. Their threats against Sitting Bull, or remarks about his Messianic craze, have reached the ears of the dancers and have probably had the effect of keeping some of them away from the agency.

A blizzard would be as blessed here as Blucher was to Wellington. Meantime the stories that the ghost dancers have grown weary lack confirmation. It is said a council was held at Bull's camp today to decide upon whether he should or should not come in, but this is not likely. The chiefs and medicine men take counsel daily, but the results of the confabs are not given to the whites or the friendly Indians.

BUFFALO BILL AWAITING ORDERS.

MANDAN, N. D., Special Telegram, Dec. 3.—Buffalo Bill is still at Mandan. He says he is likely to stay four or five days awaiting orders from Gen. Miles. He declines to be interviewed.

TO GET MORE RATIONS.

Secretary Noble Orders an Increase of Rations to the Sioux.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The secretary of the interior to-day directed that the Sioux Indians be supplied with increased rations sufficient to conform to the agreement made in 1877. The appropriations for supplies for the Sioux have decreased every year upon the supposition that the Indians were becoming more and more capable of maintaining themselves. Owing, however, to the partial failure of crops for the last year or two and restlessness of the Sioux, which is believed to be in a measure due to the reduction of rations, the secretary has ordered the increase. The increase will amount to between one-fourth and one-third of the present supply. Acting Indian Commissioner Belt to-day sent to congress an urgent request that several appropriations asked for during the last session to carry out agreements made with the Sioux by the Sioux commission of which Gen. Crook was chairman receive the prompt attention of that body.

Ponca Ghost Dancers.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Dec. 3.—It is learned that the Indians at the Ponca agency have commenced the ghost dance, and that they have their war paint on and are very insolent.

Fell From His Wagon.

WILLMAR, Special, Dec. 3.—John Schleb, a farmer of Lone Tree township, Chippewa county, while driving from this place, fell out of the wagon and sustained injury to his spine from which he died soon afterward. Deceased leaves a wife and three small children.

Sweets on Fire.

HASTINGS, Special Telegram, Dec. 3.—Webster Feyler's confectionery store, including contents, burned to-night. The building was owned by Peter Smith. Insured.

MADE CHIEF CLERK.

W. H. Johnstone Appointed to a Place With the Senate Pension Committee.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Dec. 3.—W. H. Johnstone of St. Paul was to-day appointed chief clerk of the senate committee on pensions, of which Senator Davis is chairman. Earl S. Goodrich still remains as assistant clerk, and W. C. Hubbell of St. Paul was to-day appointed as messenger and stenographer.

Mr. Johnstone was admitted to the bar in New Jersey, and subsequently founded and edited successfully the Bayonne City Herald for several years. On going to Minnesota he resumed the practice of law, and served as judge of probate two terms. He also served on the old First congressional district committee and the Republican state central committee, and is recognized as an expert in legislative affairs, having been for twelve years on all the important Minnesota senate committees. He was selected by the St. Paul chamber of commerce as census supervisor and confirmed by the senate, and a commission was issued by President Harrison, but he declined on account of absence from the state and since congratulates himself.

A NEW COMBINE.

The Big Four and the Stickney Syndicate Join Hands.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—An evening paper says that negotiations have been in progress for several days between the big packers, Armour, Swift and Morris, who have recently purchased a large tract of land at Hammond, Ind., on which to erect slaughter houses, and Mr. Stickney, representing the railroad and other interests concerned in the proposed new stock yards in the township of Lyons, situated west of the city. It is understood that an agreement has been practically reached by which the packers will relieve the present owners of the Stickney tract of their obligations, and, in return, the Stickney syndicate will shift its railroad and other interests to the Indiana tract. If this deal is carried through it will practically settle the transfer of all the stock yards and packing and slaughtering interests of Chicago into another state.

A SYNDICATE'S LOSS.

The Power House of the Eau Claire Electric Line Burned.

EAU CLAIRE, Special Telegram, Dec. 3.—The syndicate of Maine capitalists who recently consolidated the street railway, the Dells Water Power company and the Brush Electric Light company in one corporation, known as the Street Railway, Light and Power company, has had a hard blow at the start. To-day a hot box set fire to the company's power house at the dells dam and all the machinery was destroyed. The damage is about $25,000; insured. The Pulp and Paper company's big mill was only saved by its system of perforated pipes. The city arc lights are shut off and the city street railway is being run by horses and mules. The incandescent light circuit is being temporarily operated by the National Electric factory.

NO ADVICES.

Nothing at Chicago Headquarters Very Alarming.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—At 10 o'clock to-night Gen. Williams received at army headquarters a dispatch from Col. Poland, who is in command of the United States troops at the Rosebud Indian agency. "All is quiet here: nothing new."

From Pine Ridge agency no dispatches had been received up to 11 o'clock. Gen. Williams stated that matters at that point were undoubtedly quiet. Gen. Miles is expected at headquarters to-morrow from Washington.

A DEPUTY IN TROUBLE.

J. P. Davis, Deputy Clerk of Court, Placed Under Arrest.

Yesterday County Auditor Kain, having discovered some irregularities on the part of J. P. Davis, deputy clerk of court, immediately reported the matter to the county attorney and the clerk of the court. An investigation followed and a deficiency discovered amounting to about $1,000. Davis was arrested by J. J. O'Connor, chief of detectives. The irregularities were in connection with the issue of jury certificates.

Attended With Loss of Life.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—The large manufacturing establishment of the A. Campbell Manufacturing company was damaged by fire to-day to the extent of $300,000. One fireman was killed and three others were injured by falling walls. The killed and injured were:

Charles Snyder, forty years old, foreman of Engine Company No. 16, instantly killed; Joseph Carter, forty-six years old, foreman of Engine Company No. 30, leg crushed; Edwin M. Schofield, thirty-eight years old, hoseman of Engine Company No. 30, skull fractured, leg broken and badly injured internally; and John Colfesh, forty-six years old, hoseman of Engine Company No. 16, injured internally by a fall while being rescued from the burning building.

The three upper floors of the building were occupied by Albert Crenshaw, manufacturer of flannels and dress goods. His entire stock was valued at $100,000, about one-half of which is an entire loss. The amount of insurance could not be given to-night, but it was stated that the losses were nearly covered by policies in various companies.

A Clash in Dates.

WINONA, Special, Dec. —Two opera companies are billed to appear at Winona's one opera house at the same time, Saturday evening next—the McCaul Opera company and Gilmore's Spectacular company. The McCaul company officially has the right of way, as it appears that a date made some time ago by the opera house management with the Gilmore company was cancelled by letter. The Gilmore company, however, deny the cancellation of the date and are going ahead with their advertising and arrangements as if the coast was clear. A lively bout is expected.

Des Moines' "Boodling" Cases.

DES MOINES, Dec. 3.—Somewhat of a sensation was caused in connection with the "boodle" aldermen cases Saturday when Judge Bishop summoned the grand jury before him and read a lengthy communication, citing the facts brought out in the Drady trial, and suggesting that the matter be investigated with a view to indicting all the aldermen and city officials connected with the case for conspiracy to defraud the city. This suggestion would include all officials as far back as 1876, since which time the practice of voting extra compensation has been in vogue.

Soon Fell From Grace.

BOONE, IOWA, Dec. 3.—Byron Devere, who has only been in the city a short time, was last Sunday baptized and joined the Christian church. On Wednesday night he eloped with one of the members, Mrs. James E. Davis. Mrs. Davis left a note to her husband saying it would be useless for him to look for her.

The fire in the Jefferson barracks stables, St. Louis, burned sixty-six horses and mules and all the provender. The sentry who was on guard at the time of the origin of the fire was placed under arrest. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

The Thanksgiving ball given by the St. Hilaire Cornet Band last Thursday evening was one of the most enjoyable affairs of the kind we have had here in a long time. The boys furnished good music which was enjoyed by as large a crowd as the hall could accomodate. The fun was kept up until a late hour and all voted the dance a complete success.

Fairmont Sentinel: Here are the suggestive headlines to a London dispatch to the St. Paul Globe from free trade England: "Millions Lack Food. Every Industrial Center in Europe Crowded with Starving People. The Outlook for Those Unfortunates This Winter Decidedly Gloomy. Britons Celebrate Guy Fawks' Day by Burning McKinley in Effigy."

Brainerd, Nov. 24.—A messenger has come in from Gull Lake with reports from the Chippewa tribe that the Messiah dances have been taken up there and are going on daily and nightly. The reports indicate that the dance is taking a strong hold on these Indians as elsewhere. A messenger from the band on Gull Lake, less than 30 miles north of this city, reports the craze also getting started among the Mille Lacs.—Ada Index.

McIntosh Times: The Indians on the Red Lake and White Earth reservations are making preparations for extensive logging operations this winter. We are informed that their operations will be confined to the new reservation limits, and that no logging will be allowed on the ceded lands which are about to be thrown upon the market. This will occasion considerable loss to a number of loggers who had constructed camps and made preparations for logging upon the ceded lands.

"Geo. H. Palmer, Rose M. Dickmann married Saturday, Nov. 22d, 1890, at 8 o'clock a. m., Crookston, Minnesota. At home after date," is the way the card we received on Monday reads. Geo. H., aforesaid, party of the first part, is one of the legal luminaries of our brilliant young city, and for some time it has been apparent that all he needed was a good partner to make life for him a complete success. Having found a life partner in the daughter of Register Dickmann, the Journal unites with a host of their friends in wishing the happy pair a long and useful life.—Polk County Journal.

Dr. Nansen is rapidly preparing for his expidition to the north pole. He will start from Norway in February next in the ship of 170 tons burden that has been built for him. The vessel is so constructed that she cannot be crushed by the ice, but if nipped the floes will simply force her out of the water on top of the ice. Dr. Nansen is provisioning his vessel for five years, and a dozen men will go with him. He thinks it will take about three years for the vessel to drift from the islands of New Siberia across the north pole and down the other side to the southern end of Greenland.

The train is from one to four hours late and no prospect of it getting better. The only trouble is that the Great Northern is trying to economise and are making the crew which runs up here, do double work. The boys are doing the best they can under the circumstances and no one but the management of the road are to blame. They are building their line to the coast and this country must help pay the bills, so they give us poor service and make their men work double time. A petition should be circulated and sent to the U. S. Postal Authorities asking that the mails be delivered here more promptly. The petition should also ask for a daily Mail. The country about here does business enough to demand it, and we will never have any accommodation unless we make a grand kick.

The fact that Judge Gresham is called upon to adjudicate the question as to whether a merchant can, for fear of incriminating himself, refuse to tell whether he has been the recipient of cut rates from railroads, affords the best assurance that that question will be settled with regard to the public welfare as well as to the vast private interests which are involved. The legal question is not itself of any moment except in its bearing on the future of railroad administration. We are sorry, that in view of the recent movement toward railroad consolidation, we cannot congratulate the prime man in that consolidation—Mr. Jason Gould—upon the particular judge before whom the question is pending. Mr. Gould and Judge Gresham are old acquaintances and each knows the other quite well.—Dispatch.

Minneapolis Journal: Eli Perkins figures that in two years wheat will be worth $1 a bushel in this country. This rise in values will be accomplished by the culling off of the 60,000,000 bushels surplus wheat now raised, which is exported. The raising of beets for sugar, flax for linen, and sheep, he declares, will withdraw a large acreage now devoted to wheat. Then the 20 cent penalty on Canadian wheat is bound, so he says, to remove the competition of cheap Manitoban grain. Wheat is worth $1.25 a bushel as a food product, says Eli, and ought to fetch that much money.

Minneapolis Tribune: Gen. Miles left Chicago for Washington yesterday afternoon, having first listened to Col. Ludington's report of the Indian situation. This was to the effect that the Indians have been cooled down by the exhibition of activity on the part of the army and that the danger point may be considered as having been passed. Gen. Miles departs departs convinced that the situation has been grossly exaggerated, but he will nevertheless recommend that the troops now on duty at the agencies shall be kept there until spring an eminently wise idea. The military being absent, the approach of spring would most certainly bring with it a repitition of present troubles with probably much more serious results. Another sensible suggestion of his, and one which he thinks will be carried out is the dismounting and disarming of the aborigines at once and for all time to come. In this way, he believes, all possibility of future uprisings may be averted.

These suggestions are eminently practical and will be gladly seconded not only by the people of the Dakota frontier but everybody else except the theorists of the Indian Rights Association, whose policy it has been to grant the noble red man privileges not accorded to settlers of our own race. Gen. Miles means not only to prevent impending mischief but to render the copper colored murderers powerless for all time to come. His head is level.

Hon. Jared Benson, of Anoka, took supper at the Merchants last evening and during the interval between supper and the departure of his train for Anoka, Mr. Benson imparted to a reporter his views of the next Legislature.

"It will be a green Legislature," said Mr Benson, "and there is likely to be considerable unconstitutional as well as severe legislation before it passes into oblivion The Alliance men, of course for the first two or three weeks will be led by the sage, Donnelly. Then that person will become bumptious, satirical, tyranical, attempt to cover too much sod, and want to put Donnelly to the front. The Alliance men will then desert the Donnelly standard, chose a new leader, or stray about as they please, followed by Donnelly openly proclaiming that the railroads bought them from his leadership, as he claimed of the members when he was in the Legislature four years since.

"Of the organization, of course, Mr. Donnelly will have the say—from the Alliance standpoint. I see that he has already advised the Alliance men to stand out alone, put up their candidates for office and let the other old parties bow to those candidates. Well, if his advise is followed the result will be like the Massachusetts Legislature some fifty years since. It was the time when the Knownothing party sprang into existance and swept the state. Well, it did as Mr. Donnelly advises the Alliance to do—make the other parties bow to it. But they did not. The Free Soilers—now what would be called Republicans—and the Democrats fused and ran the band wagon to suit themselves, electing able men to offices, one of them none other than Charles Sumner.—St Paul News.

THE APPOMATTOX APPLE TREE.

Only One Northern Man Who Got a Portion of the Famous Relic.

A recent article in The Atlanta Constitution said all the published statements that numerous persons in the north had relics from the Appomattox apple tree were absolutely false. It stated, upon the authority of Confederate generals who were present at the surrender of Gen. Lee, that only one man connected with the Union force had ever obtained any portion of that tree and that he had only a portion of the root or trunk. It explained that the whole tree had been cut to pieces by members of the Confederate army before the Union forces came upon the ground, and that the master of transportation of the Union army who, at Gen. Lee's request, supplied the Confederate army with rations, was only able to secure the last remaining portion of the tree, and that it was forty-eight hours after he appeared before any other member of the Union forces had access to the field. The article also added that the sole possessor of a piece of this historical tree north of Mason and Dixon's line was Col. Bates, now of Philadelphia.

The writer of The Inquirer ascertained that the person referred to was George H. Bates, at present proprietor of the Oriental hotel in this city, who was at the time of the surrender of Lee's army master of transportation of the army of the Potomac. Mr. Bates, when questioned upon the subject gave his statement of the matter as follows:

"Yes, sir. The statement is correct, and I am the man referred to. When I have heard and read accounts of persons having canes and other articles made from that famous tree I have been amused, because I know that I am the only man north of Mason and Dixon's line who ever obtained a relic from that tree. This is what occurred on that memorable April day when Lee surrendered. I was master of transportation in the Army of the Potomac. Immediately upon Gen. Grant's return after his meeting with Gen. Lee, who had surrendered in compliance with Gen. Lee's request to have food sent to his starving troops, I received orders to prepare a train of wagons with rations and to take them beyond our lines under the flag of truce into the enemy's lines and report to Gen. Lee.

"A speedily gathered nineteen wagon loaded train of rations passed through our lines and passed along the road near the famous tree under which Lee had waited for Gen. Grant. I inquired for the Confederate generals' headquarters and finally I found it, close with Gen. Lee and his staff officers a brief time was spent pleasantly. Then I asked some Confederates standing around to unload the wagons, but they refused, whereupon I ordered my subordinates to dismount and unload, which they did grudgingly.

"Well, about half past 4 or 5 p. m. we started with the empty wagons back to our lines. On the way I saw Confederate soldiers hacking away at the stump of the tree which a few hours previously had sheltered Gen. Lee from the sun's rays. In reply to my inquiry the relic seekers said they wanted souvenirs to keep of the tree under which their general had surrendered. Then there was nothing left but the root. I immediately took a jack knife and cut out a piece, which I have preserved to the present time, and another piece which I handed to [illegible], who carved out a ring with a heart on it, which I have also kept. I was [illegible] Lee's adjutant [illegible] the lines at [illegible] that. Here it is [illegible] then shown to the writer [illegible] Gen. Lee and countersigned, bearing date April 9, 1865

Mr. Bates continued his story by saying that on his next visit to the enemy's lines not the slightest vestige of any portion of that tree, branch or root remained, and with the exception of Gen. Grant and his two staff officers, Gen. Rawlings and Col. Leete, no Union officers or soldiers passed the lines until forty-eight hours later. He therefore feels convinced that the statement made by the southern journal is correct, that only Confederates, with the exception of himself, obtained any portion of that historical tree.

There were other apple trees at a distance, but still in the vicinity of the place of surrender, which the Union relic hunters speedily laid under tribute.

Mr. Bates showed the writer the pieces he obtained—the root, which is three by six in dimensions and the ring with the heart graven on it.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

An English author spent twelve years on the manuscript of a book on the history of dead races. When it was finished his dog ate it up, and, in his despair, the man almost died. Six months later he discovered that he was all wrong in most of his statements and deductions, and that the publication of the book would have made him a laughing stock.—Detroit Free Press.

There may be persons in this community who are at times troubled with colic, or subject to attacks of bowel complaint. If so they should try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It will afford almost immediate relief, and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. If taken as soon as the first indication of the disease is felt it will ward off the attack. Many people use it in this way, and find that it never fails them. A 25 or 50 cent bottle may be obtained from

CURED OF SHEEP KILLING.

A Boston Lady Tries a Successful Experiment With Her St. Bernard.

A lady had a valuable St. Bernard of excellent pedigree carefully trained and in all respects of well nigh ideal excellence, save for one fault—he would kill lambs. He was beaten and imprisoned.

While matters were in this state a friendly farmer, who had upon some occasion got into his head the fact that the dog's mistress was fond of pets, sent her a cossot, gay with ribbons and looking as innocent as innocence itself. The lady was in despair. She expected that her dog would fall upon the lamb; but, having in the past had much experience with pets, she said that if this catastrophe was to happen she did not propose to have it postponed until she had become deeply attached to the newcomer, and so deliberately led the lamb up to the dog, said to him that it was her lamb and directed him to watch it. The dog looked at her rather wistfully, evidently requesting permission to tear the pretty innocent, but she sternly shook her head, and, departing, left the pair together on the lawn. She is willing to admit now that the trial proved successful—that she had no idea that it would, and that she expected to find the lawn strewn with the dismembered fragments of the lamb. When a few hours later she returned, however, the dog was found to have taken the lamb into his especial favor and under his especial protection. He lay down with it, followed it about and seemed to have become uncommonly fond of it in a way not at all allied to carnivorous instincts. In short, the lamb and the dog became the closest of friends, and as long as the two did live they continued to dwell together in peace and affection.

And the remarkable part of the tale is that from that day the dog no more molested any lambs whatsoever. It was a plain case of similia similibus curantur. The dog was at once and forever cured of his vice, and his fond mistress relates this story to admiring friends with mingled pride and affection.—Boston Courier.

A Boy's Essay on Girls.

Girls is great on making bleeve. She will make bleeve a dol is a live baby. She will make bleeve she is orfull sweet on another girl or feller, if they come to see her, and when they are gone she will say, "Horrid old thing."

Girls is olways fooling a feller. She can't lick yer, so she gets the best o yer that way.

If yer don't do what a girl tells yer, she says yer horrid. I drather be horrid than be soft. If you do what a girl tells yer, you will do all sorts of foolish things.

Girls can be good in school every day if they feel like it. I shud think they would git tired and have to do sum thing wonse in a while; I know a feller does. Girls say fellers acts orfull, but when a girl gits a going it she acts orfler than any feller durst. They don't care for nothing.

If a girl wants a feller to carry her books home, she ain't satisfied unless she gits the same feller the other girls want, whether she likes him or not.

Girls is great on having secrets: I mean telling secrets. They make a secret out of nothing at all, and then tell it round to all the other girls, orful quiet, just as if it was sumthing dredful.

Girls olways git their goggerfry lessons better than a feller, but if they are going anywhere they are sure to git lost.

If two fellers has a fite, the girls all go for the feller that licks, no matter whether he is good for anything else or not.

If a girl don't feel like doing a thing, you can't make her, no matter whether she had order or not. If she won't, she won't, and she will git out of it somehow. That is all I know about girls this time.—Metropolitan.

The Law in Russia.

In Russia almost every conceivable thing a man might do is regulated by the written law. The Russian idea of governing the people is in direct opposition to the conceptions of the west. With us everything that the law does expressly forbid is permitted; in Russia everything is forbidden that the law does not expressly grant, which means next to nothing at all. And when the whole matter is removed from the realm of theory to every-day practice, Russia, though there is a code of between twenty and thirty huge folio volumes of about 2,000 pages apiece, is a country as lawless as an African chieftain's domain. A man with neither money or bribe, nor influence in high places to protect, is at the mercy of any petty police officer or secret government spy who, out of sheer personal spite, may get him shipped off to the mines of Siberia and ruined for life, though he be the most innocent and harmless person in all Russia.

Cows Getting Drunk.

"Speaking of cows getting 'drunk' on buckeyes," says an Ohio man, "I have seen that quite frequently here in Ohio. As soon as frost comes the buckeyes fall and then the cows enjoy them. It is an acquired taste, as some cows can not be coaxed to eat them. As soon as the first is swallowed the cow gets momentarily crazy and can hardly be driven away from the tree with a club. They will eat until they fall under a tree. The cow just gets stupid and staggers around, and then falls. Generally it takes two days to get over such a 'drunk.'"

He's Had Enough.

Russell Sage is quoted in saying: "I never lent a dollar which was returned to me unless legally secured. I never backed a note I didn't have to pay, and I never recommended a man for a situation who didn't turn out to be as mean as he could. I now let other men run the philanthropy business."

THREAD AND SPOOL.

Unraveling a Few of the Subject's Many Mechanical Mysteries.

Few people ever stop to think of the twisting and turning and the various processes that cotton fibre goes through after it is taken from the pod before it is wound on a spool ready for use. To actually follow it on its course would be a long and tedious task, but in the National Museum at Washington the whole story is told in one of the cases given up to an exhibition of textile fabrics.

First it shows a specimen of cotton in the pod, just as it was picked, without having the seeds removed. Next is shown a specimen of the same cotton after it has been ginned and the seeds have been removed. The Sea Island cotton is used for thread on account of the length of the fibre. A sample of the sacking in which the cotton is baled is also shown. Then the cotton is supposed to have been baled and shipped to the thread factory.

Here the first thing that is done with the cotton is to subject it to the "picker" process, by which the cotton from several bales is mixed to secure uniformity. During the picker process much waste, in the form of dust, dirt and fibres, is separated from the good fibres by the picker.

Next the "picked" cotton is wound on a machine, in sheets or laps, into a roll. The next process illustrated by a practical exhibit is the carding, by which the sheets of cotton are combed or run out into long parallel fibres.

The cotton is next seen drawn through a trumpet-shaped opening, which condenses it into a single strand or "silver." Then eight such silvers are run together into one; six of the strands thus produced are drawn into one and again six of the strands from the last drawing are combined into one.

Then comes the fast "roving" process, which consists of winding the strand on a bobbin. Two strands are twisted and again wound on a bobbin.

After a number of other twistings and winding, during which the strand is gradually reduced in size until it begins to assume a thread-like appearance, two strands of this fine "roving" are run together and twisted, under considerable tension, on a bobbin that makes 7,000 revolutions a minute.

Two of the cords thus produced are then wound together on a spool and then twisted from that to another spool. The two-cord thread thus produced is transferred thence to another spool and then three threads of two cords each are twisted together, forming a six-cord thread. One who has followed the process sees the cotton gradually transformed from a wide band, or sheet of loose cotton, to a compact thread that will pass through the eye of a needle.

The six-cord thread is at last taken from a bobbin and reeled into a skein, from which it is bleached or dyed. Then it is wound back from the skein upon a big spool, from which it is supplied to little white birch spools, upon which it is wound in regular courses, and is then ready for the market.

The machine that regulates the last winding measures the number of yards wound on each spool. The spools are made of various sizes, the average spool containing 200 yards of thread.

The labels that decorate the ends of the spools when they are sold are last put on. They are cut and pasted on by machinery with great rapidity.

Naming Colts.

Naming colts as they are brought into the world on a big stock-raising farm might seem to be a simple operation; but, just as when the parents of a dozen children find themselves short of names and have to resort to a Biblical or classical terminology, so do the owners of a lot of horses kept for the purposes of raising horses for the turf find themselves running short of names. Who has failed to notice the nomenclature of the race course? The proprietor of a farm and a big lot of thoroughbreds in Pennsylvania has made a rule for himself. To all the colts born in the first year he gave names beginning with A, in the second year B, and so on. He put the idea into practice eight years ago, and reached the letter H last year. Sometimes there are queer combinations of names. For instance, last year a colt was named Harmony, and this year his brother has tacked to him the cuffs Impudence. As the breeder has fifteen colts this year to be named with names beginning with the letter I, he confesses himself puzzled to originate attractive and orotund names enough to go around.—N. Y. Sun.

He Got Enough to Eat.

In one of the leading hotels a few days ago one of those blundering independent farmers was the star figure in a very amusing incident. He came in and sat down at a table where I was breakfasting and began studying the bill of fare. The printed list of eatables confused him not a little, but he made a bold bluff at the waiter and then leaned back in his chair satisfied that he would soon have a good breakfast. But he drew a blank. He had made a bad choice from the bill of fare and did not get enough to keep a squirrel from starving. He put it out of sight in a jiffy. He was still hungry and began to figure on some way to get another deal. He examined the card for a few moments and then began trying to catch a waiter. But they all were busy and did not notice the famished tiller of the soil.

He tapped with his knife on his plate, called "hey, there!" and tried to pluck their sleeves. It was no go, and his efforts remained unheeded. Finally, driven to desperation, he put his two thumbs in his mouth and whistled. Such a whistle, too! It could have been heard a mile. The waiters jumped as if they had been shot, and two nervous ladies screamed a little. The solemn head waiter and two or three of his nimble assistants ran to the old man, who calmly said: "I wish you would pass the victuals again. I didn't get enough." He soon had enough around him, and the head waiter kept an eye on him to see that the supply remained good.—Exchange.

The Original Phonograph.

It has been proved that Columbus did not discover America and that the Italian did not invent the mariner's compass. It has been proved that Morse did not invent an electric telegraph, that Howe did not invent a sewing machine, that Cyrus McCormick did not invent a reaper, and that Fulton did not invent a steamboat. Now somebody turns up the Courier Veritable, a magazine published in 1632, to prove that Edison did not invent the phonograph. That publication announces that "Capt. Vosterlich has returned from a voyage in Australasia. He reports having passed by a strait below that of Magellan; he landed in a country where nature furnished men with certain sponges which retain sounds as other sponges do liquors. So that when they wish to ask something or confer at a distance they speak into one of the sponges and send it to their friends, who, having received it, press it gently and make the words come out."—From the Hamilton Spectator.

Drinking in America.

"This is a queer country, don't ye know," said an English tourist who has been traveling in America. "In New York I had to pass through some mysterious side door to get a drink Sunday. In Boston I was compelled to sit down to drink, whether it was Sunday or not. When I got out into Missouri the law said I must stand up to drink. In Kansas I was obliged to make an affidavit and swear to it that I was sick with the blind staggers, or something of the kind, or I couldn't get a drop, and Nebraska assured me that it was a penitentiary offense to treat anybody. I expect to strike a state yet where they hang a man for thinking about a drink."

DESERVING OF CONFIDENCE.—There is no article which so richly deserves the entire confidence of the community as BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Those suffering from Asthmatic and Bronchial Diseases, Coughs and Colds should try them. Price 25 cents.

Powdered elm bark, say two teaspoonfuls to a pint of new milk, will prevent coagulation in the stomach of children of the milk into hard, tough lumps; the lumps will be more readily digested.

GARFIELD TEA has cured Constipation of twenty-two years standing; housewives will find in it a priceless boon.

The favorite linen for embroidery is of the "old bleach" manufacture. This linen is woven with a firm round thread of a superior quality of flax, and is grass bleached.

Is it economy to save a few cents buying a cheap soap or strong washing powder, and lose dollars in ruined rotted clothes? If not, use Dobbin's Electric Soap, white as snow, and as pure. Ask your grocer for it.

"If the white of an egg be mixed with a cupful of beef tea and heated to 160 deg. the value of the beef tea is greatly enhanced," says the Lancet.

Be On Time!

Excellent advice always. Adopt it in the treatment of kidney and bladder inactivity, and you will avoid danger. Healthfully, but moderately, impel these organs, if sluggish, to act by the early use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, no less a diuretic than a tonic and general alterative. Don't forget, also, the timely aid it affords when malarial, liver and rheumatic complaints manifest themselves.

Toast is more easily digested than plain bread if the toast is eaten soon after it is made. Toast that has grown cold is not so easily digested as bread.

Not a Local Disease

Because catarrh affects your head, it is not therefore a local disease. If it did not exist in your blood, it could not manifest itself in your nose. The blood now in your brain is before you finish reading this article, back in your heart again and soon distributed to your liver, stomach, kidneys, and so on. Whatever impurities the blood does not carry away, causes what we call disease. Therefore when you have catarrh of the head, a snuff or other inhalant can at most give only temporary relief. The only way to effect a cure is to attack the disease in the blood, by taking a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which eliminates all impurities and thus permanently cures catarrh. The success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh is vouched for by many people it has cured.

Book Lending.

I cover all the books I lend with strong, cream colored wrapping paper, and on the outside I write, according to the status of the borrower:

My books are my silent but much beloved friends; treat them kindly.

or

Neither blemish this book, nor the leaves double down.
Nor lend it to each idle friend in the town.
Return it when read, or if lost please supply
Another as good to the mind and the eye.
With right and with reason you need but be friends.
And each book in my study your pleasure attends.

A memorandum is kept on a card of the date, name of book and name of borrower, and is placed in the book-case from which the book is taken. If the book is kept unreasonably long I send for it, and am slow to lend to the same person again. Since adopting this plan I have never had reason to regard the book borrower as a "fiend."—Cor. Writer.

He Knew a Hoss.

Some men down in Belfast thought to puzzle a local jockey by bringing out two sorry looking equines, one considerably larger than the other, and asking him which was the better one. But he was not caught napping. He looked each carefully over, examining the feet of each, and then renderered judgment as follows:

"One's worth just as much as t'other."

"How's that?" asked the crowd.

"Well, the big one has got more hide and bones than the smaller one but the latter has got the best shoes on, which makes it about an even thing."—Lewiston Journal.

A Better Charm.

A boy was knocking the horse chestnuts off a tree on Cass avenue when a pedestrian observed:

"I suppose you think they will act as a charm to ward off rheumatism, but they won't."

"I didn't suppose they would," replied the lad.

"Then what do you want of them?"

"To act as a charm to ward off lickins. I know a boy who carried four of them in his pockets and didn't get licked in four straight weeks!"—Detroit Free Press.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

A CRITICISM on current life was made recently by a New Yorker, whose ideas are always worth hearing, that the public as a rule is prone to be interested in things afar. We ignore the extremes of misery and poverty as they exist in our own cities, and are eager to listen to delectable tales of the cannibals of the South Sea Islands.

Taken in time, even Consumption yields to the wonderful effects of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It won't make new lungs—but it will make diseased ones healthy when nothing else will. There's reason for it, too. Consumption is Lung-scrofula. For every form of scrofula, and all blood-taints, the "Discovery" is a positive cure. It's the most potent strength-restorer, blood-cleanser, and flesh-builder known to medical science. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, and all lingering Coughs, it's an unequaled remedy. It's a guaranteed one. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back. You've everything to gain from it—nothing to lose.

A Fine Tree.

The grandest sycamore tree in New England, perhaps, is at Newton, in Connecticut. It is 85 feet high, 21 feet in circumference and the crown casts a shade 100 feet in diameter. The foliage is so dense it is impossible to discern a ray of light falling through it, and twilight reigns all the summer beneath it. The leaves are 5 inches long, about 4 inches wide and are of a beautiful glossy hue. When the wind rustles the leaves the sound they make is like that of falling rain. The blossoms are large and like silk floss, and falling cover the ground inches deep with an elastic robe that is like a wonderful snow white silken carpet. The giant tree is a landmark in all the region, and is visible to a person on the hilltops miles away, a vast dark pillar overtopping all other trees.—Cor. New York Sun.

LOTS of fun can be had with a newly contrived sheet-iron cat which is worked by clockwork, and which has a bellows inside of it which swells up its tail to the size of the maddest of mousers. It emits a m-e-o-w which is a close imitation of the natural feline cry, and has, in addition, steel claws and teeth. You wind it up and place it on your roof, and set it meowing. All the cats in the neighborhood come around, and its poisoned claws kill every one it strikes.

AGAINST PARNELL.

Justin McCarthy to Prepare an Address to the Irish People.

Parnell Will Make a Personal Appeal to the Irish this Week.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—In response to the call issued by Justin McCarthy, the leader of the anti-Parnellite section of the Irish party, all the members of the party who are opposed to Mr. Parnell assembled to-day to further consider the line of policy to be adopted. Copies of the call had been addressed to Mr. Parnell and his supporters, but it is hardly necessary to state that none of them were present. A council comprising eight members, Messrs. Abraham, Dillon, Healy, O'Brien, Arthur O'Connor, Thomas Power O'Connor, Sexton and Sheehy, was appointed to assist Mr. McCarthy in deciding the future action of the party. After the appointments of the council an adjournment was taken until to-morrow.

Before adjourning the meeting unanimously authorized Mr. McCarthy to prepare an address to the Irish people at home and abroad. In this he will give the present aspect of the Irish question and outline the future policy of his party.

Mr. Parnell will send a mission to the United States for the purpose of placing before the American people his side of the cotroversy that has arisen in the Nationalist party.

William O'Brien sent a cable dispatch to Mr. Parnell to-day appealing to him to suggest some way by which Ireland might be saved from destruction. Mr. Parnell replied: "It is now too late to rescue the seceders from their false position. I shall be glad to consult you on your arrival in Europe."

Mr. Parnell has sent a dispatch to Milwaukee declining an offer of $15,000 for 100 lectures.

VOTED TOGETHER.

Both Factions of the Nationalists United in Opposition to One Bill.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The anti-Parnellite members of the house of commons made an early appearance in the house to-day.

Mr. McCarthy gave notice that upon the reassembling of the house he would call attention to the circumstances in connection with the recent arrest and prosecution of Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien and would move a resolution in relation to the case.

Mr. William Henry Smith, the government leader, announced that when the house went into committee on the land purchase bill he would move an adjournment of the house until Jan. 2.

Mr. Balfour moved the second reading of the land department (Ireland) bill.

Mr. Healy moved to adjourn the debate on the ground that the government was treating the house with contempt in not explaining the provisions of this bill. Subsequently Mr. Healy withdrew his motion to adjourn, and substituted an amendment calling for the rejection of the land department bill. This was defeated, and the bill passed its second reading.

Mr. Parnell entered the house just before the division. He took a seat next to Mr. McCarthy and voted, as did all the Irish members of both sections present, against the bill.

Mr. Balfour's Irish relief bill, which asks an appropriation of £5,000 to enable him to supply seed potatoes to distressed farmers, passed its third reading in the house.

A DELICATE SITUATION.

The Irish Envoys Still in New York Holding Consultations.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The members of the Irish parliamentary party, Messrs. Dillon, O'Brien, Sullivan, Gill and O'Connor, were in consultation all the morning on the advisability of making another statement as to their position on the Parnell question. To a reporter Mr. O'Brien dictated the following:

"The situation is one of extreme delicacy, and may involve consequences affecting the whole course of Irish affairs during our generation. Under these circumstances we must ask our friends to believe that it is under a sense of deep responsibility we continue to maintain an attitude of complete reserve. Having still a strong hope that the Irish people may be spared the calamity of internal dissensions, and being persuaded that we will best aid in that direction by avoided all unnecessary publicity, we are all in complete accord as to our action, and we must beg the public to take no notice of ridiculous rumors to the contrary."

The party has no plans formed as yet as to their future movements.

William O'Brien has received the following cablegram to-day from the high sheriff and chairman of Cork: Influential committees in both the city and county are being formed to sustain the cause. Party fever is rapidly passing over and common sense is asserting itself. The city and county of Cork will do their whole duty.

PARNELL TO TAKE THE FIELD.

He Is Announced to Make Several Speeches in Ireland.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Mr. Parnell goes to Ireland to-morrow. He will deliver a political address in the Rotunda, Dublin, Wednesday, and in Leinster hall, Dublin, on Thursday, and afterward proceed to Cork, Longford, Granard, Limerick and Waterford.

The Healy Gaelic Athletic association has adopted a resolution requesting Mr. Healy to abandon his present position and support Mr. Parnell.

The Tipperary town commissioners have adopted a resolution declaring that they have lost confidence in Mr. Parnell.

A committee to further the maintenance of Mr. Parnell in the leadership of the Irish Nationalists is being formed in Dublin.

Moved Further Into the Bad Lands.

PINE RIDGE, S. D., Dec. 10.—A scout came in to-night and reported that no sooner had the hostile chiefs returned home from the council held yesterday than they proceeded to move the camp several miles deeper into the Bad Lands, instead of counciling a move therefrom as advised by Gen. Brooke.

The Sisseton-Wahpeton Bill.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Dec. 10.—Representative Pickler had a conference with Chairman Perkins, of the Indian committee, to-day and was informed that Wednesday would be given to the committee, and if the discussion upon the other bills did not consume too much time he would call up the Sisseton and Wahpeton bill, and it perhaps might be put through. The Indian committee having secured another day, it is probable that the bill for the Cœur d'Alene Indians will be considered. Representatives Sweet, of Idaho and Wilson of Washington, who are most nearly interested in the bill, believe it will pass.

HOLDEN MUST HANG.

The Country's Highest Court Decides the Smith Law Constitutional.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Clifton Holden, the Redwood Falls murderer, must hang. The United States supreme court to-day affirmed the decision of the Minnesota court. By this decision the John Day Smith execution law is declared constitutional.

This case has attracted a good deal of attention by reason of its arising under a state statute forbidding newspapers to print accounts of hangings. Holden was convicted of a murder committed Nov. 23, 1888, and the governor commanded the sheriff to hang him conformably to the provisions of section 3 of an act passed in April 1889. This act, among other things, prescribed solitary confinement, limited the number of persons to be present at hangings, specially excluding reporters, and forbade newspapers to publish more than a mere statement that any person was hanged. Counsel contended that the provision for solitary confinement in Holden's case was ex post facto, and that, as there was no saving clause in the new law, he could not be held under the old law.

The court holds that this last point is not well taken for the reason that the statute repealed only inconsistent prior enactments, and was therefore good as to consistent enactments. Mere questions as to exclusion of persons, the court says, do not affect any substantial right of the convict. The limitations as to the number and character of those who might witness the execution, and the exclusion of newspaper men are regulations which the legislature, in its wisdom and for the public good, could legally prescribe. The only part of the law that may be deemed ex post facto is that prescribing solitary confinement, and there is no proof that Holden is so confined. The court cannot indulge the presumption that he is in solitary confinement. The governor's warrant does not require any such proceeding, for that is not among the provisions of section 3 of the act.

BOUGHT BONDS.

Secretary Windom's Efforts to Increase the Circulation.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The treasury department to-day purchased $3,891,000 4 per cent bonds under the terms of the circular issued Saturday last, at prices ranging from $1.22 to $1.23½. The department also purchased about 700,000 ounces of silver to-day.

The amount of 4 per cent bonds accepted to-day under the circular of Dec. 6, was $4,591,000, for which a disbursement of about $5,550,000 in money will be made. The secretary of the treasury said this afternoon that in view of all the conditions, he would accept additional offers of 4s at a reasonable price, of a sufficient amount to make the total purchases $8,000,000, for which he said the expenditures will be nearly $10,000,000.

The secretary said further that it was manifestly impossible under existing conditions for him to use the fractional currency now in the treasury in the purchase of bonds for the reason that it would at once be returned to him in exchange for greenbacks, and leave him with a deficiency instead of a surplus. There is now about $10,000,000 of fractional currency in the treasury, of which all but $2,000 is in silver half dollars. As it is legal tender to the amount of $10 only, it is not regarded as a part of the available cash balance. The secretary said he would like very much to get it into circulation, but that he certainly should not do so at the expense of his limited available surplus.

NO ROOM IN CHICAGO.

Western Association Magnates Look the Windy City Situation Over.

CHICAGO, Special Telegram, Dec. 10.—Sam Morton came to town to-day on a mysterious base ball mission. At about the same time President Hatch, of the Minneapolis club, and other officers of the Western association stepped off incoming trains. Before night they held a conference in Spalding's store. The object of the visit was to canvass the local situation with a view of placing a Western association team in Chicago. Their advisors agreed almost unanimously there was no opening for such an enterprise. Should another professional ball team play here next season it will represent the American association, whose managers are eager to place Chicago on their circuit and who have a prior claim on Spalding's acquiescence, without which, no other national agreement organization can be established here. The visit of President Thurman last week and his talk on the subject led to the belief that he will make no effort to divide the local base ball patronage next year, and the same reasons that may cause the American association to abandon the Chicago idea will be more than sufficient to subdue the Western association enthusiasts.

WILL ATTACK THE INDIANS.

Armed Ranchmen Take to the Warpath Near Rapid City.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Dec. 10.—A band of Indians from Little Wound's camp is camped about ten miles east of the Cheyenne river between the mouths of French and Battle creeks. They have been raiding deserted ranches, killing and running off stock, burning hay and grain and stealing household goods. To-day twenty armed men, well mounted, left Rapid City for the Indian camp. They will be joined by a number of ranchmen, and if they are not intercepted by the troops will attack the Indians.

A special from Custer says that not far from Buffalo Gap T. M. Warren, a ranchman, with four of his men attacked a raiding party of Indians and killed four. This story is not verified.

The Argentine Situation.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Dispatches from Buenos Ayres state that a feeling of disquiet reigns in the city and throughout the republic, and that fears are entertained of another outbreak. The public are disgusted with the financial situation and with the accumulating evidence of astounding frauds perpetrated under the former regime, and a party is gradually growing which advocates the repudiation of foreign indebtedness. The latest developed frauds are of the most overwhelming character and unparalleled in financial history. The provincial bank of Santa Fe was plundered of $7,000,000 by one man. It is reported that beneficiaries of plunder under the Celman regime are quietly leaving the country with the vast profits of their operations, and President Palligrini's government is blamed for not taking more active steps to bring the rascals to justice. The whole community seems to take a hopeless view of affairs, in striking contrast to the lavish and buoyant extravagance of former days.

A Sensational Libel Suit.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The trial is proceeding of G. W. Butterfield, an American company promoter, who is charged with libeling Harry Marks, the proprietor of the Financial News. Mr. Butterfield accused Mr. Marks of stealing jewelry and money from Mrs. Koppel, the widow of the proprietor of the New York Jewish Times, and of systematic swindling and blackmail. The defense seeks to justify the libels. Mrs. Koppel has deposed that Marks cohabited with her under a promise of marriage; that he controlled the paper after her husband's death, and that he took possession of her jewelry and money, deserting her after he had reduced her to a state of penury.

In a fight at West Superior Michael Sullivan was fatally stabbed by Patrick Gorman.

An unknown man was killed while walking on the Great Northern track at St. Paul.

The firm of Remmele & Bock, general merchants at Sleepy Eye has made an assignment.

At the village election in Park Rapids a vote was taken on license or no license. The license ticket carried by a large majority.

H. Lips, of Rock county, manufactured 777 gallons of amber cane syrup this fall. The field was about 250 gallons per acre.

Rubie Mead, aged 14 was drowned in Deer creek, near Fergus Falls, while skating. The water was not deep but he mired in the mud.

Neil Connelly, formerly deputy sheriff of Dakota county, died in Texas. The remains will be forwarded to St. Paul for burial.

An old man named Pulford, employed in a stone quarry near St. Cloud, fell into a deep pit filed with water and was drowned before he could be rescued.

Brown county has 105 veterans on the pension roll, Nicollet county 77, Sibley county 133, Redwood county 60, and Watonwan county 38.

The hardware store of Hans Nelson, at Fergus Falls, was entered by thieves, who carried away about $100 worth of knives, revolvers and razors.

C. A. Gardiner, a Minneapolis letter carrier, is held to the United States court at St. Paul in $2,000 bonds on a charge of opening letters and abstracting money therefrom.

In a quarrel over money matters at Sauk Rapids, Dan Milnne stabbed and seriously wounded Peter Keely, a telegraph operator. Milane was taken to St. Cloud for safe keeping.

Nicholas Kill, convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of a farmer named Kohen near St. Paul last summer, has been sentenced to the penitentiary for the balance of his natural life.

In a street fight in St. Paul, John Smith, aged 20, was stabbed eleven times with a large jack knife by a young man named Trineau. Smith's wounds may prove fatal. Trineau is in jail.

Mrs. Elenora Tomasko left her home in Lakefield and has not been heard from since. She had been demented and was released from the St. Peter asylum only a few months ago. She is a small woman, with light hair and usually talks and acts like a sane person.

The State Farmers' alliance will hold its annual convention for the election of officers and the transaction of important business at St. Paul on December 30. Nearly 1,000 delegates are expected to attend, and the assemblage promises to be one of the most notable ever held in the state.

A man named Rakavitz, living in the town of Krain, Stearns county, was found by his daughter suspended to the limb of a tree. The decline in the price of wheat and the loss of some land by the resurvey of the town rendered him insane and led to the deed. He was in good circumstances.

The grist mill at Marshall known as the Kendall mill was burned, evidently the work of some incendiary, as the mill was not running and no one staid in it. The mill was built several years ago, but since the new roller mill started the property has not been a paying investment. It is understood that it was sold a few days ago to parties east.

A remarkable formation was seen in the sky at Northfield. Due west there was a half-ball of fire from which rose a pillar of the same reddish hue extending well nigh to the zenith. The color and intensity varied, now being fiercely distinct, then nearly invisible. Later on a second pillar appeared beside the first one and these were followed by a third one in the southwest which was of a whitish hue.

A queer legal case is pending in Minneapolis. A supposed dead man came to life during the funeral, but the undertaker refused to take note of the change in circumstances and demanded his pay. The family claim that they owe him nothing because he did not complete his contract to bury the lamented one, while the undertaker declares that they committed a breach of faith in not furnishing a genuine corpse, and wants $10,000.

The supreme court of Minnesota holds that bank checks are not cash, and do not possess legal value as money until cashed. In other words, the giving of a check on a bank is not payment when passed between debtor and creditor, but only becomes so when the money is received on it. The Minnesota court rules further that in accepting a check from a debtor there is no legal presumption that the creditor takes it in absolute payment, but only conditionally, or as a written acknowledgement of the debt.

The farmers of Pipestone county are now ready for a sugar factory. One or two of them had small trial patches of sugar beets for seed sent from the department of agriculture at Washington this year, and the yield was something like 400 bushels per acre. Samples of the beets were sent to Washington, and, after a government analysis, were pronounced first-class. This has aroused the farmers and, many small patches will be planted next spring, and should a factory be located so that beets can be profitably shipped, a good share of the county would at once be turned into a huge beet field.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The Northern Pacific has spent $10,000 on water tanks, new boilers, pumps and a new culvert near Valley City.

Prof. H. E. Stockbridge, of the Indiana Station, has accepted the presidency of the State Agricultural College.

Every one will be proud of this state inside of two years. With 2,000,000 wool producers and tens of thousands of cattle hogs and horses, this state will be the favorite.—Plaindealer, Grand Forks.

A farmer near Reynolds, raised on 160 acres of land this year 3,700 bushels of barley. He sold the product at 50 cents per bushel, $1,850. How is that for barley in 1890?

The president has appointed Charles Stoker, of New Jersey, a member of the commission to negotiate with the Turtle band of Chippewa Indians, vice Isaac Fenimore, resigned.

Fire broke out in Devil's Lake, resulting in the total destruction of three frame business buildings and the contents of two. It was evidently the work of an incendiary, as it was started in two different places quite a distance apart.

W. G. Swanston has served notice of contest on James McCormick, the latter having been given a certificate of election as state senator by the county canvassing board. Great interest is manifested in this case, as parties interested are champions of different candidates for the United States senate.

Senator Pierce arrived in Washington and took his place in the senate. In regard to the senatorial situation in his state he merely remarked that he has been having a hard fight out that way. He says that he has more confidence in his election next winter than the reports from that section have given him credit for.

The state supreme court at Grand Forks, handed down a decision in the case of Richard L. Tyler vs. Cass County. The case was known as the Northern Pacific tax case. The decision effects all counties within the Northern Pacific land grant, and involves several hundred thousand dollars of delinquent taxes. In the case of William Budge against the City of Grand Forks, the judgment of the lower court was affirmed, and decides in favor of the city.

Governor Miller has made the production of sheep and wool a special study, and a the result of his observations, and information obtained both from those who have been practically engaged in sheep raising and from those who have been purchasing sheep and placing them among the farmers, he is lend to believe that it is a profitable industry, and one which will rapidly grow and do much to add to the substantial wealth of the agricultural interests of the state.

There was an exciting runaway at Grand Forks. A couple of double teams came dashing down the street four abreast. Directly in the way of the runaways stood Mr. James Little's double wagon, in which were seated Mr. Little and a companion. Seeing their danger they endeavored to pull out of the way but were unsuccessful. The pole of Collins & Murphy's team struck Mr. Little's valuable gray mare right back of the front leg, breaking the fifth and sixth ribs.

Bismarck Tribune: Coal has been discovered on the north shore of Grass lake, extending one and a half mile in length. The coal lies under about one-half foot of dirt. The coal itself is three or four feet thick and raises at about six inches to the yard, as it is mined back from the shore. The coal is of a good quality and lies just above the level of the water. The farmers are consequently having a picnic, as one man can dig from five to six loads a day. It is being hauled out at the rate of fifteen to twenty loads a day.

Grafton Times: Nearly all the Grafton people remember the sprightly and energetic E. W. Jones, who flashed fine diamonds and fast horses when the city was an infant and money was no object, but who flashed over the international line about three years ago and reported himself killed in a dance house, has come to life, and was recognized a few days ago at Winnepeg by a Grafton citizen. Mr. Jones is now known as a Mr. West—a wealthy hardware dealer doing business at some town north or west of Winnepeg.

Veterinary Surgeon Langdon, in Fargo Republican: I went thirteen miles south of Bismarck to examine some horses, and, finding two of them had glanders, I killed them. A Mr. Garnier had charge of them, and I learned that, a short time before, his son-in-law who owned them, had died of the same disease, which he evidently caught from the horses. He had been attended by Dr. Kendrick, of Bismarck, and it was an unmistakable case of glanders. People cannot be too cautious about exposing themselves to dangerous contagion, when their horses are discharging at the nostrils.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

It is said at Sioux Falls that a chap from Sioux City is peddling liquor by the drink—a sort of curbstone bartender.

Marion proposes to sink a test well, 500 feet deep, to see what the prospects are for an artesian well.

Custer claims that more buildings will be erected during the coming year than have been built there during the last five years.

The Montrose Roller Mill company ships the product of its mill to Wisconsin and Iowa, and is now running day and night.

Byron M. McIntyre, of Yankton, was remembered by Uncle Sam quite substantially on Thanksgiving day, receiving a check for his back pension, about $3,000.

Lead City realized $800 from the liquor licenses issued during the past month. They are popularly known as "light drink," and cost $25 each per month.

There are upwards of sixty students enrolled at the Redfield college, exclusive of music pupils, who in age and character will compare favorably with those of any institution in the west.

A golden eagle weighing thirty-five pounds was killed a short time ago on the Sisseton reservation. The bird stood three and a half feet high and measured nine feet from tip to tip.

An artesian well, at Minto, at a depth of 182 feet, struck a fine flow of water. The force is sufficient to throw the water nine feet in the air through an inch tube, and the water is good.

The case of Ed. Warner, of Canton, who has been confined in the county jail for the last ten months, charged with being implicated in the Peterson robbery, has been continued and Warner is now at liberty under $500 bonds.

Little minnows thrown from the artesian well in Fulton, Hand county, possess eyes, which is the strangest feature about them, for in all cases heretofore known fish taken from underground passages are always blind.

A calf belonging to Will Ryan at Letcher, died and he threw it to his hogs. Twenty-six of the hogs were taken sick immediately afterwards and died. None of the hogs died except those that ate of the calf, and all of those died except three. It is now believed the calf died of blackleg.

J. A. Foxley, of Florida, Charles Mix county, recently witnessed a battle between an eagle and a large white owl, the latter being speedily killed. Foxley then put five loads of shot into the eagle and managed to get him. The eagle measured seven feet and one inch from tip to tip. The owl measured five feet and six inches.

WISCONSIN.

Woman suffrage in the Methodist Church general conference was probably carried in Wisconsin. Thus far only one or two congregations have voted down the proposition.

The hunters of Sauk county will send in a petition to the Legislature this winter to have a law enacted prohibiting the killing of deer in that county for five years.

Waupaca is to have a creamery, cheese factory and cold storage combined. A stock company has been formed with a capital of $70,000, divided into shares of $100 each.

Robert Burke, a crazy Superior carpenter, collected a crowd on the streets of Superior and proceeded to hold a highly edifying religious revival. He was locked up.

Gen. Ginty, of Chippewa Falls, thinks that in view of Kate Field's statement, that "swell dinners" shorten li'e, that Katherine must be afflicted with dyspepsia. The General isn't.

The Edgerton Reporter says that not since Wisconsin became a tobacco-growing state has such a lively market been maintained in the sale of any crop as has taken place during the week just closing.

Another bottomless sinkhole has been struck on the Lake Shore extension from Rhinelander to Hurley. Already they have dumped into it 12,000 carloads of earth and 800 loads of logs.

A Boy's School Life.

A boy's school life, so far as it falls within the view of this paper, is broadly divisible into three parts. The first of these extends from the age of ten to thirteen or fourteen, the second from thirteen to sixteen, the third from sixteen to the end. In the first his education will be limited to the subjects of primary and universal value, and to these treated simply and effectively. He will learn Latin and French and elementary mathematics, English grammar, history and geography, and such simple facts of nature as can be taught in the open air. So far he will remain in the hands of his preparatory schoolmaster. Between thirteen and fourteen he will pass into the public school. If he begins his public school life earlier he will be too young to bear its liberty; if later, he will be too old to imbibe its spirit. Soon afterward it will be necessary to decide whether the literary part of his education shall take its color from the literature of the ancient or of the modern world—in other words, whether he shall or shall not learn Greek. If he learns Greek it will necessarily occupy much of his time in the next two years; if not, he will expend the time so saved upon German or additional French or mathematics. These are the years, too, in which he will best acquire the indispensable minimum of scientific knowledge. But neither in these years nor at any later time will he be permitted to abandon the main body of the primary subjects, although it may happen that toward the end of his school life he will not retain his hold upon them all. At sixteen he will make the great choice of his life. In making it, he will be guided by his tastes, faculties, needs and opportunities. Whatever it be that he is led to study in the four great educational lines—classical, mathematical, modern and scientific—he will devote at least half his time to it. It may well be hoped that an education so definite, yet so elastic, will correspond to the large variety of educational demands.—[Head Master of Harrow School, in the Contemporary Review.

Satisfied.

A squad of Tenth Maine volunteers while out scouting at South Mountain, came across an old woman hiding in a log cabin. After the usual salutations one of the squad named Spaulding asked her: "Well, old lady, are you a secesh?" "No," was the answer. "Are you a Union?" "No." "What are you, then?" "A Baptist, and always have been." The scouting party was satisfied—[Lewiston Journal.

A MISSOURI COON HUNT.

FOREST SPORT AFTER NIGHT SETS IN.

Graphic Account of a Night in Southern Missouri With a Pack of Dogs and Lots of Enthusiasm—Some Pointers as to How It's Done.

A writer in that best of all sportsman's papers, Forest and Stream, says: Let me here relate some points about western coon hunting. I notice one article in Forest and Stream that speaks of the hunter ascending the tree and then shooting the coon. This may be all right in the east, but in Southern Missouri, where I hunted last spring, it is considered as unsportsmanlike to shoot a coon as it would be to shoot a pheasant on the ground.

After the coon is treed the first thing to do is (if the tree permits) to climb the tree and get as near to the beast as possible, but if one had to shake him out he would find his hands pretty full. In fact, unless the tree was quite small it would be almost impossible to do so. The thing to do then, after reaching the proper place in the tree, is to break off a limb as long and as straight as possible; on the end of this put your hunting cap and thrust it out toward the coon. He is immediately paralyzed with fear, he does not wait to jump out, but literally falls backward off the limb to the ground.

Often a large "boar" coon no sooner sees one coming up into his section of the tree than with an angry growl he starts down to meet the intruder; but once get your cap on a stick, poke it at him, and all of his boldness is gone and he usually goes with it to the ground. Most hunters carry a stick up the tree with them, by putting it down the leg of their boot. An old rifle ramrod makes a good stick and is just about the right length. It is really better to carry the stick up with you, for if the coon is an old one he is liable to show fight, and it is a good thing to have your stick ready. I remember well the last hunt I took before leaving Missouri. It was during the latter part of April and the sap was pretty well up in the trees. The night was very dark and cloudy, one of those nights when it seems as though it would rain but could not. The hounds started a trail and had not run it ten minutes when we heard the leader bark "treed." On going to the spot we found the whole pack of nine beagles and foxhounds whining and baying up a large water oak. The night was so dark and the limbs of the tree so thick that the coon could not be seen. I started to climb the tree and had almost reached the top when I heard an angry growl and saw a pair of shining green eyes coming down toward me. I grasped the first limb that I could find and tried to wrench it off, but being green, it was not at all inclined to come. The coon was almost at my elbow. I saw I could not break the limb, so I turned and struck him full in the face with my fist. Down he went right in the middle of the howling pack. Well, he kept the dogs busy for almost an hour, and I assure you they were a pretty looking sight when the coon was done for. Old Ben, our jack rabbit dog, had a piece of his ear torn off as big as a quarter, and our leader, "The Old Man," had been bitten through the hip and was almost covered with blood. The other dogs had their share of wounds, too. I fancy I can see them now by the dim light of the lantern in the depths of the gloomy bottom forest, standing around the dead coon, panting and wagging their tails as much as to say, "We are the stuff." Well, after the excitement was all over I found that I too had been injured in the scuffle. The knuckles of my right hand carry a scar to-day where my fist came in contact with the coon's teeth when I struck him in the face.

Wicked Choirs.

Is it not about time for a general uprising and protest against the choir members who talk during prayer in church? asks the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate. Some of them seem to be so thoroughly filled with the idea of the importance of their singing that they violate every rule in the unwritten law of reverence. The preacher does not produce his notes for study nor keep mumbling over the outline of his sermon in an audible tone of voice while the anthem is being sung. Neither should the choir be preparing for voluntary or hymn while other parts of the service are being observed. Just as the preacher has his sermon ready when he comes to church, so should the singers be ready with their parts when they come. If they cannot be prepared before the service is commenced, let them keep quiet. Better not have any choir singing than to have it a cause of irreverence in the house of God. Let the crusade against the sin begin at once.

The Troubles of an Editor.

We must really request our friends who are delivering us new potatoes in payment of their delinquent subscriptions to select smaller varieties, if possible. They forget the only kettle that we have to cook them in is the same old tin dipper, suspended gypsy fashion to a tripod on the tide flat under our composing room. It will not hold anything over nine inches in diameter; and this season these Willapa Valley potatoes so far delivered are seldom under ten inches. This matter has caused us considerable anxiety. We don't want to refuse the potatoes just on the ragged edge of a hard winter, but we do want some discrimination made as to size, as we have no method of preparing the giant varieties.—South Bend (On.) Journal.

BOTTLE BELLS.

A Chime that Can Easily be Made—Sweet Melody from Glass.

To make a chime of metal bells, such as are used by the Swiss bell ringers, would be a difficult task for any but an expert musician, but a chime of bottle bells may be made by any clever boy with a musical ear.

The apparatus consists of two chairs, two sticks and eighteen bottles. The bottles are each hung to the sticks by an ordinary string, the strings having double loops. If the bottles are all of the same shape and size, they can be tuned by pouring water into them—the more the water, the lower the note; but if it is impossible to get the full compass in this way, differently shaped bottles can be used to fill the gaps. In fact, if you will hang up all the empty bottles you have in the house and hit them with a drumstick, or any stick with a wooden knob, you will find that every one has a different note, which can be modified by pouring in a little water; it is impossible to say how much water should be used, as bottles vary so much.

In the set illustrated all the sharps and flats are present, so that the chromatic scale is complete; but it is not always possible to get this, and you must be content to have your instrument in C or G, or D, or even F.

There is no limit to the number of bottles. You can go an octave higher, and work in medicine bottles if you wish; but, as a rule, the glass should be fairly strong.

As far as the hammer is concerned, almost any stick is good enough to beat with. We have used a hazel walking-stick with satisfactory results, but a stick with more spring in it would not be amiss.

For quick tunes two sticks should be used; for very quick tunes there should be two players, one on one side of the line and one on the other.

In our chime the lowest note is to the left hand; immediately below it is the next note; on the upper line comes the next, on the lower the next, and so on, the object being to keep the scale well within reach.

Bottles are not the only things that will give a musical note when suspended in this way. Iron pipes, steel pipes, pieces of metal, lumps of flint and cups and saucers can all be made fairly musical with a little care in selection.—New York Morning Journal.

They'll Try It Over Again.

The small boy tackles tobacco first
In solitude back of the barn,
Until his head is ready to burst,
His brain like a ball of yarn;
His stomach rolls and his eyes are red
But spite of his woe and pain,
He's pretty certain, if not quite dead,
To try it over again.

A man will tackle John Barleycorn
In every possible way.
His head may feel when he wakes at morn
As big as a load of hay;
His nerves may shake and his eyes lose sight,
And a fog surround his brain.
"The hair of a dog will cure its bite,"
He says—and tries it again.

A girl will fasten her corset string
To the door-knob, and then brace
And pull till she gets the proper thing,
In a form of "slender grace;"
Her ribs may lap and her spine may snap,
And she may faint from the pain,
But just as sure as she lives it through,
That girl will try it again.

But if sawing wood made that boy sick,
He'd never try it again;
If churches filled men's hats with brick,
They'd never go there again;
If fashion said a girl was a goose
To lace, she wouldn't again.
There's a moral somewhere around here loose,
Perhaps you'll find it again.

The Vanderbilt Millions.

The care of the Vanderbilt millions is a far greater burden than most people imagine. There are not many citizens in our country who require a great bank of their own in which to transact their business and deposit their securities. One of the largest banking buildings in the country is the Lincoln National Bank, at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. This belongs to the Vanderbilts. It holds millions of money and many more millions of securities which represent their wealth. After the elder Vanderbilt died, and his property had to be distributed among his children, it was no small task to go over the vast number of stocks and bonds he left, and divide them up according to the provisions of the will. Nor was it a small matter to distribute the ready money that was in the bank. This bank and its operators seem like a romance of our rapid civilization. In sentimental features nothing in Europe can compare with it. In no country on earth except this could such an institution exist under similar conditions. In no other land could a family have had as its financial servant a man who had been Cabinet Minister. Yet when Thomas L. James ceased to be Postmaster-General he anchored himself in the Lincoln National Bank to count the money and sit as a grim figure-head upon the stool of the successful operations of one man.—New York Evening Telegram.

lmost every day brings one or more Dakota farmers into this country looking for land, They come from the western part and claim they have not had a crop for years. A number have bought farms in this locality lately and they claim many more will follow.

Nowhere in the Red River Valley can good agricultural land, which will raise a crop every year, be bought cheaper than in this vicinity. First class farms of 160 acres can be bought for $800 or less. They are near to market, plenty of water is always attainable and wood is cheap. Depend upon it they will not go begging much longer.

Polk County Journal: Coroner Shepard was summoned to East Grand Forks on Monday to hold an inquest on the body of Billy Blair who died suddenly on Sunday morning. Mr. Shepard was told that Blair entered a saloon on Sunday morning and called for a drink. He was told that no liquor was sold at that shop on sunday and he went into an adjoining room and sat down at a table. Directly somebody went into the room and the discovery was made that Blair was dead. The jury came to the conclusion that it was heart disease that ailed him.

Red Lake Falls News. Moses E Clapp, state Attorney, is at the county seat to prosecute the case against Russell, the murderer of Dr. Balnsch. Clapp has signified his intention of carrying this case to justice He noted the fact, that, up to this time, Polk county has never convicted a murderer though eleven had been tried, Russell is, unfortunately for himself, the first on whom it is determined to reverse this order of proceedure.

An exchange well says: Never send a dollar from home when the article that dollar will purchase can be found at home. Money is our financial blood. Its circulation keeps the business body alive. Bleed that by sending your money away from home, and soon trade will put on a look of lethargy and inactivity. Always trade at home. It is twice blessed. It helps the persons patronized and finds its way back to you again. Spend your money with the merchants who help sustain the city you reside in, and who pay taxes and are with you the year round.

Crookston Times: The Polk County tax levy is only 6 and two tenths mills for all county purposes, which is 1 and one tenth mills less than last levy and one of the lowest rates of county taxation in the state. There is almost $20,000 cash in the general fund of the county and the board contemplates the redemption of 15,000 county bonds by January 1st. This makes a very flattering showing for Polk county finances, and would indicate that the affairs of the county have not been so very badly managed after all.

Prof. Sprague, President of the University of North Dakota at Grand Forks, has written a letter to one of the papers of that city declining to become a candidate for U. S. Senator. He says he has lived in a large number of States in the Union and they have all wanted him to become a candidate for senator but that he has always refused because a nice honest man could not be good and be elected. As a sample of "gall" Prof. Sprague's letter is a model. In reading it you would naturally think that Prof. Sprague had a corner on all the intelligence and integrity of the Commonwealth of North Dakota.

Crookston Times: We learn that a terrible epidemic of dyptheria has broken out in Lessor township this county, and is spreading rapidly. There are now over thirty cases in the town, and already three or four children have died and there are several others who cannot survive. Dr. McEacheran, of McIntosh, was called this week but not until the disease had gained great headway and one or two children had died. Previous to his first visit no efforts had been made to check the spread of the disease, and nearly every family in the town had been exposed to it. But as soon as the doctor was called and discovered that the disease was dyptheria in its most malignant form: he at once set about quarrentining the families affected and he hopes that the disease will be confined to the families already afflicted with it. No steps have yet been taken to call the attention of the state board of health to the state of affairs, but now that the residents of the town have become aware of the seriousness of the situation they are lending every assistance in the efforts of Dr. McEacheran to stamp out the disease and it is hoped that another week will see it under control.

Polk County Journal: Alexander Finlayson went from his home in this city to his farm near Angus last Friday in apparently good health. On Saturday morning a neighbor called and seeing no one around the premises went into the house where he found Mr. F. in a stupor. A doctor was summoned but all to no purpose as he never rallied and died about 2 o'clock Sabbath morning. The Journal is informed that Mr. F. had been in poor health and was in the habit of taking laudanum and it is thought he took an overdose by mistake. The body was brought to this city for burial on Monday. Mr. F. leaves a wife and children in very good circumstances, financially considered.

This world bein' such a big place and so many different sort o' things in it, you can generally find in it the particular sort of game you set out to hunt in the mornin'. If you set out to hunt beauty and goodness—if you take good aim and are perseverin'—if you jist track 'em and foller 'em stiddy from mornin' till night, and don't get led away a-follerin' up some other game, such as meanness and selfishness and other such worthless head o' cattle—why at night you will come in with a sight of good game. You will be a noble and a happy hunter. At the same time, if you hunt all day for faults you will come in at night with a sight of pelts. You will find what you hunt for.—Josiah Allen's Wife.

The "New York Witness', says that a merchant who advertised for an experianced clerk at a salery of $12.00 per week, received 200 answers from men who had held good positions and were now so reduced that they were glad to accept any place where they could earn a fair living This illustrates the ups and downs, particularly the "downs" of city life. The percentage of failures in business life is astounding, and the misery and poverty that results is almost beyond belief. Such suffering and privations seldom come to country homes. Whatever else of hardship and hard work those who live in the country are called on to endure they have enough to eat and generally enough to wear, and never know what it is to seek day after day for an opportunity to work and earn a living

Washington Dec. 6—[Special—Secretary Blaine has been the recipient of many hearty congratulations today by both Democrats and Republicans relative to his correspondence in the Carrundia case. Representative O'Ferrell, of Virginia and several other uncompromising Democrats have expressed the belief that Mr, Blaine is growing to be dangerously, but deservedly, popular, and that their party must put their best foot forward from this time till 1892, or he will grasp the sceptre of authority that now seems coming to them. Representative Comstock had an interview with him and pronounces him in better condition mentally and physically than he has seen him since 1876.—Tribune.

It is understood that that the Republican members of the census committee have reached an agreement on a reappointment bill based upon a representation of 356 members of the house. The present house consists of 332 members. This understanding has been arrived at after mature consideration and consultation with their party associates on the floor. The ratio of representation is one member to each 173,901 of the population. This is about the lowest number which will permit each state during the next decade to retain its present membership. The states which will gain in representation are: Alabama 1, Arkansas 1, California 1, Colorado 1, Georgia 1, Illinois 2, Kansas 1, Massachusetts 1, Michigan 1, Minnesota 2, Missouri 1 Nebraska 3, New Jersey 1, Oregon 1, Pennsylvania 2, Texas 1, Washington 1 and Wisconsin 1, or 24 in all.—Tribune.

The manufacturers of harvesters have combined and organized the American Harvester Co., for the manufacture of harvesting machinery with a capital of $35,000,000. Cyrus H. McCormick is president, and Wm. Deering, Walter A. Wood, Lewis Miller, L. A. Conger, A. S. Bushnell and Cyrus H. McCormick are directors, In its operations it intends to include every state and territory. But the most paradoxical feature is that it is a "trust" formed for the benefit of the farmers, because in the interest of lower prices. This is the avowed object of the trust. It is to be hoped that it is true but until the people see the harvesters actually selling for lower prices many will doubt it, The combination has millions of dollars and is controlled by the best business and legal talent. It can close any operation factory in the country, and practically fix its own prices. The new company can produce and distribute machines more cheaply, doing away with unnecessary burdensome expenses. But will the prices be correspondingly lower?

Moosdung, the head chief of the Indians on the Red Lake Reservation, passed through the city last week on his way home from a visit to the Indians near Devils Lake N. D. The chief says the Dakota Indians are all believers in the Messiah craze, and the craze is spreading among the Indians on some of the Minnesota reservations. The Indians on the Red Lake reservation talk of nothing else, and while very few of them are believers in the coming of the Messiah, new converts are being made every day. The chief himself was not a believer in the new religion previous to going to Dakota, but from his talk he is now more than half inclined to become a convert to it.—Crookston Times.

'TIS BETTER SO.

We stood together you and I,
And gazed across the sun kissed sea.
The lightest wave that rippled by,
The lightest cloudlet in the sky,
Had not less thought or care than we
That summer day so long ago
We stood beside the sun kissed sea.

I stood beside the sea today,
The weary, restless, surging sea.
The clouds were drifting dark and gray,
Life's light and hope had gone their way
And left its cares and tears for me.
Lonely and sad I stood today
Beside the restless, surging sea.

And yet, dear heart, I sometimes feel
I would not change it if I could.
The [illegible] mingle with the weal,
The heart that knows not sorrow's seal
Has never found the highest good.
'Tis all a part of life's great plan,
Would we even change it if we could?
—Guy I. [illegible] in New York Ledger.

When Emme Sang "Baby Mine."

I heard an amusing story about Emme Rouse the other day. Emme used to be an opera comique prima donna; subsequently she wedded Manager Colville, and now—fortunately alike for her and for the public—she wallows in wealth. Twelve or fifteen years ago she traveled about with a "Babes in the Wood" show and sung that maudlin song yclept "Baby Mine."

It is supposed that some shrewd friend must have warned Emme that the newspapers were guying her song of "Baby Mine," for suddenly Emme abandoned the song and substituted one of a more dignified character. But when the company reached New Orleans Emme was thrown into an ecstasy of joy by a letter from the Pelican club requesting her to sing, upon a certain night, her famous "Baby Mine."

Of course Emme consented, and the matter was duly exploited in the local press. On the appointed evening Emme got herself up in gorgeous fashion, and she fairly bubbled over with delight when she saw that the two front rows of seats in the parquet were occupied by members of the Pelican club. But, lo and behold! as soon as Emme began her "Baby Mine" song every mother's son in those front rows got up, turned around, kneeled down and put his head under the seat in which he had been sitting!

Well, Emme was just about as mad a woman as ever breathed. She walked off the stage as fast as she could and never after that could she be induced to attempt that song, although she was wont to declare that the deliberate insult offered by the Pelican club was the result of a conspiracy hatched among her envious and malicious professional associates.—Eugene Field's Letter in Chicago News.

Low Toned Badness.

There are certain high toned physicians here in town who "play it low down" on their patients. They affect an undecipherable handwriting and inform their patients that the prescriptions should be taken to certain druggists. If the patient thinks he can do better in the matter of rates at another drug store he presents the prescription there and is reluctantly informed by the clerk, after a protracted session behind the prescription counter, that he cannot read the writing. Then the patient is necessarily obliged to take the prescription to the drug store designated by the physician, where it is put up without any ado and where a good, round price is charged for it. The patient pays this without a murmur, for he [illegible] wouldn't be a cent in [illegible]. Now, why does this high toned physician do this? Simply because he has an arrangement with this particular druggist whereby he gets a rake off on every prescription compounded. He has a cipher arranged with the druggist and no one else can read his prescriptions. These are the physicians who object most strongly to their professional brethren who advertise.—Chicago Herald.

Unexpectedly Small.

Two little boys of my acquaintance, writes a correspondent of The Companion, had been invited out to tea at the house of a third little boy, and their mother had told them to take but one cooky each if there were cookies for tea.

Sure enough a plate of fancy cakes was passed at the table.

Freddy, the older boy, looked at the diminutive "baby cakes" a moment and then took two, saying as he did so to his little brother of four years:

"You may take two, Willie; I'm sure mamma had no idea they would be so very small."—Youth's Companion.

Some Peculiar Crabs.

In Bermuda the soldier crab carries heavy shells up the hills to puzzle future geologists. Another species climbs the mangrove trees. A shore crab in the Cape Verde islands may "be seen running along like a piece of paper blown by a strong wind." In Ascension islands there are crabs which "climb to the top of Green mountain, and the larger ones steal the young rabbits from their holes and devour them." The famous robber crab of the Philippines, that cracks and eats cocoanuts, is itself routed out of its hole and feasted on by the wild swine.—Edinburgh Review.

Not a Bad Mistake.

The editor wrote it: "While this cold weather lasts be mindful of others poorer than yourself. Turn not away in silence from the appeal for charity. Give the applicant something, if only some kindly word." The intelligent compositor made the last clause "if only some kindling wood," and he builded better than he knew.—New York Observer.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Proceedings of Both Branches of the National Legislature.

Tuesday December 2.

SENATE.

Among the various communications and petitions presented and referred were numerous petitions for the amendment of the tariff bill by providing for the rebate on manufactured tobacco, and one from an old lady in Vermont 103 years of age—with photograph attached—asking for a pension.

HOUSE.

Mr. Simmons (Conn.) from the committee on patents, called up for consideration the copyright bill. Mr. Payson, of Illinois raised the question of consideration. The house decided—yeas, 132; nays, 74—to consider the bill. A motion to reconsider, a motion to adjourn, a motion lay on the table and other motions were defeated. The previous question was ordered—yeas, 106; nays, 73. The house then adjourned, leaving the bill as unfinished business.

Wednesday December 3.

SENATE.

Mr. Cullom introduced a bill to reduce letter postage to 1 cent.

Mr. Hawley, from the committee on military affairs, reported, and asked to have put upon its passage, a joint resolution authorizing the secretary of war to issue arms and ammunition to the States of North and South Dakota. Mr. Manderson moved to amend it by also including the State of Nebraska. Mr. Voorhees said that if the proposition were one to issue 100,000 rations of food to the starving Indians it would be more consistent with Christian civilization. After further debate by Messrs. Dawes and Voorhees, Mr. Pierce said: I am nearer to the Indians than Gen. Miles is. I have no doubt but that in some of the agencies there are Indians who complain of insufficient food. But I do question very much whether Gen. Miles made the statement attributed to him in the newspapers. If the senator from Indiana were starving and had a Winchester rifle, I venture to say that he could get a barrel of flour without any trouble.

HOUSE.

The pending business was the further consideration of the copyright bill. Mr. Simonds, of Connecticut, in charge of the bill, stated that the friends of the measure were willing to have a vote taken immediately but expressed his readiness to yield any time that its opponents might desire. A vote was then taken and resulted yeas 139; nays 95; so the bill was passed.

Thursday December 4.

SENATE.

Among the bills introduced and referred was one by Mr. Paddock for a permanent tariff commission; also one by Mr. Stewart for the free and unlimited use of silver as money.

HOUSE.

The unfinished business was the bill for the punishment of every guardian, conservator, curator, committee, tutor or other judiary agent for the administration of the pensions of a ward.

The previous question was ordered—yeas, 118, nays 92—and the bill was passed. The house went into committee of the whole, on the pension appropriation bill.

Friday December 5.

SENATE.

Mr. Stanford introduced a bill to provide the government with means sufficient to supply the national want of a sound circulating medium, and asked that it lie on the table, stating that he would hereafter submit some remarks upon it.

The election bill was then taken up and discussed. Mr. Morgan offered a resolution, which went over till to-morrow, calling on the attorney general for a statement of the names, places of residence and dates of appointment each of supervisors of election now in office in each judicial district in the several states.

HOUSE.

Representative Hansbrough to-day introduced a bill in the house, making it punishable by imprisonment for not more than two years and by a fine of not more than $500 to sell, exchange, give, barter or dispose of any firearms or ammunition of any kind to any Indian.

On motion of Mr. Dockery, of Missouri, an amendment was adopted, providing that no agent or attorney shall demand, receive, or be allowed any compensation in any claim for increase of pension on account of increase of disability.

Saturday December, 6.

SENATE.

Senator Gray finished his speech in opposition to the election bill.

Mr. Hoar asked unanimous consent to have a reprint of the bill—the sections in the original bill and in the senate substitute to be in parallel columns. The motion gave rise to a long discussion, in which numerous and somewhat variant explanations were given by Republican members of the committee on privileges and elections to the action of the majority on the domiciliary provision of the bill.

The house amendment to the senate joint resolution for the issue of arms to the state of North and South Dakota, Wyoming and Nebraska was concurred in by the senate. It extends its provisions to the state of Montana.

HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. Perkins of Kansas the senate bill was passed by the house with unimportant amendments appropriating $100,000 for the purchase of additional rations for the Sioux Indians.

Monday December 8.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Mr. Casey offered a resolution in the senate, which was referred to the committee on agriculture, calling on the secretary of agriculture for a statement of the progress made in the investigation for irrigation purposes.

Bills were introduced in both houses today to incorporate the national conservatory of music with headquarters in the District of Columbia with Jeannette M. Thurber and C. M. Depew among the incorporators.

The senate adopted a resolution calling on the secretary of the treasury for a statement of moneys paid to John I. Davenport of New York as chief supervisor of elections in each year since 1871, and a statement of claims of Davenport's that have been rejected at the treasury.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The house passed the bill providing for a rebate on tobacco in stock equal to the reduction made in the internal revenue tax by the last tariff bill. Mr. McKinley merely stated that the bill was similar to the provisions of the tariff bill, section 30, which had been omitted in the enrolling of that measure, and on the declaration of Mr. Mills of Texas that it was "all right," no opposition was made to its passage. The house also adopted the resolution declaring that nothing in the tariff act should be construed to impair the provisions of the Hawaiian treaty.

The Postoffices.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Dec. 10.—Representative Wilson to-day secured the appointment of John Lyons as postmaster at Carrollton, Wash. A lively contest is going on for the postmastership at Castle Rock, Wash., and Mr. Wilson is in considerable of a quandary as to whom he shall recommend.

Postmasters appointed: A. G. Anderson, at Hitterdol, Clay county; A. O. Stortrol, at Neby, Polk county; I. O. Brown, at Utica, Winona county.

An adverse report was made to the senate to-day on several resolutions relating to additional compensation of third, fourth and fifth-class postmasters.

Getting Ready for the Opening.

PIERRE, S. D., Special Telegram.—The state house is being put in order for the meeting of the legislature, which begins its session the first Tuesday in January. The books of the state library, brought here from Bismarck, are being stored in the basement for the present. Members are arranging for quarters, and everything is looking forward to this important meeting of the legislature. The board of trade has appointed as committee on inaugural ball Dell Coy, J. H. Owen and L. B. Albright.

Among the prominent people who have engaged quarters for the winter is Mrs. Philena Johnson of Highmore, a member of the state board of charities.

South American Houses.

The New Orleans Picayune relates the following regarding the non-combustible domiciles alleged to be numerous in South America. They build fireproof houses in Buenos Ayres and Montevideo without thinking of it, and while using all the wood they can afford to, they use neither iron nor the arch. Trees are scarce in the neighborhood, and timber has to be brought down from the upper water in hard woods. Being dear, a little of it is made to go as far as possible. The floors and the roofs are supported by joists of hard wood, as among us; across these are laid flat rails of the same, and the spaces between these are bridged over by thin bricks thirteen and one-half inches long, with their ends resting on the rails; another layer of bricks is then laid with lime, and generally on this a layer of tiles. The doors and windows have no boxes, but simply frames, which are set up when the walls are going up and built in. There is no lathing or wainscot or skirting of the bottoms of the walls. A house thus built cannot be burned.

The wonderful cure by Salvation Oil of Mr. M. S. Culp, 220, George St., Baltimore, Md., who was for many years so prostrated with Rheumatism as to be entirely helpless, has awakened wide-spread interest in this remedy. It costs only 25 cts.

"If the heart of a man is depressed with cares and suffering, the mist is dispelled when the bottle appears." Not a bottle of spirits, oh no! but a small vial of that invaluable compound known to civilization as Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, which will cure a cough or cold immediately.

Spare Moments: Landlady—That new boarder needn't try to make me think he is a bachelor. He's either married or is a widower.

Landlady—He always turns his back to me when he opens his pocketbook to pay his board.

CONFIRMED.

The favorable impression produced on the first appearance of the agreeable liquid fruit remedy, Syrup of Figs a few years ago has been more than confirmed by the pleasant experience of all who have used it, and the success of the proprietors and manufacturers the California Fig Syrup Company.

Chicago Tribune: "A man paid $3 for a barrel of apples. He sold half of them for $2.50, and the rest of them decayed on his hands. How much did he lose?" asked the teacher.

"He didn't lose nothin'," bawled out a farmer's boy in the class. "He worked 'em up into cider.

Light: Tangle—My nephew, John, who is in the 'Steenth cavalry at Fort Wayout, says he had a sharp brush with some Indians the other day.

Mrs. Tangle—Well, I daresay a brush would do those untidy savages good; but I should think a currycomb would be better.

Munsey's Weekly: Footlytes—Do you think there is much difference between Sarah Bernhardt as La Tosca and Fanny Davenport in the same role?

Baldy—Yes, a good deal. About 150 pounds, I should judge.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,

An Accommodating Conductor.

The narrow-gauge railway running from Tunkhannock to Montrose, Pa., has been late a good deal recently and finally a Lehigh Valley conductor asked a messenger the reason. "Well," he said, "I don't know what usually makes it late but I can tell you what detained us to-night. One of our passengers while looking out the car window with his mouth open, lost his set of gold-mounted false teeth. The conductor on being informed of the loss, stopped the train up to the point of the accident, when all hands hunted with lanterns for the teeth until found."—New York Tribune.

Interference Was Needless.

From the Detroit Free Press.

A lady living in Bush Street, telephoned police headquarters the other day, asking that a detective be sent up there, and when an officer arrived in response to the summons, she exhibited a three-stone diamond ring and said:

"A strange man came along the other day and wanted to dispose of this, which he claimed was worn by his dead wife. He was willing to sacrifice, and I bought it for $25. My husband is very upset about it, believing it to be stolen property, and so concluded to notify the police."

"That was the correct course, madam, but you can keep the ring."

"Then it was not stolen?"

"No, ma'am."

"But why did he sell it so cheap?"

"Well he is one of a crowd which struck the town a week ago with 500 rhinestone rings to sell, and if he got $25 of you, he made a profit of about $23. Good day, madame!"

Fourteen Cents Capital.

The possession of how much money does it require to save a man from the charge of being a pauper? Lately a ship load of 525 Italians was landed at New York city, and the cash capital they brought with them averaged just fourteen cents each. A man in a strange land and unacquainted with the language of the country, who possesses fourteen cents, may not be a pauper, but, unless he is willing to work and hustles to secure employment, he is likely to become one very shortly after his arrival.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: "Your husband wields a facile pen, Mrs. Riter," remarked Mr. Dinwiddie.

"O, you are mistaken, Mr. Dinwiddie," replied Mrs. Riter; "he uses a typewriter exclusively."

SOME FAMOUS RIDDLES.

CURIOUS VERSES OF THE LONG AGO TIME.

King Solomon Himself was One of the Earliest and Most Successful Riddle Makers—Here is a Collection of the Most Famous of All the Riddles.

In all ages of the world riddles have provided amusement for the ingenious, the wise and the witty.

They are found in all languages and have been a source of diversion to all classes of people, from the grave philosopher in his study to the merry clown in the circus, while anciently the guesser of riddles was supposed to be gifted. And while this play upon words is a sort of witty pastime with us, the riddle once held a far higher place. After inventing it, men began to make it into a kind of game. Bets were made on the answer and sides chosen, each side backing its champion, and it is related that King Solomon once won a large sum of money for his superior wit in guessing riddles.

The oldest riddle on record, with which no doubt everyone is familiar, may be found in the book of Judges, chapter 14, verses 14–18.

The riddle propounded by the fabled Sphinx to the people of Thebes is probably the most celebrated in the long list of philosophical riddles, the solution of which won for Æpidus (son of Lafus, king of Thebes) a kingdom: "What is that which goes on four legs in the morning, two in the daytime, and in the evening on three?"

The answer is, Man, who creeps in infancy, walks erect in maturity, and in old age uses a staff.

The Germans ask, "What can go in the face of the sun and yet leave no shadow?" Answer, the wind.

The African puts it in this way: "What flies forever and never rests?" and the Persian says, "What is wingless and legless, yet flies fast, and is never imprisoned?"

Cleobulus, one of the "Seven Wise Men of Greece," was a famous riddle maker, his riddle of the year being an example of his skill in that line: "There is a father with twice six sons. These sons have thirty daughters apiece, parti-colored, having one cheek white and the other black, who never see each other's face, or live above twenty-four hours." Answer—"The year, months and days."

This is not very witty, but what mediæval enigma is?

The riddle was much cultivated in the middle ages. An old book entitled "Demands Joyous," but which we should term amusing questions, was printed by Wynken de Worde, the second expert printer, in 1511. From this book, of which there is said to be but one copy extant, we cull a few "Demands."

"Who were the persons who once made all, sold all, bought all and lost all?" Answer—"A smith made an awl and sold it to a shoemaker, who lost it."

"What is the worst bestowed charity that we can give?" Answer—"Alms to a blind man, for he would be glad to see the person hanged who gave it to him."

"What is that that never freezeth?" Answer—"Boiling water."

"What man getteth his living backward?" Answer—"The ropemaker."

The Reformation put a stop to riddle-making for awhile, but in the seventeenth century it revived again, and in France it soon rivaled in popularity the chanson and madrigal.

A riddle ascribed to Canning, where, by the addition of a letter, the word "cares" is changed into one of the sweetest words in the English language, is very fine. It runs as follows:

"A word there is of plural number,
Foe to ease and tranquil slumber,
Any other word you take,
And add an 's' twill plural make.
But if you add an 's' to this,
So strange the metamorphosis,
Plural is plural now no more
And sweet what bitter was before."

Could we imagine the stately Charles James Fox indulging in riddle-making? Yet here is one of which he is the author, and which has long been in "Mother Goose's" rhymes:

"Formed long ago, yet made to-day,
Employed while others sleep—
What none would like to give away,
And none would like to keep."

You arose from the answer this morning!

And Letitia Barbauld! Fancy her sitting down gravely to propound enigmas. She did, however, and very cleverly, too, as seen by the following, on a river:

"I always murmur, yet I never weep,
I always lie in bed, but never sleep,
My mouth is wide and larger than my head
And much disgorges, though 'tis never fed,
I have no legs or feet, yet swiftly run,
And the more falls I get, move faster on."

Mark Lemon, an English humorist, and former editor of Punch, was fond of making charades which were both bright and witty, as witness this a "barrow:"

"Old Charlie Brown, who a big rogue was reckoned,
Was brought up at my first, for making my second,
He was fined, and because he no money could pay,
Had to work with my whole on the Queen's highway."

A search through old letters has often revealed many a curious riddle. Evidently the writers thought it added zest to their letters to puzzle the recipients.

Among the correspondence of the Rev. John Newton, an English divine, was found a letter from Cowper, the poet, bearing date July 30, 1780. The contents show that—

"A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the best of men."

"I am just two and two, I am warm, I am cold,
And the parent of numbers that can not be told;
I am lawful, unlawful, a duty, a fault;
I am often sold dear—good for nothing when bought;
An extraordinary boon and a matter-of-course,
And yielded with pleasure when taken by force."

'Tis a kiss.

Horace Walpole, in a letter to Lady Ossory, writes: "I send you a very old riddle, but if you never saw it you will like it and revere the riddle maker, which was one Sir Isaac Newton, a star-gazer and conjurer:

"Four people sat down to a table to play;
They played all that night, and parted next day.
Could you think when you're told that as they all set
No other played with them, nor was there a bet!
Yet when they rose up each was winner one guinea,
Tho' none of them lost the amount of a penny."

Walpole could not guess it, but Lady Ossory did, and sent him this answer:

"Four merry fiddlers played all night
To many a dancing ninny,
And the next morning went away,
And each received a guinea."

It is not altogether in old manuscripts and letters that one finds quaint and curious things, though I imagine the fireplace would be the last place one would think of looking for riddles, but over the mantelpiece of an old, old inn in Lincolnshire, England; may be found this droll quiz:

"A man without eyes saw plums on a tree.
Neither took plums or left plums. Pray how can that be!"

The answer just below is of later date than the enigma, as shown by the wording:

"The man hadn't eyes, but he had just one eye,
With which on the tree two plums he could spy;
He neither took plums, nor plums did he leave,
But took one and left one, as we may conceive."

MITES OF MIRTH.

"The winter," saith the goose,
With sadness in her tone,
"Will be both long and cold;
I feel it in my bone.

Of many a self-made man we know
There can be little doubt
In some respects he'd be improved

Afraid of a Splurge.

One of the slickest games ever worked by confidence men is that of buying a farm. One of a pair looks over the country until he finds the man he is after, and he then buys the farm at the farmer's own price, paying from $50 to $200 down to bind the bargain. Before the papers can be made out a confederate comes along, falls in love with the same farm, and offers the farmer $2,000 more than the other did. The agriculturist sees a speculation here, and he buys the first purchaser off with a big bonus. Then both men drop out of sight, and the farmer learns something new.

I was stopping over night with a Connecticut farmer, who had sold out and taken $200 to bind the bargain. I was there when the second man called with his tempting offer. He waited at the barn, and Uncle Jerry came in and said to Aunt Sally:

"Seems like a chance to make a clean thousand dollars. The first buyer says he'll take a thousand, and that'll leave us the same."

"Did we ever have a thousand dollars all at once?" she asked.

"Never."

"Ever have a chance to splurge out and make fools of ourselves?"

"No."

"D'ye think we'd do it if we had the money?"

"Wall, I was thinkin' of a new watch and a broadcloth suit."

"And I was thinkin' of a silk dress and a new bonnet. Uncle Jerry, we dasn't do it. We'd splurge in less'n twenty-four hours."

"Guess we would, Aunt Sally, and so I'll sell out to the fust man."

He sternly refused the second offer, and even when a thousand more was added he was inflexible. The first purchaser never showed up again, and to this day the old couple are holding the money and have the papers ready for the trade.

It Was Safe.

Grocer—"Well, my little boy, what will you have?"

"Fifteen cents worth of molasses."

Grocer (as he hands the pitcher over the counter)—"Where is your money?"

"In the pitcher; I put it there so as to be sure not to lose it."—Fliegende Blatter.

A Man's Ideal of Woman.

Said an eastern man of fashion the other day: "To my mind the judicial woman is a blot on the face of the universe. We don't want women who can reason and work things out. We want dear, delightful, frivolous things who will float by us in butterfly fashion, making us no end of trouble and inducing us to be willing to kill each other for their sakes. The time when woman was at her best, to my mind of thinking, was in the middle ages when she sat up in a window of a turreted castle threw her hankerchief down to one knight and a hated rival rushed at him as he grasped it, and they flew at each other and knocked their tin hats off, the hated rival was stretched out stiff and cold, and the maiden in the turret applauded her gallant knight and believed that he had done well. The judicial female is a mental hermaphrodite.

A Whopper.

"Yep, said old man Dunlap. "I member jest as well when the first caravan came th'ough these parts. 'Twut forty-three years ago last grass. They had the first elephant over seen hereabouts—ole Bolivar—an' I tell ye he was a buster. After they had got th'ough their performin' ole Bolivar got loose an' went rampagin' round the neighborhood, an' finally brought up down back o' Si Pettengill's hay-stack. Si'd never seen an elephant, an' next mornin,' when he turned the corner of his stack and ran smack up in front of ole Bolivar, I tell ye its'prized him some! He jest stopped, throwed up both hands an' hollered, 'Gosh all hemlock! What a toad!' and put for the house."—Puck.

Unlucky Number Nineteen.

The peculiar coincidence connected with the last primary for the legislature has just come to light. It will be remembered that Mr. Cobb was defeated by nineteen votes. Since then it has been remembered that his father was defeated by nineteen votes and his grandfather by the same number. We do not know whether Mr. Cobb is twice 19 years old, but to complete the coincidence he ought to be.—Athens (Ga.) Banner.

SITTING BULL DEAD.

The Old Villian at last Sent to the Happy Hunting Ground.

His Arrest by a Squad of Indian Police Caused a Fight.

FORT YATES, S. D., Special Telegram, Dec. 17.—Sitting Bull was arrested this morning at daylight by the Indian police. Friends attempted his rescue and a fight ensued. Sitting Bull, his son Black Bird, Catch Bear and four other hostiles, together with seven of the best police under Capt. Fecht, were killed.

As soon as the firing had ceased three troops of cavalry came to the rescue of the Indian police, who were being routed by the skilled sharpshooters of the hostiles.

They brought with them two machine guns, which were turned loose upon Sitting Bull's followers, and within five minutes the savages were out of range and leaving at a furious rate on their fleet ponies toward the Bad Lands, where Short Bull and Crow Dog are intrenched with 200 Ogallala bucks.

The police were sent out to Sitting Bull's camp to arrest the old medicine man, as it had been reported that he had struck his tepees and was about to join the hostiles, who have pillaged along the White river. When the officers reached the camp they found Indians ready to march. Their ponies were painted and many of the savages had stripped themselves for war. The police made a dash into the camp and seized Sitting Bull.

They were on their way back to Standing Rock when Black Bird, the tall and athletic son of the famous chief, urged his comrades to recapture the old man. The women and children were left in the bushes and then with yells the hostiles charged upon the police, firing as they came. A hand-to-hand struggle ensued, during which Sitting Bull, who was not shackled, gave his orders in a loud voice.

For several minutes the firing was heavy and deadly. Nearly every man who was hit was killed. In the furious fusillade Sitting Bull fell out of his saddle, pierced by a bullet, but it is not known whether it was fired by the charging party or one of the police. Black Bird was also slain almost at the first volley of the police. The hostiles fired with deadly accuracy, and slowly drove the officers from the field.

If the cavalry had not come at this time it is probable that the force would have been annihilated. The soldiers were quick to enter into the action. A skirmish line was thrown out and then, kneeling and firing as they advanced, the gallant troopers, with the machine guns playing over their heads, poured a withering fire into the savages.

Sitting Bull's body, which had been abandoned by the police, was recaptured, as well as that of his son, and will be taken to Standing Rock. After the fight was over the followers of the dead chief struck out at a killing pace for the Bad Lands.

The battle to-day, news of which is still meager, will doubtless inflame the entire Sioux nation. There has been no report from Pine Ridge since yesterday, but it is certain that if Gen. Brooke sent his troopers out to the White river, as he promised twenty-four hours ago, he, too, has also had a fight by this time.

SAVED BY CAVALRY.

The Police Run Out of Ammunition During the Fight.

BISMARCK, N. D. Special Telegram, Dec. 17.—It is almost impossible to obtain reliable information of the affair at the Standing Rock agency this forenoon, as the government telegraph is under such strict surveillance that no private or press messages will be transmitted after office hours, and not even then unless approved by the military authorities.

It appears that the arrest had been made by the police, who started with Sitting Bull for the agency, when about a hundred of the hostiles attacked them and attempted to rescue their leader.

The cavalry were about three miles behind, and a courier was dispatched to them for assistance. The troops hastened forward and arrived just in time to prevent a wholesale massacre of the police, who were entirely out of ammunition when the soldiers arrived.

Too much praise cannot be given the faithful native police for their bravery and loyalty, several of them giving up their lives rather than be false to their trust.

It is believed that the death of Sitting Bull will be the end of the trouble at Standing Rock, although his followers, having tasted of bloodshed, will perhaps require energetic and severe treatment for a while.

The military is at last awake to the gravity of the situation, and the result will no doubt be the complete disarmament of the disloyal redskins.

AFTER THE INDIANS.

Gen. Ruger on the Trail of the Indians in the Bad Lands.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Gen. Schofield this afternoon received two telegrams from Gen. Ruger, commanding the department of Dakota, in one of which he says he hopes to get in all the Indians who turned back from the Bad Lands. Two Strikes' party is trying to induce them to come along with them. He says that the Indians are moving slowly on account of poor stock.

The other telegram includes a dispatch received yesterday from the commanding officer at Oelrichs, S. D., saying that his interpreters just in from White River report that fifty lodges in the Bad Lands are trying to work their way north to the Cheyenne river agency. Gen. Ruger adds that the necessary steps have been taken to intercept them if possible.

Gen. Schofield received a telegram to-day from Gen. Miles confirming the press reports of dissension among the Indians on the Bad Lands. As no report has been received in regard to the reported engagement between troops and Indians, it is not believed that such a thing occurred.

FUN AHEAD.

Buffalo Bill Notified That the Campaign Will Open To-Day.

LA CROSSE, Special Telegram, Dec. 17.—Dr. D. F. Powell received the following dispatch to-day:

"Tell Pepaska (Buffalo Bill) Gen. Carr in field with Sixth cavalry. Campaign opens to-morrow. Is he coming?

JOHN M. BURKE."

Maj. Burke is Cody's manager, and has charge of the Wild West Indians. Cody is going to his home in Nebraska to-morrow, and being somewhat out of health will not go to the frontier unless the troops of his state are called out.

FIGHT WITH INDIANS.

Five Redskins Killed by Citizens Near Battle Creek, S. D.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—A dispatch received at army headquarters from Battle Creek, S. D., states that a letter had just been received by a courier from Capt. Wells at the south of French creek, stating that a fight had occurred there Dec. 12 between twenty citizens and a band of roaming Sioux. Five Indians were reported killed, but the loss of the whites was not given.

A dispatch from Gen. Brooke said that reports received by him on the night of the 13th showed a decidedly hostile intent on the part of the Indians in the Bad Lands. He feared that the collision between some citizens and the Indians had turned the scale.

Information from Fort Bennett goes to show that the Indians at Cherry Creek agency are greatly excited, and that under the leadership of Big Foot they are keeping up the ghost dances. The Indian excitement is increased by the report that bands of Sioux from Rosebud and Pine Ridge are moving in the direction of Cherry Creek.

Col. Corbin said last night that it was not known whether or not the fight referred to by Gen. Brooke was the one that occurred at French Creek.

"If not," continued the colonel, "there have been two rows, and of the one referred to by Gen. Brooke we know nothing as yet. It is to be feared, now that blood has been shed, that there will be more trouble, for if an Indian knows that some of his tribe have been hurt he will forego his peaceful intentions. Two Strike was on his way into Pine Ridge, and it is to be hoped that he won't turn back when he hears of the French Creek affair. In all probability Kicking Bear and Short Bull are the instigators of such trouble as has occurred."

THIRTEEN CASUALTIES.

The Official Report of the Affair Sent From St. Paul.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—At 9 o'clock to-night Assistant Adjt. Gen. Corbin, of Gen. Miles' staff, received an official dispatch from St. Paul saying Sitting Bull, five of Sitting Bull's men, and seven of the Indian police have been killed. The thirteen casualties were the result of an attempt by the police to arrest Sitting Bull.

Gen. Brooke, in command of the troops at Pine Ridge, telegraphed the situation to Assistant Adjt. Gen. Corbin at army headquarters to-night as follows: "All the Indians who can be brought in are now here or near here, leaving about 200 bucks in the Bad Lands who refuse to listen to any one or anything. Against these I will send a sufficient force to capture or fight them. All has been done that can be done. The Indians now out have a great many stolen horses and cattle with them. I hope to be able to end this matter now."

GIVING CHASE.

Troops After the Fugitives From Sitting Bull's Camp.

DICKINSON, N. D., Special Telegram, Dec. 17.—Reliable dispatches received here this evening state that Sitting Bull's camp was attacked by troops, and himself and seven warriors killed.

The remainder of the band are now in retreat up the Grand river, and it is not yet known definitely along which fork their trail will lie.

Information of the most reliable nature was received to-day that a band of eight wagons were encamped on the Little Missouri, opposite Pretty Buttes. It is, therefore probable that the fugitives will make this camp their objective point. They will not be able, without great exertion, to reach the forks of Grand river to-day. It is estimated that 150 warriors are in the band, and this number is likely to be increased by other bands.

TWO STRIKES GIVES IN.

One of the Hostile Chiefs Coming in as Fast as Possible.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Dec. 17.—The troops did not start this morning, as Two Strike sent word that he was coming in as fast as possible. The old warrior is now camped at the Catholic mission ann will be here by noon to-morrow. He has 180 lodges or about 920 Indians, principally old men, women and children. The cavalry and artillery are all ready to start at sunrise.

WENT TO A HIGHER COURT.

The Domestic Difficulties of a Cadott, Ends in a Double Tragedy.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., Dec. 17.—Peter St George of Cadott early Sunday morning reported that his wife was missing. Search was instituted and she was found in the woodshed hanging by the neck and stiff and cold. Certain contusions and wounds about her face and head indicated foul play and the husband was at once suspected as the murderer. He was watched throughout the day by the authorities, and at 10 o'clock at night, when the coroner's jury reported that Mrs. St. George's death was due to murder by unknown hands, went to the house to arrest him but found that he had committed suicide by cutting his throat. Domestic difficulties are alleged as the cause for the tragedies.

THE POPE'S CONDITION.

Much Anxiety Over It, and His Physician Prepared for the Worst.

ROME, Dec. 17.—There is much anxiety at the Vatican over the condition of the pope, who has been seriously affected by the extreme cold weather. Dr. Ceccerelli, who is in attendance on his holiness, is prepared for the worst.

Off for the Battle Ground.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Billy Murray of this city and Jimmie Kennard, the St. Paul kid, who are matched to fight to a finish with skin gloves for $1,000 a side, the largest stake ever put up on men of their weight (110 pounds), left this city for the battle grounds to-day. The battle will take place before daylight.

For Duty in the Field.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Dec. 17.—The secretary of war has directed Assistant Surgeon W. O. Owens, Jr., to report at once to Col. Carr at Rapid City, S. D., for duty with troops in the field.

Some South Dakota Business.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Dec. 17.—Senators Moody and Pettigrew took a trip around the departments to-day to clear up South Dakota business. They had the order of discontinuance of the Yankton signal office suspended until March 1, when it is thought an appropriation may be secured to continue the office indefinitely. The secretary of the interior ordered the act for a survey of the boundary between North and South Dakota proceeded with. The superintendent of census directed that all enumerators in South Dakota be paid at once, all the schedules being accepted.

READY FOR A FIGHT.

Signals of the Hostiles Indicate That They Will Take the Warpath To-Day.

The Conflict Between the Cowboys and Indians Thought to Have Inflamed the Latter.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Dec. 16.—About 9 o'clock last night a great light suddenly blazed up in the northwest in the direction of the Bad Lands. The light faded to a sullen glow and then rapidly spread along the sky for a distance of a couple of miles. Men posted in Indian signals in the camp said this meant that the Indians in the Bad Lands had determined to fight. It is thought that the conflict between the Indians and the cowboys on Battle creek yesterday, in which three of the former were killed, has inflamed the Indians.

The Indians in the camp of the friendlies, on being asked what the signal meant, declined at first to talk, but being pressed finally said it meant that their brothers in the Bad Lands would be on the warpath within one sun and that all Indians who did not join them would be dogs and enemies forever. The friendlies, however, disclaimed any intention of obeying the signal. The guards here will be doubled, nevertheless, and the friendly camp kept under the closest surveillance.

The Sixth, Seventh and Eighth cavalry and 300 state militia are under marching orders and will start for the Bad Lands either to-night or to-morrow morning. It is the general opinion here that a fight with the hostiles is inevitable.

INDIANS GOING NORTH.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Dec. 16.—A battery of Hotchkiss guns was sent to-day from Fort Mead to reinforce Gen. Carr's command at the mouth of Rapid creek. A number of straggling parties of Indians have been seen going north. They are under command of Short Bull and Kicking Bear, and say they will not surrender. Short Bull is one of the worst Indians on the reservation. It was he who murdered Agent Appleton in cold blood at Pine Ridge. It is expected the main body of hostiles will attempt to follow him. Gen. Carr has orders to intercept and disarm the Indians at all hazards, and it is expected a collision will occur to-morrow in the vicinity of the mouth of the Sprink creek or Rapid creek.

Dr. McGillycuddy, surgeon general of the South Dakota militia, has been ordered to join Col. Day's command at the front. Several old Indian fighters have volunteered as guides and scouts. A company of Sioux and Crow scouts from the north are on their way to join Gen. Carr.

The Indians sent out by Gen. Brooke to bring in the hostiles were roughly treated and their peace pipe shot into pieces.

A WISE CHOICE.

Troops Stationed at Dickinson to Prevent Indians From Going to Canada.

DICKINSON, N. D., Special Telegram, Dec. 16.—This point has been wisely chosen with a view to preventing any unruly Indians from the Sioux and Cheyenne reservations from escaping and joining friends in North Dakota and Wyoming or across the Canada border. Dickinson is a division station of the Northern Pacific, in immediate telegraphic communication with points east and west, with plenty of engines and cars ready to supply troops or place them promptly where they are most needed in guarding the line. It is believed that more will be sent here, and certainly no point of the Northern Pacific is better suited to the object in view.

No information can be obtained here to give ground for the newspaper rumors concerning a fight between friendlies and hostiles. It is not believed that any bloodshed has occurred, nor is it thought likely that Kicking Bear and Short Bull have left the vicinity of their own reservations. Scouting parties will set out from here to-morrow toward the Sioux reservation to ascertain the probability of the reports.

THE AZTECS AFFECTED.

Mexican Indians Have the Messiah Craze, Also.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 16.—Luis Del Commun of Cholulu, Pueblo, Mex., was in the city to-day en route to Chicago. In an interview to-night he said the Aztec Indians of Mexico are afflicted with a Messiah craze very similar to that which is disturbing the Indians in the Dakotas. All the Aztec tribes scattered through Mexico are, he said, believers in the prophesied Messiah, expected to appear and free them from the foreign conquerers and restore them to their domain and their pristine glory.

At Cholulu are the ruins of an old Aztec temple. This is the Mecca of the believers in the Messiah and there are now encamped about it hundreds of Aztecs, who are engaged in performing all sorts of mysterious religious rites. Of these rites of old human sacrifice was part, accompanied with a flower dance. The sacrifice has been done away with and now only the dance remains.

The Aztec prophesy is very like that which is believed in by the Sioux. The Messiah will cause the volcano Popocatapetl to erupt and overwhelm the country with lava, which will destroy all but the Aztecs.

REPORTED OFFICIALLY.

Col. Day, of the South Dakota Militia, Reports Three Indians Killed.

PIERRE, S. D., Special Telegram, Dec. 16.—Gov. Mellette to-day received word from Col. M. H. Day, who is in charge of the militia forces in the Black Hills, that in an engagement with the Indians yesterday near Hermosa three Indians were killed. It is his opinion that there will have to be bloodshed among the Indians before they can be brought to their senses. He understands it is the policy of the war department to arrest the leaders as soon as possible. Nobody likes to be in danger from the Indians, for it is proverbial that there is no telling what they will do. These Indians were wild when they were settled on their reservations, and while many have been partly civilized, the great per cent of them have remained in their original state.

Invention of Poplin.

Dry Goods Chronicle: The original invention of poplin is claimed by Avignon, France, once a papal see, on which account it was called papalina, in compliment to the reigning pope, at which time (the fifteenth century) this rich material was produced to supply the gorgeous ecclesiastical vestments and hangings in use. The industry was introduced into Dublin by French immigrants, refugees, at the time of the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, who settled in that part of the Irish capital called the "Liberties." The La Touche family established the first organized manufactory there, which commenced operations in 1693.

A TERRIBLE FATE.

A Street Car Runs Over a Little Boy and Severs His Head.

Shortly before 6 o'clock last night there occurred one of the saddest accidents known for a long time in the casualty record of St. Paul. A party of boys who had been out skating were returning home. As they were passing along South Concord, near State street, one of them, Joseph Bracken, a boy about seven years old, and who resided with his parents at 210 Roble street, attempted to board a steet car. On that street there is an extension, with what is now commonly denominated "a bob-tail" car, making trips over it. The line or loop extends from Concord to Annapolis street. Boys have been in the habit of trying to steal rides on these cars, as mischievous boys often will, though repeatedly warned not to do so. In some unaccountable way the boy missed his footing, falling off the car in such a manner that the car wheels run over his neck, completely severing the head from the body.

As soon as the driver, Joseph Mahler, became aware that something had happened he stopped the car and ran to the unfortunate lad's assistance, but the cruel deed was complete with the body lying alongside the track and the decapitated head near. The body was taken to P. Gadbout's, the South Robert street undertaker. Dr. Darling will hold an inquest at 10 a. m. to-day. Although the driver, Joseph Mahler, was placed under arrest, the general sentiment of the passengers and other bystanders is to the effect that the affair was a purely accidental one, and that the driver is in no sense culpable.

Sad as these accidents are, they will continue at intervals unless some means of preventing boys climbing on or off moving cars is enforced. Some years ago a bright little fellow lost a portion of one of his legs in this way, which was grievous enough, but this accident is the most horrible of the kind that ever happened in St. Paul.

CAUGHT BY FALLING WALLS.

Death and Injury Caused by a Fire in Kirksville, Mo.

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., Dec. 16.—Early this morning fire broke out in the furniture and hardware store of P. M. Smith, and leaped across the street to the Masonic temple, the lower floor of which was occupied by the town and county offices. The fire then spread to a vacant building adjoining, and to the jewelry store of William Hart. All of these houses were completely destroyed, but their contents, with the exception of the stock of furniture and hardware of P. M. Smith, were saved.

The wall of the building adjoining the jewelry store fell on the roof of the latter, burying in the debris several persons who were attempting to escape from the flames. Following is a list of casualties: Killed, Volney Sweet. Injured, H. Sheeps, slightly; Mrs. Rose Banker, severe internal injuries and scalp torn, will probably die; Price, seriously, but not fatally hurt; Fred Sweet, severe injuries, not necessarily fatal; William Hart, leg crushed to a jelly. It is feared more are buried beneath the ruins. The pecuniary loss will aggregate between $40,000 and $50,000; insured.

AN UNNATURAL FATHER.

He Shields the Man Who Criminally Assaults His Little Daughter.

CANTON, Ohio, Dec. 16.—A horrible crime committed about five weeks since has just leaked out. It is said that at that time Lee Moonshower criminally assaulted the five and seven-year-old daughters of his brother Frank. Both children were injured and the elder quite seriously. The father swore the doctor to secrecy and hushed up the matter by the promise of $10 in money to be paid sometime this month. Neighbors called upon the prosecutor and will probably file an affidavit. Lee Monshower was arrested late last night and is confined in jail.

An Immense Irrigating System.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Dec. 16.—Representative Hansbrough is preparing a bill which will ask an appropriation for a survey for an immense irrigating system in North Dakota. The measure will propose a survey from some point on the Missouri river in the neighborhood of Fort Stevenson or Washburn, to ascertain the feasibility of drawing the flood waters of the Missouri to the Cheyenne and James rivers and storing them in the natural reservoirs. If this could be done a two-fold advantage would be gained, as in addition to the irrigation the floods on the lower Missouri would be greatly reduced in volume. Mr. Hansbrough says there is a natural fall of 500 feet between the Missouri and these other streams, and the surface is such that the construction of a channel would be comparatively easy and cheap.

Suwanee Fitted the Line.

The following story is published by a correspondent of Philadelphia Press:

"Did you ever hear how 'Suwanee River' was written?"

"Don't think I ever did."

"Well, Steve Foster—Stephen C. Foster was his full name—was in the zenith of his popularity when he wrote the words," said my friend to me. "He had written the song in the frame house on Sandusky street in Alleghany, but he couldn't find the name of a river that suited him. Finally he went over to the office of his brother, Morrison Foster, sat down on his desk, and said: 'Morrison, I've got a new darkey song here, and it's complete except the name of the river. I want a Southern river with only two or three syllables. Give me one, wont you?'

"Morrison suggested several, but they didn't suit. Then he took down an atlas, ran his eye over a map of the Southern States for a few minutes and finally said, "Here's a river in Florida by the name of Suwanee, how will that do?"

"'That's it, that's it,' exclaimed the song writer, jumping from the desk. 'It's just what I want,' and picking up a pen he inserted the name of the river that has since become the title of one of the sweetest and most pathetic of melodies. I believe that Stephen C. Foster never thought very much of the piece himself until after it had taken its place among the popular songs of the century."

A Bellamy Apartment House.

Omaha Bee: Omaha will soon have an apartment house that will be built on the Edward Bellamy idea. J. H. Van Dorn is now having the plans for such a building prepared. It will be situated at Twenty-second and Leavenworth streets. It will be a brick structure, four stories high, and containing twenty-five apartments. The plan of living in this building will be co-operative, as all of the cooking will be done in one kitchen, each individual sharing his or her expense. The house will be put in operation about Jan. 1.

A Strange Experience.

New York Weekly: First Drug Clerk—I had a queer experience last night. Had just closed up the shop, lain down and got to sleep, when there was the most violent ringing at the night bell—

Second Drug Clerk—Ha, ha, ha! After a postage stamp, eh?

First Drug Clerk—No; he wanted—

Second Drug Clerk—Ho, ho, ho! Wanted to look in the directory, eh; or, maybe, wanted to know what street it was?

First Drug Clerk—Nothing of the sort. You might guess all day and not hit.

Second Drug Clerk—Then what on earth was it?

First Drug Clerk—He wanted a prescription filled.

THE NORTHWEST.

The safe in the Northern Pacific station at Clitherall, near Fergus Falls, was robbed of $750. It is supposed that an operator named Nichols, who was temporarily in charge, took the money, as he has disappeared.

H. S. Branham, mayor of Litchfield, while delirious with fever, got hold of a revolver and shot himself through the head, inflicting a fatal wound. He had been sick but a few days. Mr. Branham was one of the leading business men of Litchfield and was well known throughout the state.

At Bluffton, on the Northern Pacific, William O'Regan, a traveling peddler, single, was standing near the station holding his horses by the head while a train passed. The horses became unmanageable and ran upon the platform, throwing O'Regan under the train. The cars passed over him, killing him instantly. The coroner's jury exonerated the railroad company. O'Regan is supposed to have friends near Morris.

Jacob Frey, a butcher of Fergus Falls, tried to throw a quarter of beef over a beam and when he slipped from the step-ladder he fell on one of the sharp hooks used in the meat market to hang up beef. The hook caught him under the ear, inflicting a terrible gash. The flesh pulled off, and he fell to the next hook below, where he caught by his shoulder and hung until lifted off. The injuries are severe, but he will recover.

A quiet wedding occurred at St. Margaret's chapel, Westminster, London, England. The contracting parties were Gertrude L. Archibald and Joel P. Heatwole, both of Northfield. Cannon Farrar and Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by Mr. White, of the American legislation. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Heatwole left for Paris and will visit other points on the continent, returning to Northfield some time in January.

E. E. Carson, a patient in the Rochester insane asylum, the other day succeded in unlocking a window screen, and tying his bed-clothes together he knotted one end to the steam heater and attempted to slide from the window to the ground. He had just started, however, when his rope untied and he fell to the ground, four stories below, striking on his feet. He was heard to fall by parties on the outside and was taken into the asylum. A terrible shaking up appears to be the only injury he sustained.

NORTH DAKOTA.

There are four cases of scarlet fever at Bismarck, but efforts are being made to prevent the spread of the disease.

The Great Northern railroad is shipping coal free of freight charges, to the destitute along its line.

The president has approved the joint resolution authorizing the secretary of war to issue 1,000 stands of arms to each of the States of North and South Dakota, Wyoming, Montana and Nebraska.

During the absence of her husband Mrs. Geo. E. Wentworth, of Bismarck, attempted to feed the family horse, and fell from the hay loft to the manger, striking her back violently and receiving internal injuries that will confine her to her room for some time.

Two men, charged with larceny and confined in the Fargo lock-up, made their escape from that institution. No trace of them has yet been found. They had been discharged from jail but a short time ago because witnesses against them had disappeared.

Representative Hansbrough introduced a joint resolution in Congress appropriating $500,000 to be expended under the direction of the agricultural department in the purchase of speed wheat for the residents of this state who lost their crop by reason of drouth or through other causes during the season of 1890.

Andrew Lee, is a well-to-do farmer living fifteen miles south of Grand Forks, and the last seen of him alive was about 7 o'clock near the hotel at which he stopped. Next morning his lifeless body was found one mile from the city near the Great Northern railroad track. From the appearance of the body it is believed that Lee was murdered and his body placed near the track to avoid suspicion.

Senator Pierce has made another move to secure an appropriation to repair Fort Abraham Lincoln in this state. He introduced a bill which contemplates a much greater improvement than the one before the senate at the last session. The amount asked has been increased from $15,000 to $200,000. The need of quarters for troops in that particular spot just now will help toward favorable action on the bill.

Grand Forks Herald says Edward Campbell, charged with burglarizing Brooks Bros. elevator at Ojata, was acquitted, but was immediately re-arrested at the instance of the American Express company charged with robbing a safe at Fort Abercrombie. The two men charged with robbing Tharaldson's store pleaded guilty and were sentenced by Judge Templeton as follows: Ward, three years and nine months; Kingsberry three years and nine months.

A new chapter in the pardoning of Billy Oswald, who was sentenced to the penitentiary at Bismarck for twelve years for killing Pat McWeeney in 1886, was developed in the district court at Devil's Lake in the case of E. E. Dow of Grand Forks vs. Elliott. Elliott who was foreman of the jury that convicted Oswald, testified that he received $50 at the hands of Col. Lounsberry in consideration of which he (Elliott) signed the petition for a pardon.

P. B. Groat, general emigration agent of the Northern Pacific railroad, returned to St. Paul from a two weeks trip through the state. He reports that the outcome of the crops this year is generally from fairly good to good, except in the extreme southern part of the state and in some comparatively small districts in the central counties. The prices of grains range high, and farmers are, as a rule, getting in good shape financially.

For two days the attention of the district court, at Fargo has been occupied with the Traill county seat case. At the present election a vote was taken upon the re-location of the county seat, and it was largely in favor of moving it from Caledonia to Hillsboro. Suit has since been brought to prevent the removal on the ground that the act under which the election was held was unconstitutional, it being special legislation which the constitution prohibits. The judge has reserved his decision.

President Stockbridge, of the State Agricultural College, at Fargo, announces a winter course of instruction open to all farmers and young men desiring instruction, beginning January 3, and continuing twelve weeks. To distribute the advantages as equally as possible, a scholarship, entitling the holder to free tuition and free room rent is placed at the disposal of each member of the legislature, and one for each local grange, alliance or farmers' club within the State. Board for each student can be had at three dollars per week, and for others an extra charge of from one to three dollars per week will cover the expense of rooms. "The course, though conducted on a scientific basis, will be made preeminently practical, the end constantly in view to impart to students in attendance such positive practical information as will find constant application on the farm, and enabling its possessor to conduct his affairs more understandingly and successfully."

A petition is before the Sioux Falls city council to have the parade of the Salvation army abated.

The farm house of Elias Holderman, near Gettysburg, was recently destroyed by fire, together with nearly everything it contained.

Deputy Sheriff Kittrell went into a saloon in Hill City to stop a row, when he was set upon and battered up in bad shape. The whole outfit was arrested the next day.

John Clodfelter is under arrest at Mitchell for receiving a bribe. In the Brokaw contest case he swore he had received money on election day by which his vote was influenced.

Brown county during the last year has furnished 1,000 tons of free coal to people unable to buy it. The prospects are that a still larger amount will be supplied during the year to come.

Mrs. C. H. Wood, who recently suicided at Madison, left an infant son only a few months old. The child was taken to the home of its father's parents in Burlington, Wis., but only survived its mother a week.

There are one or two men traveling through the state selling evergreen trees for which the victim agrees to pay $10 per 1,000, and the note turns up in some bank to be a $100 note.

Fred Clyne, proprietor of the railroad boarding house at Fantail Gulch, recently packed his trunk and skipped out, leaving his wife behind. He took along with him all the ready cash, leaving his wife only the household effects.

John A. Burns, who ran for sheriff on the independent ticket in Douglas, took his defeat to heart and to get even he quietly packed his goods, got a couple of his neighbors to haul them to Delmont, and left the country. Some of his creditors got onto the racket, however, and went to Delmont and attached the goods.

Orman Osbon met with a painful accident while in a frolic with Anton Larson at the Howard school grounds recently. Young Larson, it seems, had a knife in his hand during a friendly scuffle with Osbon and during the frolic he unintentionally drew the open blade across the palm of Osbon's right hand, inflicting a deep and painful flesh wound that will disable him for some time.

A short time ago a Sioux Falls family received a box of clothing from friends in another state, and just ten days from the receipt of that box, two cases of malignant scarlet fever broke out. It has since been learned that four years ago there was a case of scarlet fever in the family of the sender. The clothing had been in a trunk for four years and the germs of the disease retained their fatal power during that time.

WISCONSIN.

C. J. W. Argrelius was held for trial at Madison for horse-stealing. He is thought to be the leader of an organized gang of robbers.

There was a mock marriage at Superior the other day, but the principals are a little worried because they are told that the ceremony "goes."

Waukesha people were gulled $100 worth by a representative of the "World's Fair Journal," with a circulation of 80,000. The paper is a myth and so is the agent.

W. K. Armitage, of the town of Pine Valley, Clark county, the past season harvested 1,000 bushels of corn from six and one-half acres of ground, by actual measurement.

The report is current in Appleton that two Lawrence University students settled a love dispute in a duel with boxing gloves. Denials are now in order.

William Murray, accused at Superior of missappropriating other people's money during the night time, waived examination and was held in $1,000 bonds for trial.

Sometimes streaks of bad luck and good luck follow each other in quick succession. The other day a Walworth County man fell from the roof and broke his leg, and the day following his wife applied for a divorce.

Robbers at Wonewoc the other day made a haul that they had not banked on. They raided Henry Kittleson's granary and stole a quantity of barley. Kittleson had $740 stowed away in a bin and they took it along.

The sad news of United States Marshal George F. Ginty's death at Madison, was received in Chippewa Falls with profound sorrow. The remains were taken to that city in a special car. The funeral was in charge of the Grand Army Post.

South Superior is growing rapidly. The present population is estimated at 1,200. The manufacturing companies now there are able to support a population of over 4,000. By the first of January the Webster Manufacturing Company will have a large force of skilled men at work.

Evan Coolidge, the Waupaca banker who was arrested on a charge of securing a deposit while knowing his bank was insolvent, is under $300 bail. The punishment for the offense named, on conviction, is not less than one year nor more than ten years imprisonment, or by fine up to $10,000.

A small party of Pottawatomie Indians killed thirty deer in the Pattern Lake district, in Florence county, during the past three or four weeks. The settlers justly complain against the government's action in permitting the redskins to leave their reservation for the purpose of slaughtering deer upon lands owned by private parties.

IOWA.

The Clinton Age complains that a justice of the peace in that city has been drunk for two days in succession.

Burglars broke into the postoffice at Kanoka the other night and carried away $400 in money and stamps belonging to the government.

The samples of sugar beets grown near Perry were tested the other day, and one was found to contain 25 and the other 20 per cent. of saccharine matter.

A committee was appointed by the Iowa State Board of Health to investigate an alleged case of leprosy in Storey county. If it was an actual case, great care should be taken by the authorities.

A young girl named Brooks, living near Ontario, Boone county, while alone in the house with the younger children fell down the cellar way and broke her back. It took some time to procure a doctor, and the girl suffered terrible agony, being unable to move until help arrived. She may recover.

A stranger in a "long ulster and with his hat pulled down over his eyes" accosted James Spragg on one of the streets of Ottumwa the other night and ordered him to "stand and deliver." Spragg stood and delivered two or three shots from a self-cocking revolver, but the footpad managed to escape to a place of safety to nurse his wounds.

A truly remarkable natural curiosity is to be seen near Holstein, Ida county. A few months ago a well was bored to a considerable depth in search of water. The search was unsuccessful and when the tools were removed a stream of damp, cold air was emitted from the hole, having a pressure of about fifty pounds to the inch, and which has continued to pour out ever since. The explanation given is that an immense cavity exists somewhere below the surface of the earth, sinking to it forces the air up through the outlet formed by the well.

A somewhat remarkable story comes from Mt. Pleasant. It is related by the News of that city and is as follows: A monster North American eagle alighted down on one of L. J. Carron's sheep the other day and slew it. Mr. Carron frightened the bird away before it had time to appease its appetite, and, thinking it would return to finish its repast, salted and peppered the carcass with strychnine. His eagleship returned, as was expected, and filled himself with the mutton. He was seen to fly to the top of a giant oak by Mr. Carron and Lew Gor, who happened to be there for a load of wood. The old national bird soon began to sway back and forth on his perch, and after a few minutes fell to the ground a dying bird.

Cowardly Sitting Bull.

"Sitting Bull is the rankest coward that ever bedaubed his ugly face with paint," remarked Gen. Wesley Merritt in the course of an interview. "His name has been so closely coupled with the Custer massacre that the general public picture the old villain at the head of a howling band of savages, his feathers flying in the air and his eyes flashing with the fire of battle as he leads his reckless hordes of painted warriors into the very teeth of leaden death. Very poetical, but the truth is that while Custer's brave band of 300 men were being mowed down by nearly 10 times that number of well-armed Indians, taking several lives for each one they give up, fighting against hopless odds and realizing that they could expect no quarter, the old squaw man, Sitting Bull, sat in a tepee out of the range of bullets and stirred a boiling pot of herbs, over which he repeated wild and unintelligible incantations. A courier brought word that Custer was driving the Indians back, and the old coward who gained so much notoriety from the Custer massacre precipitately fled, accompanied by the squaws and pappooses, to a point where stray bullets could not possibly reach. For his rank cowardice at the Custer fight Sitting Bull lost his influence with the tribe over which he ruled, and it is only of late that he has regained it. He is a villainous old rascal, but as a warrior he is no good at all. He is known at home as the 'squaw man with much talk.'"

"No; but you have two great fears," observed the Sun hotly.

"And they?"

This gossip must have been overheard while "the morning stars were singing together for joy."

This will go a long way towards helping the association out and the ladies are deserving of great credit.

The tax levy for Polk county for county purposes is only six and two-tenths mills. We will anxiously await the coming year to see how much the farmers alliance officials reduce the present levy. Taxes should be considerably lower the coming year as this village did not levy any taxes, as we now have more than enough to run the village for another year.

The Red River Valley, while it ranks first in the country in the production of wheat, is not dependent upon one crop. Barley does equally well and oats and flax. Potatoes yield bountifully and the very best quality. And stock, well just look out for statistics two years from now and see what the Valley is doing in stock raising. She will have tens of thousands of sheep, and cattle and horses. Consider. the pork will be raised for export, and it will bring the top price because it will be sweeter and healthier than the pork of more southern countries. Farming is sure here but stock is doubly sure.—Plaindealer.

Red Lake Falls News. P. and J. Meehan will this winter build a steamboat eighty feet long and twenty feet wide with two engines of one hundred and fifty horse power. A spool will be placed upon the counter shaft which can be detached and used in toeing log rafts. She will be a side wheeler, will probably be built at Thief River Falls and run to the lake during high water in the spring. The boat will carry a heavy grouser so that in case of storm this can be dropped and the tows held out from the beech. The boat, it is intended will withstand any storm on Red Lake.

Twenty-one families have within the past two months moved from North Dakota and settled in the town of Emardville, this county. This speaks well for Polk county. People see the advantages we have over our sister state North Dakota and are thus leaving the homes they had started there and settling on the border of the great Red Lake reservation—knowing that the vast body of timber thereon as soon as manufacturing commences, will furnish labor in winter to combine with the profits of the farm in summer. This is the place to live.—Red Lake Falls News.

Pioneer Press. Such a Kilkenny fight for a public office as is now going on in Nebraska for the governorship has probably never been heard of in the history of the country. The present governor is a Republican and gives it out that he intends to remain the chief executive for another two years. Mr. Power, the Farmers Alliance candidate while admitting that he did not receive enough votes to elect him governor, claims that he would have been elected if frauds had not been practiced by the other parties, and in hopes of being seated by an Alliance legislature is now preparing his inaugral address. Mr. Boyd, the Democratic candidate, says he was elected, and has sworn vengence if he is prevented from taking his seat; but those threats were made before the fact came to light that Mr. Boyd is not naturalized citizen. He was born in Ireland, came to this country when a boy, but his father neglected to take out naturilization papers until after Boyd junior, had become of age, which tends to make the latter still an alien, and, therefore, not eligible to hold office. What is now needed is a fourth man to step in and knock the others out in the first round, and Editor Rosewater of Omaha Bee, is just the man to do the work. He is always in training for little scrimmages like this, and besides, is not on very good terms with the three contestants.

When Eli Perkins (Mellville D Landon) was passing through St. Paul, he was asked when he thought the Minnesota farmer would be prosperous.

"He will be prosperous" said Mr. Perkins, when he can get a dollar a bushel for wheat."

"And when will that come?"

"It will never come from Europe. England will never take dollar wheat from this country, because she can always buy wheat for 75 cents in Sweeden and Norway and 50 cent wheat in India. When wheat is worth $1 a bushel in Minnesota it cannot go to England. But dollar wheat will soon come in this country through home consumption and a decrease in its production. The surplus wheat which now goes out and drags down the farmer is about 60,000,000 bushels."

"But how can this be stopped or lessened?"

"Four things will accomplish this decrease of wheat in less than two years and the farmer will be on top again and the consuming manufacturer will be under?"

"What are they?"

"Well, first, the cheap Canadian wheat and barley, made on $3 land in Manitoba is being kept back by the 20 cent penalty. They can no longer buck their $3 land against your $15 land in Minnesota and Dakota."

"What else will help the farmer out?"

"This penalty against Canada will keep our 15,000,000 bushels of the 60,000,000 bushels. Then the beet sugar interest which has been grandly successful in Nebraska is spreading. So millions of acres of land now in wheat and corn will be put into beets. Less Germany we will make the sugar we want, and $50,000,000 annually will not be sent to Germany. The sugar factory at Grand Island Neb, is turning out 20 barrels a day. So successful has sugar beet raising been along the Platte river that farmers are making more money out of it than raising wheat and corn. Other sugar plants are going up at Lincoln, Norfolk and Sioux City Iowa and now they are contracting with farmers up at Aberdeen S. D, for beets and business men are putting up a sugar factory there. This will cut down the surplus of wheat still more."

"And what next?"

"Why Minnesota and Dakota farmers are going into sheep. All around Bismark and westward to Montana, sheep are taking the place of wheat. I saw carloads of horses on the Great Northern train yesterday—horses that had been used in the wheat fields—coming south and east to be traded for sheep. This will take out more wheat land"

"And then continued Mr. Perkins "the future of flax is growing in Minnesota. A flax factory is going up in Minneapolis; the fiber is to be woven into fine linen. Other linen factories are being talked about. Iowa has two linen factories already in operation and using flax grown on old wheat fields."

"So to sum up" said Eli, "the culture of wool, flax, sugar and the stopping in the border of wheat from millions of acres of cheap lands in Manitoba—I say all these things will do away with the surplus of 60,000,000 bushels of wheat which has dragged down the price of wheat from $1.25 where it belongs and a price that it is worth as human food to 70 cents. In two years with our tariff as it is now, this will be accomplished, and the Northwestern farmers will be on top. Their lands will go up and prosperity will come again."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The revised apportionment bill introduced in the house this week by the committee of which Mr. Dunnell is chairman is not likely to be opposed on party lines. If any measure for this purpose is passed this session, it will be substantially the same as this. The ratio under this bill will not be far from 172,000 and the total membership 356 an increase of 24. Any less number of members would cause several of the states to lose one member and will be opposed on that ground. So far as this state is concerned any ratio proposed gives seven members, and there is no prospect of obtaining more, although the surplus will approximate 12,000 to each district. The apportionment of the districts suggested by the Globe is pronounced a fair one, and in the main seems to be acceptable to all parties—Globe.

Washington Special to Minneapolis Journal, Dec. 4—The inquiry of the census office into mortgage indebtedness is nearly completed. The report will be very interesting and valuable. Out of nearly 2,000 counties, only ten remain at the present time unfinished, the mortgages for ten years having been abstracted from the records. A total of something over $380,000,000 in mortgages has been found, the largest number in the Western states. Relatively speaking, the Southern states were found to be much freer from these incumbrances than the Northern, An exception to this, however is noted in the newly developed manufacturing districts of Alabama Tennessee and Georgia In districts like that of Birmingham, the mortgage indebtedness is large, but 90 per cent of it has been contracted for purchase money, plants, land, etc. In other districts of the South, mortgages are given as security for farm supplies This is an important object of indebtedness in the north

A WITCH DOCTOR.

How a Sick Woman Was Cured With a Red Rooster.

One of the queerest stories we have heard in many a day comes from the country not over a day's travel from St. Hilaire. It is an interesting tale of ignorance and superstition and runs as follows; The wife of a farmer was dangerously ill and had been given up by relatives to die. An old woman of the neighborhood was at last called and claimed that if she had a red rooster she could cure the patient. The husband hitched up his team and started in search of one and after considerable search one was found and brought home. The old woman who claimed to be a "witch doctor" took the bird and cut off the top of his comb, letting the blood flow on the invalid. While this was in progress the rooster began to crow and the doctor declared that the patient would speedily recover. The blood was allowed to dry and several neighbors found the invalid in that condition. The charm seems to have succeeded as the woman is said to be recovering.

The Defense of Judas.

Every man who is a general reader has doubtless noticed how often, when he has been reading of a certain subject, he runs across the same subject in an unexpected place, and an incident of this kind brought to my attention a very curious fact, which was a revelation to me. I had just finished W. W. Story's poem, "The Letter of a Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem," in which Story presents the legal aspect of the case of Judas Iscariot, and suggested that in betraying the Saviour he was only attempting to give Jesus Christ an opportunity to declare and prove himself God, and that he only accepted the thirty pieces of silver to give his act the appearance of a betrayal for a bribe.

I laid aside the pamphlet containing the poem and picked up a book, in which I found an article on the ancient coins of the east, and one of the first things I read was that the "piece" of silver of two thousand years ago was the name of a coin, and that its value was thirteen cents. It did not require much calculation then for me to see that the price which was paid Judas by the Sanhedrim for betraying Christ was only $3.90.

Do you know this unexpected information made Story's poem have a strange effect upon me? Story points to the fact that Judas carried the public purse and could not have been avaricious, or else he would not have been trusted with this fund for the poor, for which he rendered no account to any one, yet he betrayed his master for $3.90. I had always thought that "thirty pieces of silver" meant some large amount, and the statement astonished me when I read it, but referring to a work on numismatics I saw that the "piece of silver" of Jerusalem was about the same value as the "ore piece" of Denmark, which is just thirteen cents, so I suppose the statement is true.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Voudoo That Failed.

In 1881 a criminal trial occurred in Sumter county, S. C., in which the defendant was a colored man by the name of Johnson, who had killed another named Davis, the former having in his possession a charm which had been given to him by an aged negro named Orange Isaacs, a voudoo conjurer, who assured him that it would protect him from all danger as a result of his crime. The object of the murder was to enable the criminal to marry the widow of the murdered man. The charm given him by the conjurer was composed of beeswax, foxes' hair, a little sand from the shoe of the person who was to be killed and a drake's foot, the whole being sewed up in a small cotton bag, which he was to wear over his heart next to his skin. This, it was claimed, would obtain for him the love of the woman whom he desired. In addition to this he was to get a charmed bullet which he was to put in his gun and fire at Davis.

The negro thus protected shot his rival, buried him and proceeded to take possession of the widow, who, as it appeared, was no wise reluctant. The body was found and various circumstances traced the crime to Johnston, who was put on trial. The jury comprised nine whites and three blacks, and a vast throng of negroes surrounded the court house while the trial was going on. Curiously enough two of the men composing the jury were taken violently ill and others had to be substituted for them. Johnston was found guilty, and was sentenced to be hanged. Three hours after the sentence the sheriff of the county, whose business it was to hang him—a robust man in the prime of health—dropped dead. The murderer was, however, executed.—Columbia Register.

Sulphur for Fumigation.

It appears that the prevailing method of disinfection by means of burning sulphur is considered by some of the leading bacteriologists as of less value than it has heretofore been considered, though Dr. Edson strenuously maintains the contrary. Dr. J. G. Johnson, on the other hand, read a paper before the Kings county Medical society in which he stated that he had proved the present system of fumigation as worthless for the destruction of disease germs; that the fumes of burning sulphur do not penetrate woolens as disease germs do. He also stated that he had propagated diphtheria from the clippings of blanket after they had undergone a thorough process of fumigation by burning sulphur. Dr. Prudden, of the New York city board of health, appears to have come to the same conclusion, and in both New York and Brooklyn currents of steam are to be recommended for disinfecting purposes instead of burning sulphur.—Medical Record.

The Hudson River Bridge.

The preliminary steps have been taken, and it is reasonably certain that the monster bridge, with its six railway tracks, roadways, foot paths, etc., will in due time connect New York with Jersey City, Hoboken, etc. In structural arrangement it will resemble that lesser work of Mr. Lindenthal, the Seventh street bridge across the Allegheny river, but in its mammoth proportions it will dwarf even the giant cantilever bridge recently completed across the River Forth, in Scotland. It will enable the traveler to depart from or arrive in the great city without recourse to the ferry boats, and, as a scenic feature of the day, will complete, with the Bartholdi Statue of Liberty and the Brooklyn bridge, an incomparable trinity.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Mr. John Keown, the worthy postmaster at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other." The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of all symptoms of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular. For sale by Justus L. Johnson.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Proceedings of Both Branches of the National Legislature.

Tuesday December 9.

SENATE.

The senate indefinitely postponed the bill to establish a public form in each county within the limits of the republic.

The Farmer's Alliance subtreasury bill have been transferred, in the senate, from the committee on agriculture to the committee on finance.

Senators Berry and Daniel spoke in opposition to the elections bill.

HOUSE.

Mr. Dunnell, chairman of the house committee on the eleventh census, introduced a bill making an apportionment of representatives in congress. The bill provides that after the third day of March, 1893, the house shall be composed of 356 members. By this bill Minnesota gains two members, and Wisconsin, Oregon and Washington state one each.

Wednesday December 10.

SENATE.

On motion of Mr. Aldrich the house bill to authorize the payment of draw-back or rebate on tobacco (to correct an omission in the tariff bill) was taken up. The bill was passed, and it now goes to the president for his approval.

HOUSE.

Mr. Parrott, of Indiana, asked unanimous consent for the consideration of the senate bill for the erection of a monument to Robert Dale Owen in the grounds of the Smithsonian institute.

Thursday December 11.

SENATE.

After passing the senate bill and concurring in the house amendment for a public building at Sioux City, the senate took up the resolution, offered yesterday by Mr. Plumb, for daily meetings of the senate at 10 a. m. and for recesses from 5:30 to 8 p. m. A heated debate occurred after which the election bill was taken up.

Mr. Frye said that the pending bill was not one-tenth part stringent enough—not one-tenth part drastic enough in its provisions. If, in order to secure the right of the American citizen to freely cast his ballot and have it counted as cast, it was necessary to put a bayonet behind every ballot, he would put a bayonet behind it. [Mingled applause and hisses in the galleries, which was promptly suppressed by the vice president.]

HOUSE.

The fortification bill was passed, together with a bill appropriating $400,000 to meet a deficiency in the appropriation for printing and binding. In the committee of the whole the house considered, without action, a bill to amend the anti-polygamy law by providing that the personal property formerly belonging to the Mormon church, but which was forfeited by congress and placed in the hands of a receiver, shall be placed in the common school fund of the territory of Utah; also, the bill to indemnify the purchasers of swamp land and to reimburse the several states for lands due them under the swamp lands act.

Friday December 12.

SENATE.

A number of unimportant bills were reported from the committees and placed on the calendar, after which Mr. Plumb's resolution for daily meetings at 10 and for evening sessions was taken up and agreed to.

The election bill was then taken up, and Mr. Blodgett addressed the senate in opposition. Mr. Walthall also argued against the bill, claiming that the negroes had all their rights in Mississippi, held many offices and were reasonably content with their condition.

HOUSE.

The reapportionment bill, based on a representation of 356 members of the house of representatives as originally proposed by Mr. Frank of Missouri, was favorably acted on by the house Chairman Dunnell.

Mr. Evans introduced the bill to establish a limited post and telegraph service, submitted to the house committee on postoffices and post roads last session by the postmaster general.

Mr. Flower introduced a joint resolution directing the secretary of the treasury to extend the bonded period for goods in bond in custom houses from Feb. 1 until July 1, 1891.

Saturday December 13.

SENATE.

The senate made a party question of a resolution introduced by Senator Casey asking for information from the agricultural department as to the progress being made on the investigations into the artesian wells system of irrigation in the section lying west of the 97th meridian and east of the foothills of the Rocky Mountains. The resolution was amended so as to call for reports as to the works in each state separately, North and South Dakota, Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska, and then it was passed. Every Republican senator except Hale favored it. The outcome is very satisfactory to the senators from the states interested, who believe it was a sign that the Republican majority looks at the irrigation problem in a way that means good to the west.

Senator Power introduced a bill to create two aditional land offices in Montana. Dillon and Fort Benton are to be the sites for the land offices.

HOUSE.

The house went into committee of the whole on bills reported from the committee on private land claims. The bill reported by Mr. Wickham of Ohio to establish a court to adjudicate private land claims in Colorado, Wyoming, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah and Nevada was taken up, and after a long debate the committee rose and the bill was agreed to, with an amendment excepting Arizona from its provisions.

The house committee which has been investigating the charges made by Representative Cooper of Indiana against the management of the pension office by Commissioner Raum, resumed its inquiry after an interruption of about three months.

Monday December 15.

SENATE.

Senator Colquitt spoke against the elections bill to-day, as did also Senators Wilson of Maryland and Vance.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The senate passed a bill enlarging the rights of homesteaders on the public lands. It provides that when parties settled opposite unsurveyed land, and, therefore, were obliged to take up less than 160 acres, they may extend their holdings not to exceed 160 acres.

HOUSE.

The report of the commerce passing through the Sault canal was presented to congress to-day.

—The house to-day passed the Hermann bill for the adjustment and payment of claims arising from Indian depredations. It provides for the appointment by the president of three judges, to constitute a court to be known as the court of Indian depredation claims.

A Change at Duluth.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Dec. 16.—The secretary of war has transferred Maj. James B. Quinn, in charge of the government improvements on the lakes and rivers in the Duluth district, to New Orleans, where he will have charge of the engineers' work in the Seventh and Eighth lighthouse districts. Lieut. Graham D. Fitch will temporarily have charge of the work at Duluth. As soon, however, as Maj. Quinn assumes charge of his new work Capt. Walter L. Fisk, now in Louisiana, will go to Duluth, in charge of the work there. Chaplain William Larkin has been ordered to report to Gen. Ruger at St. Paul for examination by a retiring board of which Gen. Ruger is president.

Political Intimidation.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Special—The new attorney general of the state, T. J. Pope, will be arrested on a warrant charging him with political intimidation in the discarge of T. B. Butler, a brother of Senator Butler, a clerk in the enrolling department. The affidavit claims that in discharging him the attorney general violated the law in regard to discharging officials for their political views. A letter from the attorney general to Butler to this effect is in evidence. The penalty is a fine of from $50 to $1,000 and imprisonment from three months to two

It pays to be honest and upright, even in politics.

The Direct Hot Springs Line.

Beginning Saturday, December 20th, and continuing every Saturday evening until further notice, "The Burlington" will run a through Pullman Sleeper from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Hot Springs, Arkansas. Everybody knows about the Hot Springs, and everybody who wants to go there should recollect that "The Burlington" is the only road by which you can reach the Springs from the Northwest without change of cars. When you make arrangements to visit Hot Springs, therefore, buy your ticket via "The Burlington." Marvelous Developemen

The Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City Railway, although the youngest of all the western trunk lines, has developed so rapidly that it is now one of the most important. It has become the popular route between Chicago and Dubuque, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Waterloo, Cedar Falls, Marshalltown, Des Moines, St. Joseph and Kansas City, connecting at these principal cities with the best and fastest trains to and from all points. By reason of its Superb Equipment, including Pullman Private Compartment, Sleeping Cars, Fast Time, Safety, Courteous Attention to Passengers, and the Perfect Comfort of its trains, it is a favorite. Salt Rheum

On Head, Face and Neck—A Child's Sufferings Relieved.

"When my little boy was only a few months old, eczema, or salt rheum, appeared on his face, head and neck. It also came out on his body, but not so severe as on and about his head. Blotches and pimples would come out thickly, break and discharge a thin watery fluid, and then scales would form. It itched intensely, and caused the little fellow much suffering for 5 years. We consulted leading physicians but he did not seem to get any better. Then, about a year ago, we decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, and as the result of a fair trial he is now entirely well, his skin being smooth and fair as can be. We also used Hood's Olive Ointment and found it excellent as an outward application." M. F. GOOKIN, Furniture Dealer, Lowell, Mass.

N. B. If you have decided to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other.

Read Before Signing.

Among the pithy sayings of a well-known German philosopher and reader occurs the following: "Sign no paper without reading it." In these days of education, enlightenment and progress, such a caution would hardly seem necessary to any person in the full possession of his faculties; yet it is astonishing how many people there are, including good business men, who attach their signatures to papers or documents whose contents may have a serious bearing upon themselves or their affairs, with scarcely a glance at their contents. Carelessness in failing to acquaint themselves with the contents of a paper before signing it has worked incalculable harm to thousands of well-intentioned people. It is a good thing, therefore, to bear in mind continuously the above quotation, particularly with respect to such papers as express or imply anything in the nature of a contract or a legal obligation.

An Ideal Employment.

Supposing one had to work," said the idler, "what would be the idea employment to choose?"

"Horticulture," answered the professor promptly. "In the first place, it is a healthful calling, but that is the least of its advantages. It affords abundant opportunity for meditation, and unlike most work which has this merit it is not tedious or mechanical. It is full of valuable suggestion for thought. Best of all, it admits, as does no other occupation, of unalloyed satisfaction in the results of labor. No industry, art or profession produces anything which so nearly justifies pride as the work of even the mediocre gardener."—Kate Field's Washington.

Found Deserted on a Stone.

Every woman in the land has bowed down before "John Halifax, Gentleman," but how many know much of the life of the woman whose brain child he was? There is in it a little romance that I am sure many will like to hear. Married to a gentleman who was a cripple, Mrs. Mulock Craik lived an idyllic life at a beautiful country home a few miles from a country town. She heard one day, quite incidentally, that a baby had been found on a stone at the cross roads, that it had been taken to the town hall, and that all the gentry about were going to look at it because it was such a sweet little child. So, following the example of her neighbors, she went too. Looking up into the sweet, sympathetic face of the famed authoress, the little baby smiled and put out its wee hands.

Dinah Mulock Craik could not resist this, and so she determined to take the child for her very own. Quickly it was wrapped up, and it became her baby. Devoted to it, she was yet determined as it grew older it should never have its heart hurt by being told the story of its birth and adoption; so as soon as the little girl was old enough to understand, it was lovingly whispered to her that she had been found on a large stone which stood in the center of the hall, and which always was decorated with flowers, and that God had put her there that her mother might find her. As soon as she grew old enough it became her daily duty to cut the flowers and arrange them to make beautiful this great rock that had been dug up from the cross road and brought here.

To her it represented the place where the hands of angels had rested when they laid her down. Curiously enough, the child became proud of the way in which she had reached the dear mother who cared for her as lovingly and as tenderly as if she were really her own flesh and blood. Her birthday was the day on which she was found, and when the tenth one came around and a child's party was given her she was heard asking one little girl, "How old are you?" The other answered, "I was born nine years ago." "Oh!" answered the baby, "you were born like other children, but I am better than that; I was found just where God placed me." The childish pride was as amusing as it was pathetic.

The years have gone by, the eyes of the good mother have closed forever to the sights of this world, but the child she cared for lives in the great town of London and remembers, and when the mother of "John Halifax, Gentleman," and of this girl stands before Almighty God, don't you think that he will say, "As ye have done it unto the least of these, so I will unto you."—Ladies' Home Journal.

All Transactions Ended.

A young gentleman, says the Calgary Herald, who lately left his home in England, having exhausted his credit, telegraphed to his parents:

"Your son Walter was killed this morning by a falling chimney. What shall we do with the remains."

In reply a check was sent for £20, with the request, "Bury them." The young gentleman pocketed the money and had an elaborate spree. When in a condition for writing, he sent his father the following note:

I have just learned that an infamous scoundrel named Barker sent you a fictitious account of my death, and swindled you out of £20. He also borrowed £10 from me and left the country. I write to inform you that I am still alive, and long to see the parental roof again. I am in somewhat reduced circumstances, the accumulation of the last five years having been lost—a disastrous stock operation, and if you would only spare me £20 I would be ever thankful for your favor. Give my love to all.

A few days later the young man received the following dignified letter from his outraged parent:

MY DEAR SON: I buried you once, and that is the end of it. I decline to have any transactions with a ghost. Yours in the flesh.

Men Who Must Be Temperate.

Speaking of "the demon of drunkenness," Talmage says, "Does it not jingle the burglar's keys?" Not much it doesn't, except when some tippling policeman gets hold of them. If there is anyone whose occupation requires him to keep sober, it is the burglar. He must be in full possession of his senses to burgle successfully. A single misstep might betray him—even a breath might give him away in a total abstinence family. Innocent Brother Talmage supposes that a burglar stuffs himself full of jig-water before starting out on a predatory expedition; that he jingles his skeleton keys under the very noses of the police, as he whoops along the streets, and that he scandalizes the entire neighborhood by his bacchanalian antics before breaking into a house. But he doesn't work that way at all. Few temperance lecturers lead such temperate lives as the burglars.—Texas Siftings.

Great Changes.

While the Odd Fellows were in Chicago a man stepped up to a policeman and said:

"Well, sir, this town has changed greatly."

"Yes, changing all the time," the policeman answered.

"Indeed it is, and to tell you the truth I shouldn't have known it so great has been the change."

"How long has it been since you were here the officer asked.

"I never was here before."

When the man had walked away the policeman looked after him for a moment and then said: "I am either losing my mind or that fellow is a fool, I don't know which."

Knew Her Well.

"You must be identified," brusquely exclaimed a San Francisco bank cashier the other day to a tall, hook-nosed woman in green, red and blue, who brought in a check at a time his window was crowded. "Well, I—I—why—I—no, it cayn't be! Yes, it is, too. Ain't you Henry Smyth?" "That's my name, madam," he replied coldly. "An' you don't know me, Hen? I'm changed some, an' so air you; but I jist knowed I'd seen ye. You've got that same old cast in your left eye, your nose crooks a little to the left, an' you're a Smyth all over. An' you don't know me! Don't know Salindy Spratt that you useter coax to become Salindy Smyth. Member how you useter haul me to school on your sled an' kiss me in the lane an' call me your little true love? 'Member how you cut up 'cause I gave you the mitten? Land, Hen, I could stand here all day talkin' over them old times! You kin i-dentify me now, can't you, Hen?" "Hen" did so, but in a mood that almost produced apoplexy."

Misplaced Zeal.

"And, fellow-citizens," continued the political orator, "this is the party of the people! This is the clean, honorable party! Where, I ask you, where are dishonesty, corruption, fraud, rottenness, blackguardism, and the scum of politics to be found?"

"Hear, hear, hear, hehr!" cried an enthusiastic man.

"Not by a long chalk!" said the orator, "There's none of it here. It's all in the other party! Chuck the traitor out!"

And he was thrown out.—Boston Traveler.

As in the Babylon of Old.

Dr. Julian J. Chisolm, who has traveled extensively and is a close observer, when asked by a reporter of the Baltimore American to name what startled him the most in his sight seeing trip of the last summer, said: "The street dress of the ancient Assyrian ladies." Among the collection of Babylonish antiquities of the British museum his attention was attracted to the little hollow cylinder made from some very hard stone or onyx, chalcedony, jaspar, or lapis lazuli, which were used as signets by the ancient Babylonians. Their age, as chronologically established, is 2,300 B. C., long before the time assigned to the building of the tower of Babylon, and about the period of the destruction of the world by the great deluge. These cylinders are the length and size of a lady's finger. Upon their surfaces are beautifully cut intaglios. To exhibit the nature and perfection of these ancient carvings on such very hard substances the custodians of the museum had made imprints on fine plaster, which were placed by the side of the cylinders. Some of these impressions, as sharp as the most perfect cutting on gems of the present day, represented female figures dressed in the walking costumes of that very distant period. The style of the dress was very striking. The gown was a tight-fitting body, with long-fitting sleeves. The skirts clung to the figure, about as it does to-day on ladies fashionably attired. The distance from the waist to the hem of the garment was equally given to three broad flounces or overskirts, each made apparently of the same material, plaited in the accordion plaits, so fashionable in this year, 1890. The hat worn was a high one; the figures being small—not much over one inch in length—the peculiarities of the hat could not be clearly made out. It seemed not unlike those which form so disturbing an element in the theater seats of the present day. The whole costume was of so familiar a nature that it would not attract special attention if seen upon our streets of to-day, and yet these ladies lived and dressed over four thousand years ago. Fashions are known to revolve in circles, and are continually returning to those previously discarded. These Babylonish signets, with their wonderful carvings, preserved to us from antediluvial times, establish the truth of this adage beyond peradventure. From these very curious and interesting historical prints the inference may be drawn that most likely the female members of Noah's family, when they sought refuge in the ark, wore high hats and accordion-plaited gowns."

Fooling the New Clerk.

"I was in a bookstore in Nassau street a few weeks ago talking about a new etching of Lowell, when a tall, gaunt, youth rushed in, watch in hand, and so out of breath that he stuttered. 'Mr. Pliny wants this book immediately,' he said, 'so that he can take it with him on the 4:30 train,' and the youth handed the dealer a slip of paper, on which was written: 'The Life of Adam's Father, bound in half calf.' 'We haven't it in stock now, but you can get it at Scribner's,' said the proprietor; at the same time slyly winking at me, adding as the youth sped out into street: 'that is the way a firm of bankers tests the brilliancy of their new clerks. 'The Life of Adam's Father,' has been in existence as a joke for fifteen years, and one new clerk hunted it for hours before he found—not the book, but that he was a fool.'"—Critic.

Dogs as Paper Carriers.

The Morning Standard, of Syracuse, N. Y., boasts of two no more faithful carriers than Major and Rox, two most intelligent dogs, the first a shepherd and the other a spaniel. They are owned by Joseph McCearty and Harrison Treat, two farmers on the line of the New York Central Railroad west of here. The papers are secureley wrapped each morning and given to a baggageman on the early train to be thrown off at a certain point where the dogs are always in waiting. The papers are thrown off at a crossing, the first being meant for Major and the other for Rox. It is claimed that they seldom get the papers mixed, the shepherd taking the first to fall. If they are mixed it is oftener the fault of the baggageman than the intelligent dogs.

Papa Getting in His Work.

"Ethelinda, darling," murmured the enraptured young man, "this is the happiest moment of my life. I came here this evening hoping, yet fearing. I could not put it off any longer. I felt that I must know my fate. The suspense was killing me. But now—I swear it by this lovely head resting so confidingly on my shoulder, by the kiss on your sweet lips, I—but what was that clicking noise I heard just then?"

"Nothing, Walter, nothing but papa. He's a lawyer you know, but amuses himself with all sorts of queer fads. He's practicing on us with his kodak. Go on Walter, dear. What were you about to swear?"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Origin of Long Measure.

The yard was originally the length of a king's arm; the foot, the length of his pedal extremities. The word inch is derived from the Latin uncia, a twelfth part, but why the foot was divided into twelfths, instead of tenths or elevenths, no one claims to be wise enough to tell. Probably the inch was originally the length of the second joint of the forefinger.

The inch used to be divided into three "barleycorns," which were simply the length of the grain or "corn" of barley. "Mile" is derived from the first word of the Latin phrase millia passum, "a thousand paces."—St. Louis Republic.

THE WEEK'S DIGEST.

A Brief Record of the Happenings of the Past Week.

WASHINGTON.

Senator Pettigrew has introduced a bill in congress to prohibit the sale of arms and ammunication to Indians on reservations, providing a penalty of two years' imprisonment or $300 fine of each offense. It also prohibits the Indians from carrying arms, unless they have a written permission from the agent in charge of the reservation.

The secretary of the interior has reversed a decision of the land commissioner under the last administration which will give to William Jones his homestead in section 3, township 62, range 14, of the Duluth district. The secretary goes into the case in detail, showing that Jones was a poor man, who was obliged to leave his land occasionally in order to earn money on which to live. Testimony was submitted to the secretary that he was held in high esteem by many prominent men; that his absence from his land was about two days every two weeks, on the average, and that he was a sufferer from epileptic fits. The secretary says an injustice was done him in refusing to accept his final proof, and orders that this shall be done.

PERSONAL.

Prof. Snow, of the Kansas State university, has discovered the existence of a disease which kills chinch bugs. Infected bugs were let loose in a bug-infested field. The disease spread so rapidly and was so fatal that the field was soon rid of the pests.

CASUALTIES.

The fire at Minden, Neb., destroyed eight business houses. The loss will not exceed $35,000, with insurance of probably a third.

A passenger train on the Baltimore & Ohio ran into a snow bank near Harrisonburg, Va., and was wrecked. Six trainmen were injured, but the passengers escaped with a bad shaking up.

A pilot boat employed in Bogue inlet has drifted ashore at Beaufort, N. C. A heavy gale has prevailed for several days, and it is thought that the pilots who were on the boat have been drowned.

The Burton block, between Canal and Clinton streets, Chicago, was burned. The loss on the building and contents will aggregate $80,000, most of which is covered by insurance.

At Southport, Conn., fears are entertained that the steambarge City of Utica of New York, bound for Westport with coal, has gone to the bottom of the sound with all on board. Wreckage bearing the name City of Utica has been washed ashore.

Much havoc has been wrought by storms on the southern coast of Europe especially around Sardinia, in which vicinity eleven persons are known to have been killed and fifty injured, while many vessels were wrecked and a number of houses shattered.

Lulu Steigmier of Attica, Ohio, and May Stevens of Clifton Springs, N. Y., who were the worst burned of the victims of the birthday party at the Buchtel college, at Akron, O., have died. May Baker of Johnson's Creek, N. Y., and Aurelia Wierick of Storm Lake, Iowa, are most seriously injured of the surviving members of the party, but the physicians say there is no immediate danger.

Two freight trains on the Union Pacific collided near Coyote Station. Brakeman James was instantly killed. Engineer Nichols and Fireman Giese were seriously injured. Both engines were completely telescoped and the track torn up for nearly a mile. The east bound train had orders to side track for the west bound freight, but for some reason did not stop.

Christ's Episcopal church in New York, on the corner of Thirty-fifth street and Fifth avenue, was burned. The church was vacated two years ago, the congregation having consolidated with another church. Recently J. B. Bentley's painting, "The Ideal Head of Christ," was on exhibition in the church. The picture, valued at $50,000 was destroyed. The damage to the church is also estimated at $50,000.

WICKEDNESSES.

Pat Killen and Joe Sheehy fight in St. Paul. Sheehy bites Killen, to whom the fight is given on a foul.

Miss Ida Laycock, a young lady teacher near Longmont, Col., was stabbed four times by one of her pupils named Bert Myers, and may die.

At Columbus, Ind., John Petilliott, charged with murdering his wife July 4, has been sentenced to ninety-nine years in the state prison.

McDaniels, the notorious desperado who was the leader of the Cotton Belt train robbery, has been arrested near San Antonio, Texas.

Father R. A. Finerty, pastor of the Sacred Heart church at Dayton Ohio, has been dismissed for alleged immoral conduct with a young lady member of his church.

A reward is offered for the arrest of George Roberts, president of the Miners' Union of Ironwood and Hurley, Wis., on the charge of embezzlement. The amount is not known. It is thought that he has gone to Winnipeg. His actions are a great surprise, as he has always been considered a very straight man.

P. E. King was found dead at the Rock Island depot in Chillicothe, Ill. His head had been crushed in with a bolt of iron about two feet long. The bloody instrument was found lying by his side. King drew a large sum of money and this may have incited the murder, as his pockets had been rifled.

Bail was fixed at $20,000 in default of which Pfeiffer was taken to prison. James S. Dungan, who was the cashier of the broken bank, was arrested at Newcastle, Del., where he has been living. Dungan consented to come without a requisition, and on his arrival, in default of $20,000 bail was locked up.

An encounter took place recently between a band of cowboys and a number of Indians at Ray's ranch, above the mouth of Battle creek, west of the Cheyenne river. The cowboys were secreted behind a wood pile in Daly's yard, and the Indians attempted to ride through the gate into the ranch when a cowboy named Thompson shot and killed one of them. The other cowboys opened fire and two more Indians fell. The Indians returned the fire, and one of the cowboys was seriously if not fatally wounded.

Moses H. Devy, a riveter at Roach's shipyard, Chester, Pa., is one of the heirs to an estate in Staffordshire, Eng., valued at something over $5,000,000.

The court of inquiry appointed to investigate the loss of the British cruiser Serpent, off the coast of Spain, has decided that the loss of the vessel was due to an error of judgment on the part of the navagation officer.

The reaction against the Koch treatment has increased in violence in Paris. Eight patients have died soon after the injection of the lymph, and this combined with the fact that there is no verified cure, has intensified the public feeling against the experiments. A number of hospital patients in Paris, and in Lyons who have been undergoing the Koch treatment have refused to submit to further trials. Owing to the public furore the commission headed by Prof. Nallopeau, which is testing the remedy, has decided to maintain absolute silence as to the results until the tests have been completed.

Caught.

A man who has the rare faculty of keeping in with those best-of-best fellows, the chronic borrowers, without much expense to himself was caught in his own trap the other day. "Look here, Tom, old boy," said the cheerful borrower, "I don't like to ask you, but I must have $5. I'll return it to you next Saturday." "How unfortunate," said the other. "I have only got $1 to my name. Half of it's yours, though, old chap," and saying this he thurst his hand into his pocket where he had placed the bill for such an emergency and drew it out. It was a ten. And now he is calling that a cheap administration which will issue $10 bills without any fluted sides, raised letters, or electric bell attachments so that a fellow can tell one when he gets hold of it in the dark.—From the New York Tribune.

ROCKY FOR PARNELL

Evidence that the Fallen Leader Has a Hard Row to Hoe.

To-Day's Balloting in Kilkenny Seems Certain to go Against Him.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Timothy Harrington hastened, on his arrival at Queenstown, to communicate with Mr. Parnell, and the latter is said to be much encouraged by the information which Mr. Harrington has brought from America. All day long the two parties have been busy electioneering.

The priests, both those of the Ossory diocese and others from various parts of Ireland, spent the time outside of religious services in pressing their views on the people, and urging the election of Sir John Pope Hennessey. Allusions, more or less direct, were made from the pulpits to the pending contest.

Parnell expressed himself to-night as confident of victory. Much apprehension is felt for the effect that the defeat might have upon his followers. Parnell was in much better form than on the previous day and evidently was determined not to disgrace the close of the campaign by any abusive language. He addressed the people on their leaving church and made use of language more persuasive and dignified than at any previous gathering during the struggle. He reminded them of his many years of service and appealed to their sense of gratitude not to set the seal of condemnation on his life long work for Ireland. The people listened patiently, though the priests protested against Mr. Parnell turning Sunday into a day of political strife and argument and urged their flocks to go home.

There was very little demonstration today, and all seemed desirous of putting on their best behavior. The very absence of rows to-day is, however, considered unfavorable to Parnell, as showing that the McCarthyites are gaining sufficient hold to be able to restore discipline, and indications point to Hennessey's election. The most intense interest is felt in London as to the result. The Liberals believe from the dispatches received to-day, of which the foregoing is a resume, that the priests have done for Parnell and that he stands no chance. On the other hand, betting men who calculate to win are willing to back Parnell at much lower odds than a week ago, but are not ready to bet even.

Monday will undoubtedly be an exciting day both in London and Kilkenny. While the official result will not be known until Tuesday, it is thought that on Monday night a fair idea of the result can be obtained. The polls will be open until 8 o'clock p. m.

FLAT, STALE, UNPROFITABLE.

Such Will Be the Present Week in Congress.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—It is unlikely that any marked legislation will be achieved in congress this week, and the failure to take the usual holiday recess is not expected to result in any measurable advancement of the public business.

In the senate the elections bill will probably continue to engross attention and the speakers if uninterrupted will consume the first three days of the week. The possibilities of an interruption hinge altogether upon the result of the negotiations among Republican senators upon the caucus financial bill. If a harmonious understanding to support this measure is reached, the elections bill may be laid aside in its favor, and the discussion in the senate turn on financial matters until the day before Christmas, when it is expected a recess will be taken until Monday.

It is probable that successive adjournments for two or three days at a time will mark the course of the house during the Christmas holiday season. No business of importance is expected to be done as so many members of the house left Washington for home that a quorum can hardly be secured. Such days in the week as the house is in session will probably be devoted to unimportant measures, and to roll calls on motions to adjourn. Several appropriation bills have been reported, and an effort may be made to pass some one of these.

A VANISHING SCARE.

Indications That the Semi-Indian War Is Petering Out.

PINE RIDGE, S. D., Dec. 23.—Short Bull came in from the Bad Lands to-day and had a talk with Gen. Brooke. It was the same old story, that there were men in his camp who would come in provided that promises we kept and the pledge given that no one should be arrested and sent to prison. What Gen. Brooke said is not known, but from what was said yesterday by Gen. Miles no government officer or other official can make any promises with the assurance that the government will carry them out. To bring in these Indians under the pledges that they ask, and then attempt to arrest, or disarm them, would precipitate a massacre at Pine Ridge.

By heliograph it is learned at Rapid City that Col. Staunton found some of the Sitting Bull fugitives and some Cherry Creek Indians crossing the Bad river to Kicking Bear's camp. Staunton chased them into the Bad Lands near White river, opposite the mouth of Wounded Knee creek. No soldiers were hurt and probably no Indians.

Maliciously Done.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 23.—A Union Pacific passenger train was wrecked a few miles from Beatrice this morning. An obstruction, evidently placed on the track out of malice, caused the engine to jump the track, carrying with it the tender and mail car. Bridge Inspector W. H. Mercer, who was riding on the engine, was fatally scalded and the engineer seriously injured. The engine and tender are totally wrecked. The obstruction was placed at a curve where it was impossible to check the train.

Slightly Damaged.

ABERDEEN, S. D., Special Telegram, Dec. 23.—Fire early this morning damaged the stock of millinery owned by the McDonald sisters $2,000; partly covered by insurance. The fire originated from a defective stove. The damage to the building was slight.

No Ghost Dancing There.

OKLAHOMA CITY, O. T., Dec. 23.—There is no truth in the report that one thousand Kickapoos are engaged in a ghost dance in the Indian Territory. There are only three hundred Kickapoos all told, and they are on their reservation, engaged in their usual peaceful pursuits. Ghost dancing by other tribes is almost entirely stopped and no alarm is felt.

A Hundred Lives Lost.

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 23.—A disastrous accident has occurred at Cordova, where the canal has burst its embankments and destroyed hundreds of houses. One hundred lives are reported to be lost.

A HORRIBLE SIGHT.

An Old Man, With Throat Cut, Explaining How He Killed His Wife.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—Henry Christiansen, sixty-one years old, choked his aged wife to death in the bed room of his home at 710 Drexel avenue, and cut his own throat some time during Saturday night.

The tragedy was seen by no one, and the exact time it occurred is unknown. Mr. and Mrs. Christiansen have been living with their daughter and son-in-law, named Nelson. They were absent until midnight.

When Mrs. Nelson went to the room to awaken her parents this morning her first glance did not show anything wrong. Approaching the bed, she saw that her father's face and breast were all bloody, and as he breathed spurts of blood came from the great gash in his throat. In a moment she had called her husband, and they attempted to waken the mother only to learn she was dead. The blood on some knitting yarn on the razor blade showed that act had been committed early in the night, as the blood was dry.

Christensen was still alive and conscious. He could not speak, but could understand what was said to him. When asked if he had killed his wife he nodded affirmatively, and a horrid gurgle came from the wound in his throat as he attempted to reply. As he acknowledged the crime he motioned with his hands how it had been done. He also signified that he had cut his own throat, and pointed to the razor as he nodded his head, sending spurts of blood out and over his shirt. He cannot recover.

It is difficult to find a motive for the crime. Christiansen was somewhat morose and taciturn, but was not usually quarrelsome. His son-in-law suggests that he was somewhat jealous of his wife. She was knitting stockings for Christmas presents, and this did not please the husband, and he half objected. Possibly this enraged him last night, as she frequently sat up to knit after he wanted her to go to bed. The supposition is that she did not go to bed when he wished and he threw her on the bed, and then, in a fit of jealous fury, choked the life out of her. She was found in the bed, but with her clothes on. Christiansen was also on the bed by her side, but was undressed.

STRAY CONTRIBUTIONS.

Discussion and Pointers on and From Both Sides of the Ocean.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Mr. Gladstone, in his letter to Sir Robert Peel's grandson (Speaker Peel's son) who is the home rule candidate in the Marylebone district, says:

"For the first time since commencing in parliament the struggle under O'Connell, the Irish party, bent on a constitutional and effective scheme of home rule, is looking to Great Britain to pronounce judgment in the contest between it and the minority of seceders under Parnell. The Liberals of Great Britain, who themselves since 1838 have had to resist and overcome a similar secession, will not doubt which side they are to recognize with the name and the true title, 'The Irish party,' with its honorable tradition of resistance to wrong, assured that they would enter the field at a moment of extreme interest, when the cause of wisdom, justice and freedom has claims upon all who love it, enhanced beyond the ordinary standard."

DUBLIN, Dec. 23.—Canon Lee of Bray has written to the Freemans Journal denying Mr. Parnell's assertion that at a meeting of Dublin chapter the canon referred to him as an honorable man, worthy of cofidence and support. "I have only known Mr. Parnell by rumor," says Canon Lee, "and my references to him at a recent private meeting were anything but favorable."

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 23.—At a meeting of the representatives of the various Irish societies of the city held to-day to make arrangements to welcome the Irish delegation, should they visit Toronto, a heated discussion took place as to which should be welcomed, the Parnellites or the McCarthyites. The matter was not decided. A general committee is being appointed to co-operate with the Toronto branch of the National league.

PASSENGERS INJURED.

Somewhat Serious Results Attend a Railroad Accident Near Worthington.

WORTHINGTON, Minn., Special Telegram, Dec. 23.—The passenger train of the Burlington & Northern road due here last evening at 8 o'clock, struck and killed seven cattle about 6 p. m. just east of the Hotel Orleans, and the whole train, except the engine and first freight car, which was loaded, was thrown from the track and overturned down the embankment. There were but five passengers, all of whom were injured, two seriously; one young lady having her skull broken. A caboose was afterwards attached and brought the through passengers here, arriving early this morning.

It is now learned that of the six passengers only four were injured, but none seriously. Mrs. Rose Smith and Miss Mabel Coates, both of Estherville, Iowa, were badly bruised about the body and head. Miss Stella Wheeler of Spirit Lake, Iowa, was bruised and hurt about the head and body. Charles Heacok of Worthington sustained bruises.

How It Is Done in China.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 23.—Chinese advices report the execution of the sentences on the villagers near Shanghai, China, for the cruel murder of fourteen salt inspectors and the burning of the bodies of the wounded and dead. Last March the salt inspectors made a raid on a village. They wore no uniform and the villagers mistook them for pirates. The inspectors seized a pile of contraband salt which they found by the side of a house, and while removing it to their boats they were attacked by villagers and overpowered. Nearly all were only stunned by blows, but a visit to their boat showed the villagers that they had attacked government officers, and fearful of the severe punishment they decided to burn the boat, and with it the bodies of the wounded inspectors to remove all traces of crime. So they carried the injured men to the boat and despite all their entreaties set fire to it and burned the whole. The chief criminal was sentenced to decapitation, but committed suicide before the day arrived, and according to the law his body was exhumed and the head struck off and exhibited as a warning to the public. Four others were strangled and four exiled after heavy fines.

A Neck Easily Broken.

PEORIA, Ill., Dec. 23.—James Hannon, while showing a funeral party how to kill a chicken to-day, broke the neck of Patrick Lyons, a man sixty years of age. The entire party were sitting in a saloon after the funeral, and Hannon gave the old man's neck a slight twist. The fact that this old man was dead did not develop until several hours later when the party arose to go home. The practical illustration had broken his neck.

The Sheriff Levies.

HOWARD, S. D., Special, Dec. 23.—Sheriff Fox of this county levied on the stock and real property of Adam Thompson, dealer in groceries, furniture and notions, and now has possession of the store. Jewett Bros. & Jewett of Sioux City have claims for over $600, and other claims will make the liabilities at least $3,000, while the assets are small.

Railroad Shops Burned.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—The paint and repair shops of the Illinois Central road were burned to-night. Among the property destroyed were twenty-eight passenger coaches. The loss is $100,000.

IN THE OCEAN DEPTHS.

A TERRIBLE SQUEEZE DOWN THERE.

Interesting Things About the Submarine World—Deep Sea Lamps—A Pressure That Crushes Glass to Powder—Still There's Animal Life There.

To any one that has an imaginative nature the ocean is perhaps the greatest of natural wonders. It is difficult to imagine it possessed with life, or something akin to it. It has its moods, its fancies; to-day is calm, unruffled and serene; to-morrow, torn by emotions, rent by seeming passion—a veritable demon seeking to destroy, beating itself down in impotent rage.

So vast a body of fluid, distributed over different zones where opposite conditions obtain and preserving its general size, evaporation and flood, seemingly equal, can but excite the wonder of all thinking people. Five miles' depth of solid water, with its zones of temperature, its vast rivers, hot and cold, its strata of deposits, its little understood conditions, is surely a mystery difficult to solve, and until within a few years it has been a sealed book.

Twenty years ago the ocean was thought by the majority of people to be a vast body of water, warm enough at the surface to permit life and support it, but at the greater depths life was supposed, from the enormous pressure, to be impossible. The mathematician proved it by a simple calculation, so nature was here at fault. Vast areas of inter-oceanic space were entirely useless, devoid of life, incapable of supporting it, a gloomy, dark, unfathomable region, almost beyond human comprehension.

Modern science has controverted all this, and as mysterious as the ocean was the revelation of its wonders has made it still more the object of curious attention. We know that it attains a depth in some parts of from five to six miles, possibly more. We know it because it has been measured, and we have gained some idea of the pressure from the fact that glass instruments lowered into the greater depths have been reduced to powder, and iron, copper, wood and rope are twisted, bent and frayed.

The temperature at these great distances from the surface is just above the freezing point. If it were possible for a man to descend five miles below the surface he would find himself in this low temperature, and still supposing him to withstand the pressure, he would be in the same condition that a man would be on shore with twenty or thirty car-loads of pig-iron piled upon him. This is of course not supposable, yet it may convey some idea of the state of things in the submarine world.

The human explorer would not be unaccompanied in his travels. As far as he could penetrate he would probably find living creatures adapted by nature to withstand these extraordinary conditions. He would find this abysmal realm, so long considered an abode of darkness, gleaming with lights. Every movement would result in a blaze of illumination, as if he were gifted with the light-producing power. Every animal in this uncanny world would seem consumed by some internal fire, appearing here and there in fitful gleams, so that far from being involved in gloom the deep sea is a veritable land of enchantment full of strange and wondrous lights.

Almost every animal, or every branch of the animal kingdom, to be more precise, contains these curious living lamps. They are found in all parts of the ocean. Almost invisible at the surface, they display their golden splendors upon the wave's crest, are hurled aloft by the gale, and appear to be the wraiths of the ocean. Peer into the depths as we float along on some warm summer night, and the watery firmament appears dotted with living lamps, comets, shooting stars and spheres, while far away their numbers multiply, and the nebula is reproduced.

These spectres might well seem the reflection of the stars overhead, but they are parts of the illuminating economy of the ocean. In southern seas the most remarkable scenes may be witnessed, though in the cold waters of the north I have observed exhibitions that excelled any I have seen in the Pacific or the Gulf of Mexico.

As has been suggested these light bearers belong to almost every branch or group of animals. In the deep sea the most striking and marvelous forms are the fishes, and judging from the few that have been brought to the surface by the deep sea dredgers and appliances of scientists, we may well consider them the most remarkable of all living creatures.

To withstand the pressure at great depths, which may be roughly stated as amounting to a ton weight on the square inch for every 6,000 feet of depth, the fishes are constructed upon the principle of a sponge, being extremely porous or cavernous. The bones are permeated by pores, and undoubtedly water enters every portion, so they are literal living sponges, presure being equalized. When these fishes are taken from the water, they often nearly fall apart, showing how fragile they are, and the vertebræ are so loosely connected that they separate at the slightest display of force.

FREE CHICKEN FOR DINNER.

Mr. Dash Adopts Vigorous Measures, Much to His Own Chagrin.

There is a gentleman in North Seattle, Mr. Blank, who keeps a number of hens, which, in days gone by, have managed to make their escape from the hen-pen and have worried a neighbor, Mr. Dash, very badly. Mr. Dash keeps hens, too, but he has always managed, as he supposed, to keep them securely inside the picket fence which marks the boundary of their home.

One day recently Mr. Dash sent a note to Mr. Blank to the effect that if he did not keep his hens at home he would be compelled to shoot them. Mr. Blank examined his hen-pen carefully and counted his chickens, says the Seattle Press. They were all at home, and he could see no possible way for them to escape. He at once sat down and wrote his neighbor a polite note, saying that he was sorry that his hens proved such an annoyance, and if they troubled him he should surely not object to their being shot. "Just shoot them," wrote Blank, "and throw them over the fence into my yard and I will take care of them."

The next evening when Mr. Blank came home he found a dead chicken lying in his front yard, with half a pound of shot in it. He took it up, dressed it and the next day had the pleasure of eating it.

The next day there were two, and the next day three. He had fried chicken for breakfast, cold chicken for luncheon, roast chicken for dinner and spring chicken to sell, but still the supply kept up, while, strange to say, his chickens did not seem to decrease in numbers.

One day Mr. Blank was standing out in his front yard, when Mr. Dash came along, with a very puzzled expression on his face.

"Say, Blank," exclaimed he, "how many of your chickens have I killed?"

"You have not killed any" was the reply.

"What do you mean?" exclaimed the astonished Dash.

"Why look at your hen-pen and see"

Dash made a rush for the fowl yard to size up the situation. Instead of fifty sleek looking hens that the yard had contained a month before scarcely twenty remained, while a small hole in the corner of the pen told the rest of the story to the infuriated Dash.

"To think," exclaimed Dash, "that I should keep that doggasted, measly Blank in chickens for a month, while my own family was regaling themselves on pork and beans! Bah! It's too bad!"

The Blue-Jay.

The blackbird whistles in early spring
And the bob'links' notes o'er the meadows ring.
The swallows twitter from the ived wall,
But the blue-jay comes in the fall.

The robin pipes when the sunlight shines
And the oriole sings in the tangled vines;
In summer thickets the cat-birds call,
But the blue-jay comes in the fall.

The wild canary likes the weather warm,
And the brown thrush chants after each June storm.
When the green leaves turn they will vanish all,
But the blue-jay comes in the fall.

These sun-nourished songsters, let them go,
For they dare not face one flake of snow.
The bare trees herald the winter's thrall,
But the blue-jay comes in the fall.

And down in the woods I heard his cry,
And his bright blue wings went flashing by,
December waits with an icy pall,
But the blue-jay comes in the fall.
—Earnest McGaffey.

Hard to Complain.

The two old friends met accidentally for the first time in ten or fifteen years. "Well," he said, "you are still Lucy Benderby, are you?" "Yes," she replied, "still Lucy Benderby." "It isn't your fault, I know," he rejoined, intending to say something complimentary. "That is," he added, nervously, feeling that he had not expressed himself exactly in the way he had intended. "I mean you're not to blame, you know. You couldn't help it—er—that is, it was the fault of the young man. They, you know," he went on, breaking out in a profuse perspiration, "couldn't be expected—h'm! ha!—to—or—well, I must be going. Ever so glad to have met you?" —Boston Post.

Not General Forrest.

Back in war times I had occasion to call on General Forrest, of the confederate army. I had never met General Forrest, and beholding an officer of high, proud and commanding carriage standing in front of headquarters, his resplendent uniform and general air of grandeur led me to think he was Forrest himself.

"Is this General Forrest?" I asked, saluting him.

"No, sah," he said, returning my salute. "This is Colonel Jackson T. Grangerfield, sah, of the—th Louisians, sah; a more daring and far more dangerous man, sah."—St. Joe Ballot.

TEACHING LIONS.

A Celebrated Lion Tamer Says the Beast Is Not Very Intelligent.

The lion tamer, Darling, is a highly intelligent young man, who, born in the United States, went to Germany in his youth. In Hamburg says Harper's Weekly, he associated with a leading firm, the Jamrach, of Germany, and so, having animals in his charge, became familiar with handling them. Travelling for the business, he made frequent visits to Africa and Asia, collecting animals. In a commercial sense, considering lions and tigers as cattle to be bought and sold, he became thoroughly acquainted with their ways and instincts. Certainly it was the only school where such quiet mastery over savage animals could be acquired.

"It is a very long business," said Mr. Darling; "all my animals have been two years in training. Why, it takes all of two months to make a lion sit in a chair and stay there. I cannot vaunt general intelligence in lions; it is rather individual. I have had some fine young lions, superb in body, that had no brains. Not wicked or cross, but simply stupid. It was a tendency to forget to-morrow all that had been acquired for months before. But I can't always tell. Leo is my best pupil. He never was ugly, but once I gave him up and sent him off, he was so dull; then took him to school again; and I know no lion second to him now in intelligence and docility. This is the point. A lion doesn't want to do things. He just doesn't want to. Now you must make him. Punish him, and you make him your enemy; afraid of you, and he gets worse, not better. I coax him and talk to him in English, for English is the best language for command. The seesaw and the velocipede are difficult tricks. Not one lion in a thousand can be taught to keep his balance. They mostly tumbled off. Perhaps in that performance their highest intelligence is called into play. The velocipede requires a careful lion, and I have just the right one. It is nice work to get the exact pose and to keep it; but what gave me the most trouble is the chariot performance. A lion must have had an original contempt for that kind of business. You see I am busy harnessing up one lion while the others are perfectly free. The art has been to make the rest of them come up of their own accord. For months I had one lion tearing round alone, and the rest scattered about. Now they all come up to time. They don't want to, but they must. It is patience, kindness, making them not afraid of me—for I am not afraid of them—that has done the business. I have rehearsals all the time, for the animals must be constantly at work so as not to forget. The whelps are coming on fast; one, I think, shows great intelligence. I feed them eight pounds of beef a day for the big ones and six for the smaller ones, and they take their supper after the performance."

"You cannot reward your lions for good behavior, like you would a horse, with a lump of sugar or a carrot?"

"No; they despise sugar, but love beef tea. But if they behave very well, I give them during the performance a little tidbit of meat, and Nero would think I was not doing the right thing with him if he didn't get his morsel. My whips indicate the positions for the animals. You could not hurt a lion, who has a tough hide, with a lash, but a whip acts as a protection. You might belabor a lion with a big stick, and he would not feel it. But he does not fancy a stick, the point of which, like a spear, is held in his direction; so if one threatened me, I could keep him off. An act I had to give up was where a lion rose and put his fore-paws on my shoulders. The claws are very sharp, and any display of endearment would cut through my coat, and wound my shoulders, and a new coat every night was too expensive. All the lions are fond of me, and we respect one another."

Street Car Courtesy.

A sallow-faced woman, with a wealth of freckles on her long nose, entered an Austin street car. There were eight or ten well-dressed gentlemen in the car, but none of them showed any inclination to give her a seat. After she waited a reasonable time she remarked with asperity:

"If any of you galoots air waiten for me to squat in your laps, you are a sucked in crowd, for I want you to understand I am a lady from the ground up."

A dread that she was not in earnest about not sitting in their laps caused six of the gentlemen to leave the car. —Texas Siftings.

The St. Anthony Stone.

In the Church of St. John, at Pisa, Italy, there is a piece of stone heavily marked with red, blue and yellow spar, the lines representing an old man with heavy white beard with a bell in his hand seated beside a small stream. To the worshipers at St. John's it is known as the St. Anthony stone, the picture upon it being a perfect likeness of that saint, even to the minor details of tunic and bell.

All for Himself.

When the average man says frankly, "I can't afford it," you will usually find on investigation that it is something that his wife wants instead of something that he wants himself.—Somerville Journal.

Jud LaMoure and a lot of other North Dakota politicians are over at St. Paul caucusing. This suggests the query: Why is it that North Dakota politicians always come to St. Paul when they want to have a confab? Can this habit be charged to the poor quality of the bootleg whiskey served under prohibitory restraints in North Dakota, or to the lack of saccherine matter in North Dakota jack-pots—or both? Probably both.—Minneapolis Tribune.

A passenger train on the Baltimore & Ohio ran into a snow bank near Harrisonburg Va., and was wrecked. Such items as this make interesting reading for the people of the Northwest where there are as yet few signs of winter, and where the festive toboggan remains covered with dust in the garret. The residents of the snowbound East have our heartfelt sympathies.—Pioneer Press.

The official count of the recent election has been made by the state canvassing board. As counted "officially" Merriam's vote was 88,111; Wilson's 85,844; Owen 58,514, Pinkham 8,454. This makes Merriams plurality 2267, a little larger than was reported heretofore. The balance of the Republican stateticket, with the exception of auditor was elected by much larger majorities ranging from 7347 to 12,875, the latter being Atty. Gen. Clapp's majority Both amendments to the constitution were defeated.

The killing of Sitting Bull is a very unfortunate thing for the post traders and Indian claim parasites upon the goverment. To them it is an accident the severity of which is not unlike the killing of the hen that lays the golden eggs. No Sitting Bull, no outbreaks; no outbreaks, no Indian posts; no Indian posts, 5000 political pets and pap-suckers out of a job, and this is where the misfortune of Sitting Bull's killing comes in. Outside of that it is a blessing.—Midway News.

Henry Reinhardt.

A large number of citizens of Crookston regardless of party have petitioned Coroner-elect McEachran, of McIntosh, to appoint the present Coroner, Henry Shepard, as chief deputy. He has been an efficient official and we believe that his appointment would give general satisfaction. We learn that the doctor has already determined to appoint him. —Thirteen Towns.

It is estimated that the newspapers of the country have spent a great deal more money in telegraph tolls since the Sioux Indian scare began than would have been required to have quartered every living member of that tribe at a first class hotel for the entire winter. It might have been added that if all the mis-statements and exaggerations had been eliminated from these special dispatches, that Jay Gould's profits on the telegraph toll would not have been sufficient to buy him a lunch at a cheap restaurant.

A bill providing for the systematic exploration of the interior of Alaska is likely to receive consideration by congress. It provides that the secretary of war shall send a party, composed of such army officers, soldiers and others as he may deem necessary, into the interior of Alaska, and appropriate $100,000 to defray the expenses of the expedition. It is proposed that the party shall remain for a period of three years in order that the observations may be trustworthy and finally set at rest the various and conflicting reports regarding Alaskan territory. The secretary of war warmly approves the plan and recommended the passage of the bill in his annual report. When the bill becomes a law, Lieut. L. W. V. Kennon will, without doubt, be one of the army officers detailed to accompany the expedition.

Six farmers from Wisconsin in the vicinity of Green Bay will settle on the north side of the river. We understand one of the party has negotiated for the purchase of Mat Coud's two farms and two more quarter sections adjoining This land has sufficient pasturage to keep one hundred cows which they will bring with them. A creamery will be built in the spring. These men have recently disposed of their farms in Wisconsin, and each bring from two to eight thousand dollars with him.—Red Lake Falls News.

Crookston Times. Wm. Hoyenes, of Chicago, and A. H. Mahone, editor of the Charleston Star, West Virginia, and a relative of the noted Gen. Mahone, were in the city Monday, enroute to the Red Lake Agency to arrange for moving a band of about 2000 Chippewa Indians from the Turtal Mountain reservation to the Red Lake reservation. The Turtal Mountain Chippewas were removed there in 1873 when Ex. Gov. Ramsey made the treaty with the Indians on the old Hudson Bay trail, at the crossing of the Red Lake River near Gentilly, and they have occupied their land so long that they are now unwilling to leave it.

Washington Dispatch to the Pioneer Press: The officials of the Interior department today informed representative Comstock that the act under which the Chippewa Indian reservation was ceded to the United states could be so interpreted as to allow the allottment of lands to Indians and the appraisal and sale of timber in advance of the time when the entire reservation shall have been surveyed. Mr. Comstock says that being the case, the fact that the appropriation for surveys is about exhausted will not cause the delay at first anticipated. As soon as the surveys authorized under the appropriation of $50,000 are approved by the secretary of the interior the timber appraisers may be sent to the reservation.

Mr. A. Wright of Michigan City N Dakota returned today from the Red Lake pine country where he has been prospecting. He informs us that he has contracted with the Indians at Red Lake for cutting 1,500,000 feet of pine this winter. He goes from here to White Earth and if the agent there ratifies the contract he will put in a large mill on this river this winter. Our citizens would do well to make it an object to Mr. Wright to locate his mill here, as it would be a decided acquisition to our town. The mill he contemplates erecting will have a daily capacity of 50,000 feet. Mr. Wright will return here as soon as his contract with the Indians is completed and ratified

The probabilities are that congress will pass before the end of the present session the bill repealing the tree culture law. There seems to be a very general recognition of the fact in the treeless states that the law was a failure although a good many thrifty groves have been started through its instrumentality. As the Dakotas, Nebraska and Kansas settle up there will be more or less tree planting done by the actual settlers and not by the little tin speculators who have undertaken to take up land through the medium of the tree culture act only to find it a mauled holy as well as an expensive experiment. The law is allright in theory, but very bad in practice and its repeal will be effected none too soon.—Lumberman.

Red Lake Falls News demands that they be given their rights and that Polk County be divided and Red Lake Falls made a county seat. It also intimates that if their demand is not complied with there will be war. We in this part of Polk County have as yet heard no great outcry for county division and we are inclined to believe that it exists principally among the real estate boomers of Red Lake Falls. When the proper time comes this county will undoubtedly be divided, but we do not consider that the time will come until the Red Lake reservation is opened and settled. In a short time this great body of land will be settled and new counties must be formed and Polk county can then be divided to the best possible advantage. We have no doubt that a county seat would greatly benefit Red Lake Falls but we hardly think that the people are greatly interested in improving real estate for some one else, and increasing their tax levy at the same time.

Marshal Hennemuth and Chas. Mead were called on Saturday to hunt down wheat thieves. Last Friday night, two men broke into Wm. Zaiser's grainery and took away 100 bus. of wheat. Hennemuth and Mead followed them to an elevator on the Great Northern just south of Gentilly, and there found that the men had sold the wheat and gone on to Crookston. The officers followed them to Crookston and there obtained the aid of the Chief of that city. Late Saturday night the Chief spied his man driving in a wagon and went out, took hold of the lines and told the occupant of the wagon that he was wanted. The thief evidently thought that the chief wanted the team and was perfectly willing he should have it for as soon as the chief spoke he nicely rolled out of the wagon, shook the Crookston dust from his feet and has not been seen since. The chief has the team.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

The Duluth Times expresses the belief that the Northwest will surely soon be producing its own sugar Every indication points to that fact. In Nebraska and Kansas the experiments in making beet sugar have proven a success and plants are established with every chance of success. The farmers of these states are already turning their attention to raising the sugar beet, and next year will see thousands of acres planted with beets. At Aberdeen S. D. a plant is soon to be erected, all the arrangements having been made for it. The analysis of the sugar beets raised in that vicinity show them to be very rich some running as high as 15 per cent in glucose, and there, too, farmers will plant large quantities of beets next year. At Anoka, this state, efforts are being made to build a mammoth factory. Several farmers have raised the sugar beet and found the crop so much more profitable than wheat, that they will abandon the former for the latter. These facts demonstrate that the Northwest can be made a great sugar producing section. Surely a better day and a more prosperous one is dawning for the farmer of the Northwest. This section has been a one crop territory too long Now diversified crops are to be the rule. This means better prices for everything raised and in the case of beet raising it means cheaper sugar for the farmer and to all the people of the west.—Plainview News.

GOT HIS OWN SPOONS.

The Experience of a Wealthy Bachelor in Buying Wedding Presents.

The amount of shopping for wedding gifts that is going on is something tremendous, and the man who at the club the other day remarked that he had concluded to be married, so that he could shift to the shoulders of his wife the responsibility of making dinner calls and of buying wedding gifts, was answered by a groan of sympathy from all the bachelors present. And the mention of wedding gifts recalls one of the bits of light but somewhat amusing gossip floating here. "The tale tells," as William Morris says in beginning his new volume, "that in times," not "long past," there was a wealthy and artistic bachelor in Boston who sent to an acquaintance as a wedding gift a set of berry spoons of a fashion peculiar and unique. They pleased him much, but they did not please the bride at all, and, she, therefore, quietly took them back to the house where they were bought and exchanged them. In the course of the winter the gentleman went to the same jeweler to procure a wedding gift for another friend, saw and recognized the spoons, bought and presented them, still unmarked, to the second bride. She liked them no better than did her friend, and, like her friend, she took them back to the silversmith. But in fullness of time the original donor of the spoons took unto himself a wife, and then one of his friends who had not heard of the first repurchase went to the jeweler and said to him:

"You know what Mr. J. would like. Tell me what to give him as a wedding present."

"I think," answered the jeweler with a smile, "that he must like these spoons pretty well, for he has bought them twice."

"Then he shall have them," was the reply; "but I really think it will be well to have them marked this time, so that they shall not come back again."

And so it came about that the unique and most artistically ugly spoons came into the possession of Mr. J., who declares that they are the handsomest berry spoons that he ever saw.—Boston Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Employment for the Whistling Boy.

Every Saturday morning a crowd of small boys gather about the door of a bakery in Columbia street. The temptation is a chance to earn fifty cents for a day's work offered by the baker. The small boy is employed to pick over dried currants and raisins, to remove the stems from them and cull out the utterly worthless. But the baker does a little culling among the boys before he employs them, and his mode of selection is original and curious. As each urchin enters the august and aproned presence of the chief cook he is asked:

"Do you know how to whistle?"

The smart little boy, who is not as truthful as the Father of his Country and has not posted himself in regard to the civil service requirements of the employment he seeks, unblushingly says "Naw!" he does not whistle. He also does not pick raisins. The next boy is both truthful and posted. He answers the baker's question with a bar from the classical McGinty overture, and is immediately introduced to the room within where with a score of others he is to find engagement. When all the boys who have passed the examination satisfactorily are in their places the baker brings in the bags of raisins and currants. Each boy is given a portion and told to whistle. The wisdom of the baker's scheme is that as long as there is music floating out from the lips of the urchin there could exist no opportunity for raisins and currants to float in. The scheme works well, at least while the ingenious baker is present. The concert suffers disorganization if he chances to leave the room. His sudden reappearance on such infrequent occasions causes efforts to resume that are pathetic and distressing. If any one fails to understand the difficulties that the emergency presents let him fill his mouth full of dried currants and try to whistle.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Ceratophrys.

The reptile house at the zoo is provided with an anteroom of a cooler temperature, which is chiefly devoted to the exhibition of frogs and toads of many kinds. Among the former none is more curious than the ceratophrys, which is perhaps the most truculent looking frog that has ever made its appearance. Frogs are, as a rule, remarkable for large mouths, but this creature is decidedly the leader among frogs in this particular.

It has also a bloated appearance, which recalls that of a toad, and its eyes are overshadowed by small horns, which give it a remarkably evil look. When at rest it usually buries itself in the soil, but when annoyed in any way it swells itself out, like the frog in Æsop. On these occasions it actually barks with rage, and will, we are informed, inflict a tolerably severe bite on any one holding it. This amphibian comes from South America. In a state of nature it is cannibal, or something very like it, since it will devour other frogs without any compunction.—London Standard.

Mr. John Keowan, the worthy post master at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other." The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of all symptoms of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular. For sale by Justus L. Johnson.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Proceedings of Both Branches of the National Legislature.

Monday December 15.

SENATE.

The first bill considered on the calendar was one enlarging the rights of homesteaders on the public lands. Passed. It provides that when parties settled opposite unsurveyed lands, and therefore were obliged to take up less than 160 acres, they may extend their holdings not to exceed 160 acres.

On motion of Mr. Pierce the house bill was passed for erection of a public building at Fargo, N. D., at a cost of $100,000.

HOUSE.

Mr. McKinley, of Ohio, from the ways and means committee, reported and the house adopted a resolution calling on the secretary of the treasury for the names of the several banks in which public money is deposited, the place where such depositories are situated, the date of such deposits, the reasons therefore, and the rate of interest, if any, which have been or are now paid into the treasury by depositories in return for use of the public fund.

The speaker stated that the pending business was the motion made Sept. 1, by Mr. Herman, of Oregon, to suspend the rules and pass the bill for the adjustment and payment of claims arising from Indian depredations. The bill provides for the appointment by the president of three judges to constitute a court to be known as the court of Indian depredation claims, and to inquire into and adjudicate all claims for property of citizens taken by Indians without just cause.

Tuesday December 16.

SENATE.

Senator Hoar read a letter from John I. Davenport, making a vigorous denial of the charges preferred against his conduct as chief supervisor of elections and professing a willingness to appear before a senate committee to answer the charges.

Mr. Blair presented petitions from labor organizations praying congress to set aside the consideration of the election bill in order to have labor legislation acted on and asked for their reading.

Mr. Hoar objected to their being read as there was another matter before the senate.

HOUSE.

Mr. Dunnell, called up the apportionment bill and briefly explained its provisions. The bill appeared, he said in respose to the requirements, of the constitution, and was based upon the 11th census, which showed a gratifying increase in the population of the United States.

Mr. Flower, of New York, protested against the passage of the bill and severely criticised the census returns of New York.

Mr. Mill, of Texas, said he believed that New York had lost an enumeration to which she was entitled, but her loss was not as great as the loss in the enumeration in the population of his own state, which amounted to 500,000.

Mr. Fitch, of New York, all criticised the New York returns.

Wednesday December 17.

SENATE.

The morning hour having expired, the senate resumed the consideration of the election bill, Mr. Dolph continuing his speech upon the subject.

The secretary of war to-day transmitted to the senate a preliminary of the board on gun factories and steel forging for high power guns, appointed by the president under an act of the last session of congress. In a letter accompanying the report Secretary Proctor states that it may be advisable to establish at no distant day a gun factory at some point on the Pacific coast, of sufficient capacity to supply the guns required for the armament of that coast.

HOUSE.

After a long debate the house passed the apportionment bill without amendment—yeas, 187, nays, 82.

Acting Secretary Chandler, of the interior department, in the absence of Secretary Noble, has sent to Speaker Reed a copy of the letter which Indian Commissioner Morgan addressed to the secretary, urging the passage of the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indian bill. The Indian commissioner in his letter describes the destitute condition of the Indians at the Sisseton agency, and explains that owing to the fact that this bill was pending last session no appropriation was made for the maintenance of the Sisseton Indians. Both the Commissioner and Secretary Noble urge that something be done immediately looking to the passage of this bill.

Thursday, December 18.

SENATE.

Mr. Sherman, from the committee on finance, reported a bill providing against a contraction of the currency, which was printed and recommitted.

The elections bill was then taken up, and Mr. Coke addressed the senate in opposition to it.

The bill was then laid aside, and after passing a few local appropriation bills, the senate went into executive session.

HOUSE.

The senate bill was passed amending the interstate commerce act by providing for the taking of depositions for notories public. After considerable wrangling the house went into committee of the whole, Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, in the chair.

Mr. Farquhar then moved that the house proceed to the consideration of the senate bill to place the American merchant marine on an equality with that of other nations. Mr. Springer made the point of order that the motion was not in order, but that the committee must proceed to the consideration of appropriation bills. The chairman ruled that the motion was in order for the reason that the rules gave the committee authority to decide what measure it would take up.

Friday December 19.

SENATE.

Mr. Stanford addressed the senate on his bill to increase the circulating medium. At the conclusion of his speech the bill was referred to the committee on finance. Senate bill to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Red River of the North at Drayton, N. D. was reported and placed on the calendar. Also senate bill appropriating $75,000 for a public building at Fresno, Cal.

Mr. Manderson offered a resolution, which was referred to the committee on Indian affairs, instructing that committee to inquire into the condition of Indian tribes in North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and elsewhere, the steps necessary to disarm them, etc.

The election bill was then taken up, and Mr. Bate resumed and concluded his speech against it, declaring it the most intensely partisan measure that was ever before the senate.

HOUSE.

The indications are that the subsidy tonnage bill will not pass the house and the outcome may be a bill for mail subsidy merely between this country and the South and Central American states. Like all such indefinite measures no reliable estimate of the cost can be made.

Eyraud Appeals.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Eyraud has appealed to the court of cassation against the sentence of death pronounced upon him yesterday. Eyraud talked over the incidents of his trial with his jailers in the La Roquette prison to-day. He expressed his belief that the jury would have found extenuating circumstances in his case if it had not been for the address by M. Robert, counsel for Gabrielle Bompard. He said that if he should be granted another hearing he would himself try to influence the court. Gabrielle Bompard has been taken to St. Lazare prison, where she will be kept until the time allowed for an appeal has expired.

Robbed a Railroad Agent.

HUNTINGTON, Ind., Special.—Two masked men entered the ticket office of the Chicago & Erie railway at Kent, a small station east of here, held up the agent, W. A. Hoberdier, tied his hands behind him, laid him on the floor and tied him to the legs of the stove. Then they robbed him of $115 in money, his gold watch and chain and diamond ring, amounting in all to not less than $200. Then they made their escape. Mr. Hoberdier was in his helpless position for about an hour until a man happened to see him and released him from his bonds. There is no clue to the identity of the robbers.

A Hunting Incident.

On one occasion two sportsmen in Africa witnessed a strange sight. They were on horseback and had ridden a few miles up a certain stream searching for game of any kind. They had arrived at a thick belt of forest, consisting of acacia and evergreen trees, when they were startled by the sound of breaking branches and the unmistakable rushing of some heavy animals through the thicket.

Both men looked to their rifles and then drew rein to watch the issue. A few seconds only had elapsed when two full-grown giraffes were seen to break from the thicket and strike out at full gallop for the plain beyond.

But the two hunters were quite unprepared for the extraordinary sight that met their eager gaze as the wild creatures flew past. A large leopard had bounded on the back of one of them, while still in the forest, and was now seated firmly on its shoulders, tearing the poor animal's neck with the savage ferocity of its kind.

The other giraffe, mad with terror, soon left its companion far behind, the poor creature's life-blood flowing from its neck and streaming over its side. The sportsmen's dogs now joined in the chase, following close upon the heels of the enfeebled animal, already tottering to its fall. Soon they overtook it and began barking at its heels, but the giraffe did not give in without one struggle.

Lifting one of its hoofs it dashed it backward with unerring aim, striking down the foremost dog and throwing it several yards to the rear, where it lay struggling in the agonies of death. But this effort was the last. Jerking its long neck violently outward, the giraffe reeled over on one side and fell heavily to the earth, severely crushing the leopard in its fall. Both animals were killed by the two sportsmen.

The leopard, though fierce, is rather a cowardly animal, and it is not usual for it to attack game so large as the giraffe, especially where antelopes abound.

A Tricky Skye Terrier.

An Englishman tells of a fun-loving Skye terrier that he once had. He used to be very fond of catching flies upon the window panes, and if ridiculed when unsuccessful was evidently much annoyed. On one occasion, in order to see what he would do, I purposely laughed immoderately every time he failed. It so happened that he did so several times in succession, partly, I believe, in consequence of my laughing, and eventually he became so distressed that he positively pretended to catch the fly, going through all the appropriate actions with his lips and tongue and afterward rubbing the ground with his neck, as if to kill the victim. He then looked up at me with a triumphant air of success. So well was the whole process simulated that I should have been quite deceived had I not seen that the fly was still upon the window. Accordingly I drew his attention to this fact, as well as to the absence of anything upon the floor, when he saw that his hypocrisy had been detected he slunk away under some furniture, evidently very much ashamed of himself.

Poisoned by Scrofula

Is the sad story of many lives made miserable through no fault of their own. Scrofula is more especially than any other a hereditary disease, and from this simple reason: Arising from impure and insufficient blood, the disease locates itself in the lymphatics, which are composed of white tissues; there is a period of fœtal life when the whole body consists of white tissues, and therefore the unborn child is especially susceptible to this dreadful disease. But there is a remedy for scrofula, whether hereditary or acquired. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by its powerful effect upon the blood expels every trace of the disease and gives to the vital fluid the quality and color of health. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not accept any substitute.

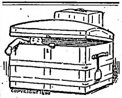
Bad Heads Take Notice,

From Good Housekeeping.

Physicians assert, and it seems at least reasonable, that the condition of the hair is an index to the health of the owner; that a scanty growth indicates impaired vitality, that where the hair is thick, glossy and rich in color it indicates bodily vigor and health, and this is undoubtedly true. Another alleged cause for the scanty growth is the custom of keeping the head closely covered, and this is supported by the fact that peasant women of Europe, who work all day in the fields with little or no covering to the head, have the most luxuriant growth of hair. It is quite probable that both of these hypotheses are correct. Certainly the Breton peasant girl, toiling in the fields with the brawn of muscle and of endurance fully equal to that of her brother, enjoys a degree of health greatly superior to the larger portion of our country women—although we are not quite prepared to adopt that form of life, no, not even for the sake of beautiful hair; but it is quite possible, by care and painstaking, to preserve and improve that which we have.

JOHN BANCROFT, who went to Portland, Ore., a very poor man eight years ago, died lately and left a comfortable fortune to a woman who once gave him some good advice and a breakfast.



Checked
—the frightful inroads of Scrofula and all blood-taints. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies and enriches the blood, cleanses the system of all impurities, and restores health and strength. It cures all diseases arising from impure blood. Consumption is one of them. It's simply lung-scrofula. In all its earlier stages, the "Discovery" effects a cure. It's easy to see why. The medicine that masters scrofula in one part, is the best remedy for it in another. It is the best. It's warranted. It's the only blood and lung remedy that's guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money will be refunded. No other medicine of its class does it. How many would be left if they did?

It's the cheapest blood-purifier, sold through druggists, (no matter how many doses are offered for a dollar,) because you only pay for the good you get.

Your money is returned if it doesn't benefit or cure you.

The True Christmas Spirit,

Has the spirit of Christmas come to you? I do not mean the spirit of Christmas as evinced by the dainty things from the Christmas-tree, the plums in the pudding, or the rich juice of the gravy; but I do mean—are you ready to put out your hand to her whom you have thought did you an unkindness?

Are you ready to ask forgiveness for the thoughtless word spoken?

Are you ready to overlook what seemed to you a slight? And are you ready to ask that each one near and dear to you may be joyful and happy, and that the stranger at the gates may not be forgotten?

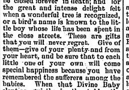
Unless you can do all this the Christmas spirit is not in you.

And if it is not, then, my dear woman, get down on your knees and pray to that little Child who came on earth so many years ago that He might bring to it light and joy, and ask Him to open your heart to the light and love of kindness.

Do you want to make a happy Christmas for yourself and for other people? Then give, and give royally. Royal giving means generous bestowing of the best that you have to those least used to possessing.

Your royal gift may be but a love-message, but be sure if its given in the name of that little Child it will bring happiness wherever it goes, and, like the water of the fountain it will return to you with its virtues a thousand times greater, and you will be made better and younger by it. In your joy remember the children, not just your own—they have you to look after them but think of the little ones whose homes are bare, where life is like a tossing sea.

Remember the sick children. Think of the joy a beautiful toy, a great round orange, a big bag of candies only to be looked at, will bring to the little ones whose limbs are tied down forever. Think of the great picture book over which the eyes will open wide—eyes, my friend, that will soon be closed forever in death; and for the great and intense delight felt when a wonderful tree is recognized, or a bird's name is known to the little boy whose life has been spent in the close streets. These are gifts that you will never regret. Give of them—give of your plenty and from your heart, and be sure that to each little one of your own will come special happiness because you have remembered the sufferers among the babies. When that Divine Baby slept so quietly in the stable, the great kings of the earth thought it worth while to bring presents to Him, and surely as you consider the least among these, He will remember you. Let the bells ring out then on Christmas morning and let your heart beat in unison as you know that you have brought joy unto His little ones. Children are God's own angels sent by Him to brighten our world, and what we do for these messengers from the sky, especially at that time of the year which belongs to them, will come back to us threefold, like unto bread cast upon the waters.



ANTICIPATION.

Remember, the first Christmas gifts were laid at the feet of a child—a poor child of humble parents. Give your gifts then to the humble, to the poor, to the helpless, and thus will your own Christmas be a happy one.

A Novel Christmas Tree,

The Art Interchange gives some most capital suggestions for the adornment of a tree for a fancy fair or bazar, and with some adaption it would prove a most acceptable Christmas tree. Select a large tall pine tree, and tie on it about two thousand oranges made of orange-colored flannel. Those who have made balls for the boys will know how to go about the work of cutting the pieces so as to fit. Leave one of the seams open so as to stuff the orange with cotton, and imbedded in the cotton are to be placed the gifts. Label each orange with the price and character of each, whether it is a boy's, girl's bachelor's, maiden's housewife's, grandma's, etc. Of course, have in each orange some little article suitable for the one it is intended for. See, too, that the article be worth the price affixed to the label. For the dollar oranges there may be tiny brooches' scarf-pins, rings, silver paper cutters, topped off with little heads and jewels for the eyes, silver thimbles, bonbon boxes, cuff and collar buttons, and others that may be suggested by those already enumerated. In the bachelor's orange might be pin-balls, or that useful, old-fashioned article, a "house-wife." In grandma's, a case or wiper for her spectacles. In the ten-cent oranges for boys and girls might be put candies, oddly-fashioned toys, pencil-sharpeners etc. In each case let the article be worth the price indicated. By buying the articles at wholesale, and having the oranges stuffed and made by those who are willing for "sweet charity's sake" to give their time for that purpose, a very fair margin of profit can still be made for whatever philanthropic or benevolent object the tree is gotten up.

Such a tree will prove most available for Christmas, providing rare sport and pleasant surprises. Wrap the gifts in many and intricate foldings of tissue-paper to offord further mystification, and have each select an orange for himself or herself. Of course, in this case the gift need not be costly, but may be only for jollification, on account of incongruity of the many of the gifts.

REALIZATION.

The Smile and the Laugh.

"The chief characteristic that I notice in my friends after a long separation from them," remarked a gentleman recently, "is that they laugh less than they used to."

"Do you not consider that encouraging?" asked a lady present. "Is it not a sign of increased sense that people grow more serious as they grow older?"

"I—I hadn't thought of that," said the first speaker hesitatingly. "I simply thought that they had grown sadder."

"'Sadder' and 'wiser' have not been wedded for nothing in time honored proverb," laughed the lady.

"I had thought of my aged contemporaries heretofore as only to be pitied. I shall think of them after this as also to be congratulated," admitted her friend.

Probably there is nothing more absurd in a small way than the spectacle presented to the disinterested looker on by your smiling man as he appears in public, walking up the aisle of a church or riding in a car. However sweet and amiable the spirit signified by his perennial simper the simplicity of mind argued by such a "wearing of one's heart upon one's sleeve" is too patent to be agreeable. The habitual smiler or laugher, whatever else he may be, can never be a man of deep thought nor of any other depth, unless, perhaps, a hypocritical Shakespearean villain.—Christian Union.

An Anecdote of Buchann.

Governor Thomas B. Jones, of Alabama tells this incident of his boyhood, part of which period was spent in school in Virginia:

"On my way home for a vacation I passed through the capital for the express purpose of getting a glimpse at President Buchanan. Standing in the National hotel, I remarked to a friend that I hated to leave the city without seeing the president. An elderly gentleman who was reading a paper near where we stood, looked up with a smile and remarked:

"So you want to see the president, do you? Meet me here at 10 o'clock to-morrow and we will pay him a visit.'"

"It is needless to say I kept the engagement. The gentleman was on hand, and we got into a carriage, but I didn't know I was riding with the president of the United States till after we had reached the White House, and heard him addressed by his title. Then my modesty got the better of me and I wanted to retire, but the president kept me awhile, and I went away thoroughly happy."—Washington Post.

A Monster Aerolite.

In May, 1888, the National museum of Brazil came into final possession of one of the largest meteorites or aerolites that was ever known to fall upon either section of the American continents. The noble specimen weighs 11,800 pounds and originally laid imbedded in the ground near Bendogo creek, in one of the most inaccessible portions of Brazil. The cost of transporting it from the place where it first struck American soil was defrayed by Baron Greshy. The survey of the route and preliminary arrangements occupied three months.

An Intelligent Cat.

"One night when he had been napping and I reading, going to him I bent over, without indicating by any motion my meaning, and said gently:

"'Dick, if you want to go to bed take off my glasses.'

"He immediately reached up a paw and took them off as deftly as though it were an old habit. Thinking this a 'happen so,' I put them on and made the request in different words, with precisely the same result. After one more repetition he yawned and plainly intimated that was enough."—Philadelphia Times.

Mixed Metaphor.

Nebraska State Journal.

An exquisite figure of speech was used by a shining light of the local Democracy in an impromptu address the other evening.

"You may think you can do it," he said, with an impressive gesture, referring to a certain line of policy, "but you will soon find you have an elephant that you will not be able to accomplish."

The remainder of the speech was lost in a burst of applause.

The English Government, in its endeavor by act and by example, to abolish the observance of Christmas sat regularly every Christmas Day from 1645 to 1656, but in spite, its ordinances the people would not abolish the feast, and Chrismas still survives to tell the old, old story.

A Transparent Halo.

They stood before the Fra Angelico, in the national gallery, which is crowded with rank after rank of angels and saints, all properly behaloed, each in his own degree.

"For my part," one said, "I should think a halo would be dreadfully in the way, especially in a crowd."

"It must have something the same effect on those in the back rows," her companion answered, "as do the big hats in the theater."

He had only carried her own idea a little farther, and yet she was just a trifle shocked by his words. It may have been that her exquisite feminine sense of devoutness took alarm at the mention of the theater before a picture in which the heavenly choirs were thronging with so much sanctity. A faint film of gravity came over her face.

"They may be transparent," she said, hesitatingly.

She was a little troubled, but she could not, by dropping the jesting tone of the talk, run the risk of supposing that she disapproved of anything that he said. She was rewarded for her effort to appear as if she were pleased, for what he said in return was:

"Of course they are transparent, my dear, or you would have seen your own in the mirror long ago."

And then she flushed and smiled, and the whole beatific rows of aureoled angels did not represent joy more exalted than was hers.—Boston Courier.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,

Had To Saw Her Out.

Several hundred people crowded the street in front of Galt's jewelry store one morning, attracted by the sorry plight of a comely young woman who sat on the flag-stones right in front of one of the big windows. One daintily shod foot peeped perforce from under her skirts, and the other was down in the coal hole under the sidewalk.

It seems that the iron and glass grating that lights the vault under the sidewalk just before the plate glass window was broken. The hole did not seem large enough for a child's foot to slip through.

The young woman, a pretty blonde in a handsome dark green dress, stopped to look at the jeweler's wares in the window. Suddenly she gave a little shriek, and seemed to loose half a foot of her stature. She was evidently much distressed at something, and little wonder. Her French boot had slipped through the hole in the grating and her leg had followed it half way to the knee, as far as it could go. She tried to pull it out, but it was wedged fast, So she sat down on the flagstones and began to cry from fright and pain and mortification.

She was at once surrounded by a crowd. The police came and made the people stand back, and a kindly faced old lady did what she could to comfort the unfortunate girl,

Mr. Galt sent to a machine shop for a couple of men and they came with saws, hammers and crowbars and set about breaking one of the bars of the iron grating so as to release the imprisoned foot. It took fully a half hour, and the crowd got bigger every minute, but finally the iron bar was sawed through and the pretty girl was freed from the most awkward situation of her life. Then she took a carriage and went home.—Washington Post.

A Brief Record of the Happenings of the Past Week.

WASHINGTON.

Under a ruling of the secretary of the treasury the tax is remitted for the Kentucky Distilling company on its whisky burned at Louisville, Ky., last summer. The amount is $981,207.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Burleigh, LL. D., at one time the president of the well known college in Baltimore, died suddenly in Blockley alms house, Philadelphia. He was eighty-six years old and had been an inmate of Blockley since 1888.

H. H. Drake, a young Englishman living near Sioux City, Io., who went there some nine years ago and opened a dairy farm and who has since plodded along selling milk and attending to his own business, received word that by the death of his uncle, Sir William Drake, he comes into possession of a big estate and $150,000 cash in England.

Mrs. Maria T. Kimberly, mother of Admiral Kimberly, U. S. N., died in Chicago, aged eighty-one. Mrs. Kimberly and her husband went to Chicago when there were but 100 people there. The couple were the occupants of the first frame house built in the settlement.

CASUALTIES.

At Selenter lake, in Holstein, twelve girls were crossing the lake on the ice, when the ice suddenly gave way, beneath them and all were drowned.

A boiler at the Union salt works at Cleveland, Ohio, exploded. Martin Scheamy was killed, Frank Geiner fatally scalded, Engineer Thomas Fox probably fatally hurt and an unknown man is thought to have been blown into Lake Erie.

An electric motor car jumped the track at Omaha and turned bottom up. Several passengers were injured and burned by coals from the stove. Mrs. Dennis O'Halleran had her face and neck severely cut, and received internal injuries. Miss Anggie McNaughton was cut about the head, and her body was severely bruised. It is believed both will recover.

WICKEDNESSES.

Dr. Anthony, editor of the Leavenworth Times, has been arrested for publishing lottery advertisements.

William Duryea Hughes, the lawyer who ran the bogus divorce mill in New York, has been arrested.

John Galighan and John Johnson, miners, were robbed of $6,000 in gold which they had just secured from prospects near Salida, Colo.

John J. Fox of Chicago who recently terribly injured Mrs. Bertha Kohler by throwing vitriol into her face, has been sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary.

F. M. Wilkins an extensive ranchman and C. S. Walton, a cowboy, have been found murdered near Langley, Tex. Two Mexicans are suspected.

Masked robbers entered the house of Leland McEvoy, living near Hanibal, Mo., and holding McEvoy at bay with revolvers, secured $1,600 in cash and escaped.

John Watson, head bookkeeper and confidential man of the Meriden (Conn.) Silver Plate company, is short in his accounts, and has left the city for parts unknown.

The officials at Cologne have seized a quantity of American bacon valued at 60,000 marks and have arrested a Dutch merchant who imported the bacon referred to.

Nicholas T. Armijo, the wealthiest resident in Albuquerque, N. Mex., has committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart. The cause of the desperate act is believed to be mainly on account of ill health.

At Crawfordsville, Ind., Rev. W. F. Pettit, awaiting sentence for life for wife poisoning, attacked a fellow prisoner at the jail and beat him severely. The man was caught stealing Pettit's private correspondence.

Indictments have been returned against a number of constables at De Moines charging them with conspiracy, blackmail and making false returns in enforcing the probibitory law.

William Ladd, a deputy United States marshal shot his wife dead and then shot himself at Antlers, Ind. T. The deed was done in a drunken frenzy. Ladd, who will probably recover, has killed several men.

Judge Wallace, of the district court of San Francisco, has been fined $10 by the California supreme court for contempt on account of his action in the suit to forfeit the charter of the American sugar refinery.

Valentine Bates, night baggageman at the Lake Shore depot at La Porte, Ind., was shot by an unknown man supposed to be a robber, and who made his escape. Bates will probably die.

In Chicago Thomas Sweeney, an ex-convict who is nearly dead with consumption, shot and fatally wounded his mistress, an Ohio girl named Mary Donaldson, alias Maud Dalton.

Ellis F. Bard, the cashier who embezzled $40,000 from the Lincoln (Pa.) National bank, and F. W. Hall, a depositor who aided him, have been sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

At the Milwaukee union depot a bold robber snatched a handbag containing jewelry, valuable documents and negotiable papers, worth in all $1,600, from Theo. Millenmaster the agent of a Chicago music company, and escaped.

News comes from Montana that the Indians shot and killed Frank Clancy in the Flathead country. Clancy was a deputy sheriff and deputy United States marshal from Idaho. He had friends in St Paul and South Dakota.

Mrs. John O'Daly was found dead in bed at Lafayette, Mo. Discovery was made by Sheriff McKee, who had gone to the house to evict her, the result of the foreclosure of a mortgage. The loss of her home deranged her mind and a dose of arsenic gave her surcease of trouble. She was eighty years old.

A few weeks ago Wenzel Schroeder, a single man twenty-five years old, disappeared from his father's farm a few miles from La Crosse, and it was supposed he had gone to a brother-in-law. He was found in the woods with his gun lying across his breast and indications of suicide. He was a cheerful man, and it is impossible for his friends to imagine a motive for the deed.

A sensation has been caused at Yankton, S. D., by the arrest of Charles Loffler, alias George Weisel, by Special Examiner Godfrey, of the pension department. Weisel, under the name of Loffler, has been in Yankton for twenty years, and held positions of trust. He has always been considered an upright citizen, and has been highly respected. In 1861 Weisel enlisted in Company D, Fifth cavalry, served three years, re-enlisted, got the veteran bounty, served one year, took the discharge papers of Charles Loffler, a soldier in Company H, same regiment, and deserted, adopting Loffler's name. He came west, married in 1866, and moved to Dakota twenty years ago.

FOREIGN

A company has been organized, with a capital of 500,000 francs, to take charge of the property of the Y. M. C. A. in Paris, and erect a handsome building for the association. Generous assistance has been given by New York friends.

The terms of the duel arranged between M. Dumay, a member of the French chamber of deputies, and M. Brousse, vice chairman of the municipal council of Paris, call for pistols at twenty-five paces. If the exchange of shots does not result in injury to either party the duel is to be continued with swords.

Emperor William is said to contemplate making Alsace Lorraine a province, not only separate, but to a certain degree autonomous, to be ruled by a prince of the house of Hohenzollern. It is understood that the matter is now discussed generally by the cabinet, and a plan may probably be submitted to the reichstag, which body, under imperial direction, has control of the conquered territory.

Seven weeks ago the the wife of Ed. Wallace, a colored man of Wadesboro, N. C., was missed. Her husband said she had left him, and he left Wadesboro to hunt her. The other day a negro woman said that she dreamed that the missing woman was in the well of the home where she had lived. Investigation verified the dream, and the body was recovered in a badly decomposed condition. The water from the well had been in daily use ever since the woman was missed.

Every piece of water reserve land in Wisconsin is occupied by from one to ten squatters, with new comers arriving on every train. Many who made filings at Wausau Dec. 20 entered upon their claims at once, but in nearly every instance found them occupied. No serious trouble is anticipated except in a few instances. Apparently the most difficult question to decide will be the "prior rights" among the settlers. Hundreds entered upon lands within a minute after midnight, many on the same site, and all have their witnesses to prove the fact. For the past few days the sound of the ax and hammer could be heard, and the hotels have been crowded by settlers who have come in for a square meal.

Advice to Bachelors.

Agree with the girl's father in politics and the mother in religion, says the Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

If you have a rival keep an eye on him. If he is a widower, keep two eyes on him.

Don't put too much sweet stuff on paper. If you do you will hear it read in after years when your wife has some special purpose in inflicting upon you the severest punishment known to a married man.

Go home at a reasonable hour in the evening.

Don't wait until a girl has to throw her whole soul into a yawn that she can't cover with both hands. A little thing like that might cause a coolness at the very beginning of the game.

If, on the occasion of your first call, the girl upon whom you have set your young affections looks like an iceberg and acts like a cold wave, take your leave early and stay away. Woman in her hour of freeze is uncertain, coy, and hard to please.

In cold weather finish saying good night in the house. Don't stretch it all the way to the front gate, and thus lay the foundation for future asthma, bronchitis, neuralgia, and chronic catarrh to help you to worry the girl to death after she has married.

Don't lie about your financial condition. It is very annoying to a bride who has pictured a life of ease in her ancestral halls to learn, too late, that you expect her to ask a baldheaded old parent who has been uniformly kind to her to take you in out of the cold.

A Poverty-Stricken Monarch.

King Kalakaua is considerably cast down over the withdrawal of the Sherman resolution, says a San Francisco dispatch. He had fondly anticipated that through some favorable legislation he would be enabled to restore the credit of his kingdom and make a loan.

There can be no doubt of it that the potentate is in a bad way financially. It is related that when he resolved to come to this city and had accepted the invitation to take passage on the cruiser Charleston as the guest of Admiral Brown, he found that he was short of funds and was unable to make a loan. In this financial crisis he went to the royal treasury and rifled it of its entire contents, which aggregated $103.50, a sum entirely inadequate to the royal needs; but not to be disappointed in his desire to come to San Francisco, he went with his suite abroad the Charleston and set sail. The second day out a poker game was started, and among the players were the king, Admiral Brown, the captain, the flag lieutenant, and one or two naval officers. In a few hours the contents of the royal treasury had found their way into the pockets of the naval officers, and the king was a financial wreck. Admiral Brown was importuned for a small loan of $3; the flag lieutenant a little later contributed $2.50. The captain paid a tribute of $4; and the result was that when the Golden Gate was reached every officer aboard had in his possession from one to three I O U's bearing the kingly signature.

So runs the tale, and it is said that even the waiters at the hotel have contributed in the way of small loans to meet the expenses of the royal visit.

A TERRIBLE DEED.

Henry Reher, Near Fergus Falls Attempts to Slaughter His Whole Family.

Many Repeated Thrusts of His Butcher Knife Lay His Wife Silent in Death.

FERGUS FALLS, Minn., Special Telegram, Dec. 30.—A terrible tragedy occurred last night in the house of Henry Reher, who lived fifteen miles west of Fergus Falls and about the same distance from Carlisle.

Reher came home at about 9 o'clock from Elizabeth, where he ran a shoe shop, and, after some pleasantry about Christmas presents, drew two self-cocking revolvers and began shooting at his wife, son and daughters.

He hit his son twice in the arm and stabbed him in the back with a carving knife as he was trying to escape from the house.

The light went out in the midst of the shooting, and the three daughters got outside and hid themselves, one of them with a bullet wound in her shoulder.

Then Reher turned on his wife and stabbed her repeatedly with the knife. Afterward he went in search of his daughters, and not finding them came back to the house. His wife had crawled away, but he followed her and stabbed her again and again.

Finally he returned to the house and hanged himself to a beam, at the same time putting a bullet into his head.

The son managed to get to a neighbor's house two miles away and give the alarm. When the neighbors arrived they found Reher dead, his wife just dying and the three daughters still hiding. Physicians were summoned from Fergus Falls and Wahpeton and dressed the wounds of the two injured ones. Henry Reher, the son, will probably die from his wounds and loss of blood.

The family has some property, but is a rough lot. The son has served a term in the state prison for horse stealing and the girls do not bear an enviable reputation.

The family had numerous quarrels, and Reher went away a few weeks ago with the intention of not coming back. He went to Elizabeth and opened the shoe shop where he had since worked. He was perfectly sober at the time of the murder, and nobody can tell what his object was, unless it was simply a fit of desperation or frenzy.

He went home with the intention of doing the deed, because he took with him from Elizabeth the rope with with which he hanged himself, three revolvers and a butcher knife. No inquest will be held.

THE STRIKING SCOTS.

The Struggle Assumes New Phases but the End Still Seems Remote.

EDINBURGH, Dec. 30.—At a public meeting held in this city to-day, resolutions were passed expressing sympathy with the railway strikers. Many clergymen were present and delivered addresses. The passenger service continues to improve, and all mail trains are running regularly. There are, however, no signs of a settlement with the strikers. The strikers allege that men dismissed for color blindness have been reemployed by the railway companies. The Amalgamated Engineers' association has donated £3,000 to the strike fund. The Northeastern railway men on strike are being paid one day's pay weekly out of the fund.

Owing to the small amount of their Sunday traffic the railway companies were enabled to dispose of some arrears in the transportation of freights, coal, ore, etc.

At meetings of strikers held here yesterday and to-day it was resolved to stand firm, and the lord provost of the city was denounced as being an unscrupulous tool of the railway companies. The Midland company is sending engine drivers north to assist the Scotch railway companies.

At the meeting in Edinburgh to-day Principal Rainey, a reader of the Free church, presided. He declared that labor for the number of hours during which the men were compelled to work was inconsistent with health and a right use of human life. The meeting appointed a treasurer to receive donations for support of the strikers.

HULL, Dec. 30.—The striker here have resolved to accept the managers' offer of an increase of wages without a reduction of the number of working hours.

RING DOWN THE CURTAIN.

The Closing Scenes in the Sioux Drama Being Enacted.

OMAHA, Dec. 30.—At the headquarters of the department of the Platte to-night a dispatch was received from Gen. Brooke, which stated that Maj. Whitesides, in command of a battalion of the Seventh cavalry, had captured Big Foot and his entire band near the head of Porcupine creek. About 150 bucks surrendered.

Gen. Brooke also telegraphed that all the hostiles in the Bad Lands had surrendered, and would reach Pine Ridge on Tuesday. Bright Eyes sent word last night to army headquarters that half of the hostiles had left the Bad Lands and were within a few hours' march of the agency. The probabilities are that the trouble is ended.

Change of Date and Place.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The date for the meeting of the railway presidents to complete the organization of the new association has been changed from Jan. 6 to Jan. 5, and the place of meeting has also been changed from Chicago to the Windsor hotel in New York city. The best judgment of those most deeply interested is that at this meeting the new agreement will be unanimously adopted and be put in force at the earliest practicable day.

A General Manager Resigns.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—Sir Joseph Hickson has resigned as general manager of the Grand Trunk railway and will be succeeded by L. J. Sergeant, general traffic manager.

Looks Bad.

CHINESE MASONS.

A Novel Gathering in Indianapolis—Strange Sights Abound.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 30.—To-day was a gala day in the local Chinatown, which is pretty well spread over the city. Sam Lung's laundry was the scene of the merrymaking preliminary to the Masonic ceremonies which will be celebrated to-morrow at the same place.

On Saturday Mong Du, a chief master and bishop, Choe Kung Tong, presiding elder, and Ah He, secretary of the national lodge of Chinese Free Masons, all citizens of San Francisco, arrived to preside over the degree work, which will be performed to-morrow in fine style. All day yesterday Chinamen were arriving from various parts of the state to either witness or participate in the grand ceremonies.

At early dawn Sam Lung arose, woke up his trusty lieutenants, Pong Chee and Sam Ki, and at once began preparing for today's banquet. Chickens were killed and dressed, rice was parboiled, nuts were cracked and various delicacies prepared for the original and tempting cuisine of the Flowery Kingdom. The banquet occurred at 2 o'clock to-day, Hop Sing of this city filling the chair of the grand symposiarch. All ate, drank and made merry at the feast, and were filled with good things. To-morrow the convention will reassemble, presided over by Mong Du, and the ceremonial rites will be performed. Several candidates from the city and neighboring towns will curl up their queues and ride the goat after the regular routine business is disposed of.

The session will last all day and night, winding up with an opportunity for those of a sporting nature to "buck the tiger," as fan tail will be a feature of the programme, as it was this evening.

SELAH CHAMBERLAIN DEAD.

A Name Once Prominently Before the People of Minnesota Recalled.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 30.—Selah Chamberlain, the well known railroad man, died last midnight, aged seventy-eight. Mr. Chamberlain was one of the wealthy and influential men of Cleveland.

He organized the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad company and built most of the lines comprising its system. He also built the Lake Champlain railroad, the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad and the Cleveland, Lorain & Wheeling railroad, being president of the last named company at the time of his death. He also built several canals in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana.

He was largely interested in the Lake Superior iron mines, was a director in several banks and had other financial interests. Mr. Chamberlain was the great uncle of Jennie Chamberlain, the famous Cleveland beauty, and, having no children of his own, he treated her as much like a daughter as a niece.

It will be long before the name of Selah Chamberlain is forgotten in Minnesota. He was the owner of a large portion of the Minnesota bonds whose repudiation was attempted some fifteen years ago.

BOOTH AND SMITH.

The Commander of the Salvation Army Rises to Remark.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Gen. Booth, in a communication to the Times says:

"I deeply regret that misapprehension and some differences of opinion as to the best plan for working his department led Commissioner Smith to resign. In view of the serious obligations I have publicly undertaken, I naturally desire that the scheme shall be tried on lines entirely in harmony with my own ideas. I very highly esteemed Mr. Smith, and this extract from his letter shows no unfriendliness."

He quotes Commissioner Smith: "You need have no alarm regarding my intention. I contemplate no opposition to you. I just as earnestly as ever agree as to the end desired. We differ as to methods. You may reckon on me for any outside assistance I can give."

Gen. Booth, continuing, says: "A deed of trust for the funds will be executed in a few days. Nothing is yet done because the the necessary funds are only now assured." Gen. Booth adds that he hopes to answer criticisms of his scheme and deal with suggestions in a pamphlet which he expects to have published during January.

Death of President Dauphin, of the Louisiana Lottery Company.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 30.—Dr. M. A. Dauphin, a native of Alsace-Lorraine, and for twenty years president of the Louisiana Lottery company, died at his residence in this city this afternoon, aged fifty-three years.

The Indian Conference.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 30.—The government of India has notified its officials not to attend the Calcutta conference, in which all castes are represented, and in deference to this order most of the Europeans have absented themselves. At the second sitting of the conference a petition was adopted asking the British parliament to pass Mr. Bradlaugh's bill making a part of the Indian council elective, after the viceroy shall have decided upon whom the franchise shall be conferred. A resolution favoring local option in excise matters was also adopted.

The conference unanimously resolved that the ages for the legal solemnization of marriage should be raised—for females to twelve years and for males to eighteen years—and the legal ages for the consummation of marriage to fourteen and twenty years respectively. The conference also resolved that the enforcing, by imprisonment, of decrees for restitution of conjugal rights should be abolished.

More Cleveland Street Iniquity.

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—A theological student named Stephan Jirge is under arrest here on a charge of attempting to blackmail a high titled official. Jirge wrote the official demanding $3,750, on the ground that his health had been injured through indulgence in certain immoral acts in which the official was particeps criminis. The official apprised the police of the affair, when he was informed that Jirge had already voluntarily surrendered himself. Jirge maintains the truth of his accusation. The newspapers refer to the official as "Freiherr von W." The scandal excites widespread curiosity.

Italy Veering Around.

ROME, Dec. 30.—The Italian government will, it is believed, soon remove the restrictions against the importation of American pork. The government is highly pleased with the increasing trade with the United States, which has been less affected by the new tariff than that of other nations. It is believed that the matter has been taken up by Secretary Blaine and that negotiations are pending.

A Frozen Teacher.

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 30.—The first loss of life in this section from the great snow is just reported from Hamlin. Today James Vest, a school teacher, was found frozen to death near there. He was buried in a snow drift on a road leading across the mountains from Six Mile Creek to Mud river.

In the Saddle.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Dec. 30.—Gen. Miles' headquarters will be in the saddle after tomorrow. He will probably start in the morning for Pine Ridge, going through the Bad Lands, with an escort of scouts and the Sixth cavalry.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

MINNESOTA.

James McMahon, brother of Chief of Police McMahon, of Fergus Falls, employed on the J. S. Billings farm, got his hand into a feed cutter and before he could stop the machine the hand was cut off.

A special election was held in Rochester, to decide the question of issuing $45,000 bonds to the Rochester & St. Paul railway, which resulted as follows: In favor of the bonds, 284; against, 652.

Representative Comstock was at the interior department in Washington looking after matters in his district. It is expected that D. D. Stevens will soon be appointed land officer in the Crookston office.

Four keepers of blind pigs at Montevideo were fined $50 each and given thirty days in jail. Two Jackson county detectives are working up liquor cases and the result will probably be that license will be voted next March.

W. O. Tillotson, retail dry goods merchant, assigned at Duluth, to R. H. Harris. The assignment was precipitated by Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, attaching Tillotson's Greenville, Pa., property for a claim of $3,700. The liabilities are said to be about $43,000 and assets $60,000.

Ice boating is now the popular sport on Lake Pepin. At least twenty of these crafts are now owned at different points along the lake, and the enjoyment of this pleasure has become quite general. Many excellent speed records are made some averaging as high as a mile a minute.

John McQuade of Iosco township Freeburn county, lost a valuable mare, the same having been taken from his barn during the night. The theft is supposed to have been committed by a hired man, who hails from Minneapolis. The members of the Waseca County Anti-Thief society are in pursuit, and a liberal reward is offered for the capture of the thief.

A meeting held at Albert Lea drew out quite a number of citizens interested in the establishment of a beet sugar factory, with headquarters there. Dr. W. C. Voght was appointed to interview the capitalists with preference to the matter. Prof. Adolph Meyer, with the assistance of J. A. Deragisch was instructed to frame a circular regarding the new industry, to be printed and circulated among all interested.

Several of the state papers have suggested that there be held a convention of representative business men of the state to take some action in regard to Minnesota's representation at the world's fair at Chicago. This should be done at once. Minnesota is a state worthy of first-class advertising, and it should be so represented at the coming fair that people will be able, at a glance even, to realize the vast resources of the state and the advantages offered to settlers.

Sheriff Lenfest at Anoka captured about $450 worth of goods at the bankrupt store of A Lobal, who recently made an assignment. The goods were replevined by Lawyer Stewart on a claim of about $1,000 preferred by one Bendict of Milwaukee through Snow, Church & Co. Lobel is selling out his stock himself. The goods in question are believed to have been shipped just before the assignment from Anoka to Waseca, thence to Cannon Falls and returned to Anoka when they were seized.

Acting under the advisement of Attorney General Clapp, Gov. Merriam has decided to declare the adoption of the constitutional amendment, making the verdict of five-sixths of a jury in civil actions valid. The attorney general, bases his advice upon the supreme court decision of 1876, that "a majority of those present and voting" means a majority of those voting on the penning amendment. It is believed, however, that the decision of 1876 was not sound law, and that cases decided under this jury amendment may be upset.

A sensation was caused at Lake Benton, by the arrest of Hamilton Dehart, charged with the murder of Henry Pretre, a bachelor, three years ago. One morning in January, 1888, Pretre's neighbors discovered his body burned to a crisp in the ruins of his barn. Signs of foul play were present. The authorities were appealed to, but took no action, and the theory that his lantern was overturned by accident and he met his death while trying to rescue his stock was finally accepted, by the people generally. Charles Pretre, a brother of the dead man, it seems, did not share the common belief relative to his brother's death, but suspected foul play. Acting on his suspicions, he has investigated the matter until he thought he had sufficient evidence to justify a complaint.

White, well known to the temperance people of this state as the secretary of the "non-partisan prohibition alliance," is lying very ill at his home in Casselton, having been confined to his bed for more than one year past from diseases resulting from wounds received in the service. An effort is being made to secure for him an increase of pension.

The Fargo Argus says of "Jimmy" Emmons, who was one of the three pioneers who started the machinery of Burleigh county: "Editor Emmons, the irrepressible, is now in Nebraska. He was a typical old timer, an eccentric genius or crank; a past trader, saloonist, editor, all round good hearted, honest boomer. He has an imperishable memento in Emmons county."

Eight Michigan farmers from near Ypsilanti came to this state eight years ago with but three or four head of cows among them. They can now count up over 400 head of cattle and horses which they have raised and which figure as a profit. They have lived through the toughest of the prairie privations, and now see their way out by the yearly increase in the flocks of sheep, cattle and horses.

Col. Plummer has been appointed a special immigration agent of the Great Northern railroad and will make a tour of the east this winter in a special car. The car will contain samples of the products of this state, which will be exhibited and explained by an expert who will accompany the colonel. Col. Plummer will confine himself to public speeches, setting forth the advantage of the state as an agricultural and stock country. He will probably start about the 1st of January.

The jury at Fargo, brought in a verdict of $2,000 in favor of Louise Patrich against August Wichman. This action was brought for $5,000 for breach of promise and seduction. The plaintiff is a poor German girl; defendant is the son of a wealthy German family, and has married since the alleged engagement was broken. The trial has attracted considerable attention, and the case will probably be taken to the supreme court.

Stories of suffering in Dickey county are strongly denied by the officials of that county in a letter to the Fargo Argus. After the most thorough investigation it is found that although crops were exceedingly poor, still enough was raised to pay running expenses and carry farmers over until next year, so far as food and clothing was concerned, but seed will undoubtedly be needed next spring. So far as actual suffering for necessaries of life is concerned, not a single case could be found.

John S. Murphy, Indian agent at Fort Berthold, has asked for the protection of troops, as the Berthold Indians, coached by renegades from Standing Rock, have become affected with the Messiah craze and are into the ghost dance to stay. These Indians have hitherto been the most peaceful in the Northwest. They are composed of the remnants of the Gros Ventres, Arickarees and Mandans. It is understood they are to order the whites to leave the reservations.

A fatal stabbing affray took place just over the state border from Gretna, when Michael Dumont, nephew of Gabriel Dumont, of Riel rebellion fame, was fatally stabbed by Nicholas Damm. A dispute arose between the two men over some trouble that occurred three years ago. Damm struck Dumont with his fist, and, upon Dumont retaliating, Damm pulled his knife and with an upward motion stabbed Dumont in the groin. Dumont died in an hour, when Damm was arrested and lodged in the Pembina jail. Both parties had been drinking heavily.

Several Indians were in Chamberlain when word of Sitting Bull's death was received, and the Democrat says the intelligence caused a broad smile to overspread their countenances.

The Sioux Falls Press says the Indian in the penitentiary in that city has been indulging in the ghost dance for the past month. It seems he got onto the Messiah racket about as quick as his dusky brethren out on the plains.

The Redfield Observer is informed that Spink county will lose from $500 to $800 on the seed wheat deal of a year ago. "This," the Observer says, "seems like a considerable amount, but when compared with the deficit in other counties in the state it is small."

Twenty-six convicts are now out of the penitentiary under the parol law. Thirty-seven were set at liberty, but the terms of imprisonment of eleven have expired. The board of charities and correction reports favorably on the operation of the law, but cautions against its abuse.

The glucose works at Marshalltown are running only half time about 125 hands being laid off on account of a dull market. The manager of the works says the Marshalltown factory is the only one of a similar kind that had been running a full force of men for the past six weeks, and the majority of them had shut down altogether.

Of the forty houses comprising the village of Rickardsville but seven are occupied as saloons, and the need of another establishment of this kind has long been felt. A resident of the neighborhood the other day determined to supply the aching void. According he bought a frame saloon a mile from Rickardsville and undertook to move it into the village on wheels. While the work was under way the proprietor went off on a spree and before he sobered up the wheels froze in the mud. The saloon now stands in the middle of the highway near the village and is doing a rushing business.

Cut His Own Tongue Out.

New York World's Los Angeles, Cal., Special: A strange case of self-mutilation came to light to-day, in which a man who is not suspected of insanity cut his tongue out with a razor.

The act was committed on Sunday morning in a boarding house on Broadway, where the stranger, who gave the name of Wilson but refused to give his initials, took a room three weeks ago. During his stay he lived on bread and water, although he was known to have had plenty of money. On Sunday, for the first time since his arrival, he rang his bell, and the landlady, in responding, found on the outside of his door a newspaper on the margin of which had been scribbled: "Send for a surgeon to stop the bleeding. On the room being entered the lodger was found bending over a wash basin with blood pouring from his mouth. He was perfectly calm and was attempting to stop the hemorrhage with a wet handkerchief. A bloody razor lay on the bed, and spots of blood were on the carpet.

A doctor was called and the man's injuries were dressed. He stood the painful ordeal with wonderful nerve, for, while the flesh quivered under the surgeon's needle, the man himself gave no indication of suffering. The severed portion of the tongue had been thrown away by the man, whose every act showed the utmost deliberation. He had shaved himself cleanly, taken a bath, carefully dressed himself with the exception of his coat, and then evidently seized his tongue, pushed the razor into his mouth as far as it would go, and with a quick slash cut off the offending member.

The accomplishment of the deed seems to have been the man's sole aim, as he carried out the surgeon's directions for treatment to the letter. Calling upon the surgeon next day, the latter endeavored to gain the mysterious man's confidence, but he only gave a shrug of the shoulders, and on a little tablet which he brought with him asked for his bill, which he paid. He then returned to the lodging house and endeavored to call the landlady to accept money for the trouble that he had put her to by his singular act. He then bade her good-by and she heard nothing of him until this morning, when she received an envelope containing a money order for $25 from Yuma, which must have come from him. She describes him as a scholarly, polished man of dark complexion, medium height, of requisite politeness, and in her opinion he is a priest. He held no intercourse with any one, and seemed simply to have come to the city to carry out his singular scheme of self-mutilation. He had expensive baggage with him. No clue of any kind can be found which will indicate who he was or why he cut his tongue out.

Like a Chinaman.

Chicago Herald's Muncie Special: On East Adams street, this city, resides John Quincy Adams, a widower, aged sixty-five years, who for a long time has been surviving on nourishment received from the meat of rats, which he catches in traps distributed throughout his neighborhood so thickly that his catches enable him to use none but the choicest fat young ones, which are decapitated like a chicken, skinned and prepared by the old fellow like a housewife would a squirrel. The old ones, not so fine, are boiled down for lard with which to mix his pie and bread dough. When questioned, the old fellow stated that a long time ago he concluded, if Chinamen could eat rats, he could do likewise; but his wife and children objected, and until their departure ten years ago he was deprived of the meat. Of the meat he says: "It is as fine as any wild game to be had." He delights in showing the nice ones, when captured, to his colored widow tenant, who occupies a part of the house. Adams, with his six children, moved here twenty-seven years ago from near Piqua, Ohio, a wealthy man, but soon lost what he had in the collapse of a machine shop. Since then his wife has died, his children are married and gone, some he knows not where. It is thought by many poverty has driven him to his awful diet, but he boastingly relates how easy it is to live on his rent, $1.50 per week, and save money. The old man's present sickness, which he calls la grippe, caused the above discovery of that and of the awful filthy quarters he occupies.

A Wealthy Bootblack.

Denver News: It isn't every day that a colored man may be seen who is rated at $25,000—who has a well stocked farm of 380 acres, a fat bank account and at the same time is putting in fifteen hours a day at a bootblack stand. Such a man is making his home in Denver. His name is Jacob Shower and every day he plies the blacking brush at a chair on Lawrence street, in front of the Gibbs house. Shower is a full-blooded African of large size and powerful frame. He is a man upon whom forty-nine years have rested lightly, and yet his has been a life of romance and vicissitude, whose recital would scarcely be credited were it not that the strange facts are corroborated by scars upon his body and by an honorable membership in the G. A. R., where the bootblack-ranchman is recognized as a man whose word is as good as his bond.

A brother and sister of Justus L. Johnson came up from Ottertail county last week and are making an extended visit here.

George Ossman purchased from our merchants here yesterday 5600 pounds of hides which they had accumulated in three weeks.

Mrs. Christ Matheson died very suddenly at her home east of here last Monday. She leaves a husband and six small children.

A number of the young folks assembled last Saturday evening and surprised Mrs. S. M. Dainerd. All report having had a good time, Mrs. O. F. Buse is expected home this week from Douglass county where she has been visiting friends for the past six weeks.

The Christmas dance at the hall last Thursday evening was attended by about twenty couple who enjoyed the festivities until a late hour.

Dances have been numerous in the country the past week. Everybody seemingly is bent on having a good time during the holidays.

Rev. R. K. Chapman reports that a stray pig has been taken up at his place. It weighs about sixty pounds and owner can have same by calling and paying charges.

A. A. Erickson came back from Dakota last week to spend the holidays at home. He is engaged by the Great Northern as carpenter and has a good position,

E. H. Peters left last Friday for Fergus Falls after making a short visit to his family here. He has a very good position in the state asylum for the insane there.

A large crowd attended the Christmas tree given by the Scandinavian Mission Church in the hall last Friday evening and all seemed well pleased with the evenings entertainment,

We have failed so far to find any of the farmers of this part of the county demanding a division of the county with Red Lake Falls as the county seat. They seem to be very content to let taxes remain as low as possible.

Congressman Comstock has introduced a bill providing that the point of land north of Lake of the Woods which makes the jog in the northern boundary of the state, and part of the Red Lake Indian Reservation shall be declared a national park and improved as such.

The hall was well filled last Wednesday evening at the Christmas tree. An interesting program was rendered and the presents distributed giving satisfaction to all. The trees were very tastefully decorated and contained many beautiful and costly presents.

Hanson has just received a very large stock of Christmas goods. It will pay you to look over his stock which is the finest of the kind ever brought to St. Hilaire.

Mr. and Mrs, Daniel Salisbury of Lac qui Parle, Minn., probably the oldest married couple in the United states, have just celebrated the 103d birthday of Mr. Salisbury. His wife will be 101 years old Christmas day. Jan. 12 they will have been married eighty years.

Lanesboro Journal: It begins to look as if Brother Jonathan and Johnny Bull would have a hair pulling match over Behring sea matter. Before Alaska was ceded to the United States England never molested or conteded she had any rights there, but she thinks, a little gall now will carry her through, Congress will soon tackle the subject in dead earnest.

News was received here last Monday that Mr. Gustave Holmes of Goodhue County Dropped dead while at Church last Sunday morning. Mr Holmes was one of the most prosperous and influntial of Goodhue Counties farmers. He was the father of a large family among whom are the Holmes Bros. and Mrs. C. G. Rapp of this place. Mr. and Mrs, C. G. Rapp leave to-day to attend the funeral.

Ten years ago the census showed 7,670,000 persons engaged in agriculture, and 9,722,000 in other occupations. It is expected by some that the new census will show a larger ratio of the farming class, but this is doubtful. Agriculture has not been very profitable in the decade and there is no such surplus of production over consumption as that would indicate.

Under the new census Massachusett takes the first place in density of population, 286 to the square mile; Rhode Island had held it. When the entire country is as thickly settled, and under the scientific modes of agricultvre that are to come, the United States will count up about the present entire population of the globe. It will not be reached in the twentieth century.

Owatonna Journal: Now that election is over the binding twine trust is broken and sugar is on the free list, let the people of this state by its legislators at the coming session, irrespective of party attack the school book trust by furnishing free text book to our common schools and state university. If the state cannot furnish them at a fair price let it establish a state printing office and print them; Let the school book trust follow the twine trust into the murky darkness of oblivion.

The tramps are playing in a new role A few days ago a chap reached the east from San Francisco, having made the journey on a $500 wager by a newspaper, having accomplished the journey with only the sum of five dollars for all his expenses. He rode mostly as a stowaway on freight trains. Now an eighteen-year-old boy is en route from Boston to San Francisco, and if he makes the round trip in twenty one days he is to be paid five thousand dollars. He is to travel only on passenger trains, and setting out without purse or scrip, he must beg his food as well as steal his transportation. Yesterday the boy left Chicago, and will next be heard of well on to the Golden State. The tramp profession is rising.—News.

Sleepy Eye Dispatch: Instead of higher prices the tariff seems to have pulled down first the fractions, then the cents, and finally the whole dollars. Today we find goods dutiable selling for less money under the high tariff than the same commodities sold for under a low tariff. Why? Because the beaknosed importers sought to make a speculation, purchased heavily, could not move their goods, need money and have to sell cheap in order to sell at all and the customer sits back and pays low prices for everything in the scheoule. The tariff is only indirectly to blame (if in fact at all) and we who buy are in big luck for once.

The death of that treacherous old marauder cut-throat, coward and thief, Sitting Bull, has called out some curious literature in the East. Sympathetic people who "knew him" are sending in letters to prominent journals telling what a noble fellow he was. The very wording of their tearful obituary notices makes it pain to a Western man that they were never in Sitting Bull's country and never saw the old scoundrel in their lives. It is a vast pity that the people of New England know less about Western affairs than they know about Europe and are averse to knowing anything when an opportunity is afforded. —Pioneer Press.

Crookston Times: The biennual agitation of the county division question has again been started by the Red Lake Falls News, the object being to make Red Lake Falls a county seat and give few of the "boys" up there a fat office. There does not appear to be any pressing demand for the division of the county and the consequent increased taxation, except by a few "farmers" inside the corporation limits of Red Lake Falls, but when a division of the county is demanded it will be made on a very different plan than that suggested by the News. Red Lake Falls will continue to be a part of Polk county for many years to come We cannot afford to part with such a thriving, goahead city. We cawn't really.

In his recent elaborate interview Jay Gould predicted that by the middle of January there would be more people wanting to loan than to borrow money His knowledge of the monetary phases entitles his judgement to a degree of confidence that approaches assurance. There are other circumstances tending to confirm the view that the stringency in money matters is likely soon to disappear. The banks have been increasing their reserve to an extent that will enable them to meet all probable demands and aid to the feeling of confidence, That is the only essential to a resumption of stability in business activities. The condition of the country presents no serious obstacle to a healthy revival of all legitimate financial transactions. The improvement should be marked in the opening of the year— Daily Globe.

Senator Farwell, of Illinois, proposes a new use for dynamite On motion made by him a clause was added to the appropriation bill which provides that $2,000 may be expended by the Department of agriculture in experiments having for their object the artificial production of rain by the explosion of dynamite. He advances the following theories:

"My theory in regard to producing rain by explosives is based partly upon the fact that after all the great battles fought during the century heavy rain falls have occurred. This is historical and undisputed. Senator Stanford one of the builders of the Central Pacific Railway informed me lately that he was compelled to do a great deal of blasting through a part of the country where rain had never been known to fall in any useful quantities and where it has never rained since, and that during the period of the blasting, which was nearly a year, it rained every day I feel almost convinced that rain can be produced in this way. The dynamite could be exploded on the ground or up in the air, and I think I would prefer the latter. The experiment should be made in eastern Iowa, Colorado or in western Kansas, somewhere along the railway, and my own idea would be to commence early in the morning and explode continuously for seven or eight hours."

Crookston Times, Apropos the demand for an examination of the books of the county auditor and county treasurer by an expert, the letters of "tate Examiner Kenyon, published in this issue strike us as being about the correct view to take. If an examination of the books is required the public examiner is the person to take the work in hand. He is paid by the state to perform this service, and is under bonds for the faithful performance of his duty. To employ an expert to do the work would probably cost the county four or five thousand dollars and when it was completed what assurance would we have that he had performed his work honestly? If these officers have been guilty of appropriating the county's money to their own uses, would it not be an easy matter to bribe the expert to cover up the defalcation? Or if the expert performed his duties honestly and faithfully and found nothing wrong would not those who now suspect the county officers also suspect the expert of being bribed? We are not among those who believe there are any grounds for suspecting the officers of dishonesty, and so far as we have been able to learn the suspicions are only such as usually arise where men have been in office a long time, no matter how faithfully or honestly they may have performed their duties. However, now that a reflection has been cast upon the character of these two gentlemen upon the eve of their retirement from a long and faithful term of service, we believe, in justice to them and also to satisfy those doubting Thomases who evidently measure every one else by their own standard, that the state examiner should be called upon to make an exhaustive examination of the county's books and publicly report the result. With his thorough knowledge of the methods of conducting the county's business, he could do the work more quickly, accurately and thoroughly than anyone else, and his report would be the only that, to our mind at least, would be of any value.

THE GHOST OF A SHARK.

The Fantastic Vision Which Foretold a Sailor's Death.

"Five years ago last summer, when yellow jack played such havoc in Rio Janeiro, it was almost impossible to get men to ship for that port, and many vessels went out short handed, among them the good ship Clio, of Baltimore, of which I shipped boatswain and acting second mate, said an old skipper to a reporter.

There was nothing remarkable about the voyage out. We had a good run, arrived safely, discharged our flour and took in our coffee without having a man sick with the fever or anything else.

In Rio we picked up a young Englishman, Ned Halpin by name, a thorough sailor, who soon became a prime favorite with all hands.

We passed Cape St. Roque on the homeward voyage, one dark, squally night, with now and then a dash of rain. The wind was southeast, and I walked the quarter deck, impatiently waiting for eight bells. Halpin was just coming down the mizzen rigging, when I saw him swing far over the side and peer earnestly into the sea. When he dropped to deck I asked what he was looking at.

He replied:

"Well, Mr. Shelby, I either saw my twin brother swallowed by a shark, or I saw my own ghost and the ghost of a shark, and I never had a brother, so it must be me."

I charged him with having rum in the forecastle and with drinking more than was good for him, and ordered him forward. He started, but as he reached the break of the half deck he called me.

"There it is now," he said, pointing into the water clear 'longside. I looked, but saw nothing but the rushing phosphorescent foam as the seas broke against the vessel's side.

I admit that I was somewhat impressed by the man's earnestness, but ordered him forward roughly, and, eight bells striking soon after, the incident passed my mind.

The nights for about two weeks were alternately squally and fine, and every squally night Ned would see that image. We made a quick run with good weather from latitude 10 north to the Capes of Chesapeake and would have forgotten all about the matter had not Ned often said: "Boys, I'll never see Baltimore." When the white tower of Cape Henry came in sight many a joke was passed regarding Ned's shark, but the poor fellow shook his head sadly and muttered: "I'll never see Baltimore."

A tugboat took us in tow and the men were aloft furling gallant sails, when there was a cry and a splash of water, then a shriek of mortal anguish, and as the cry of "Man overboard!" rang through the ship poor Ned was seen to sink beneath the calm surface of the bay, his life blood staining the water around him, while the dorsal fin of the shark that for twenty years has haunted the Virginia capes told the horrified witnesses that Ned's vision was true, and added but another chapter to the psychological mysteries that happen from time to time, and which no man can explain.—Philadelphia Times.

A Coffin for a Couch.

The girl has at once courted and defied superstition, for while her toilet appointments, paper knives, etc., are all in horseshoe shape or have for handles the left hind foot of rabbits, she has a weird, moon shaped clock from which the ill omened cuckoo announces the hours. The most horrible corner of the room she rarely shows, for it represents an unfulfilled purpose.

When she furnished the room, she decided to have a coffin in it, a la Bernhardt. She went to an undertaker, was measured, selected the style of casket and then told the undertaker to have it sent to her boxed so that no one would know its contents. The poor man was as scared as Tam o' Shanter when he saw the witches at Alloway kirk. His fair patroness belonged to a large family, and he knew he would lose all chance of future patronage if the father got wind of it, so he went to him and told him of his daughter's strange freak. There was a breeze in the house that night when the father gave his daughter the choice of his money or her coffin.

That is the reason one corner of her room has no tenant save a skeleton and a black draped dais which was to have held the coffin. The girl who designed this horror breeding room has been a belle for two seasons, and people seeing her childlike face would take her for an artless debutante.—Miss Grundy's Washington Letter.

Snakes as Ratters.

A new method of ridding steamboats of rodents has been successfully tested on the steamer Sentinel. The youngest son of Capt. Cole was some time ago presented with a pair of spotted snakes, which, as they were perfectly harmless, were deposited in the hull of the boat until they could be conveniently housed. A few days later a great commotion was noticed among the rats, which always infest steamboats and barges in great numbers. While moored at Golionda landing hundreds of them were observed scampering ashore on the headspring and stern lines. The evacuation continued all night, and in the morning the captain found both snakes dead, having been literally torn to pieces by the infuriated animals, but not one of the latter was found remaining on the boat.—Galveston News.

Mr. John Keowan, the worthy post master at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other." The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of all symptoms of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular. For sale by Justus L. Johnson.

The Doctor's Ubiquity.

The Chicago Tribune puts the question: "Did you ever notice that there is a doctor wherever you go? The fact does not become so apparent until the doctor is wanted, and then he will appear. Is it providential? Or is it that this disciple of Æsculapius is called upon to answer for the sins of the father of the profession and is kept on the move like the wandering Jew? Coming in on a crowded train from the west a few days ago, was a woman in the rear coach. She became ill. No one in the coach appeared to know what to do. The conductor was appealed to. He called the porter and told him to pass through every coach, if necessary, and ask if there was a physician on board. The porter obeyed, of course, but he met with no response until he reached the last coach forward the smoker. The very last man forward was a young doctor, just returning from his vacation. His home is in the old country. He had had no occasion to call before since he left home. 'It is strange, too,' said he to the writer afterward, 'for as a rule a doctor cannot hide himself. No matter where he is, he is subject to duty. I make no complaint of this; indeed no physician should. We agree to do this when we take up the study of medicine.

But do people ever think of it? Your merchant goes away to another part of the world to rest. A tradesman in Hong Kong finds him and undertakes to drive a trade. He says he is out of rest and has left his business at home. The doctor can never say that. Of a verity it can be said of him that in life he is in the midst of death. I remember that soon after I had finished my course I made a balloon ascension with a young idiotic friend. As we went up I thought that I was at least out of the call of duty. Do you know, that companion was taken sick a thousand feet above the surface of the earth. And I had to doctor, him, as people call it, before we could come down.'"

Character in Ears.

In human beings of a low or debased mental standard the ears are large and flabby, as in cretins and idiots.

When there is no lobe and the ear widens toward the top it indicates cunning, selfishness and a revengeful disposition.

When the ear is oval and the lobe slightly but distinctly marked, a lofty ideality, combined with great sensitiveness, is always noticeable.

Large and round ears with a neat hem, well carved, not flat, indicate a strong will, a bull-dog tenacity of purpose, and a saturine disposition.

Ears which on the inter rim toward the top have a small excrescence like one of the tips of a cock's-comb indicate a weak character, but obstinate with all, though counter-balanced by a placid temper.

Ears where the hem is flat, as if ironed down, indicate a vacillating mind, which in women usually belong to those who lack ideality, and in men is characteristic of mean intelligence and cold temper.

When the top of the ear is rounded like the narrow end of an egg, it is characteristic of a lovable and romantic disposition, or rather a disposition that yearns after the romantic and pines to be loved.

When the ears are large and droop at the top and are without a hem the gross instincts are palpable. These indicate in their owners vanity, indolence, arrogance, and a general satisfaction with themselves.

When the small ear inclines rather to the elongated oval it is a certain indication that the person, male or female, to whom it belongs is of an amarous treacherous nature, and defective in judgment.

A Timely Rebuke.

In commenting upon the philanthropy of James E. Scripps, proprietor of the Detroit News, the Syracuse Journal says: "It is a well anthenticated fact that newspaper men have been known to give away their coats and shoes, and even their spare cash. In no case, however, was the recipient much the gainer, for by the time the newspaper man gets new clothes his old ones are often threadbare, and as for cash, almost every newspaper man knows how that is.

It has been a time-honored custom for newspaper jokers to picture themselves to the public as impecunious, out-at-the-elbows, delapidated individuals, ravenous for free lunches, and humbly grateful for the gift of a cheap cigar; but we would humbly suggest that it is about time this style of wit should be relegated to the realm of decayed facetiousness. A man's self estimate cannot fail to make an impression upon others, and even this shelf-worn jest has not been deprived entirely of influence. As in every profession there are successes and failures in the newspaper world, as a class newspaper men proprietors, and editars are prosperous and influential members of the community in which they reside, self-respecting and self-supporting.

To tell the truth, we are heartily tired of that autiquated joke, the poverty-stricken editor, and its dull reiteration does an injustice to a profession that has become among the most influential and exacting wherever men have the intelligence to read and understand.—From the Rochester Democrat.

In Love With the Letters.

There is a family in Charlestown, Mass., in which are four boys. The first was named Leon C. Carter, the second was given the name of Elno C. Carter, no thought being given to the name previously given; later the coincidence was noted that the name of the first son contained exactly the letters of the second, and that also by accident the termination of the middle name was "ton." Two additional sons were born, and here are the names of the four: Leon C. Carter, Elno C. Carter, Noel C. Carter, Enol C Carter, the middle name in each instance terminating in "ton," We doubt if any other family can match this combination.—Lawrence American.

The Sultan's Constant Dread.

From the San Francisco Argonaut.

The food of the Sultan is cooked by one man and his aids, and no others touch it. It is cooked in silver vessels and when done each kettle is sealed by a slip of paper and a stamp, and this is broken in the presence of the Sultan by the High Chamberlain, who takes one spoonful of each seperate kettle before the Sultan tastes it. This is to guard against poison. The food is almost always served to the Sultan in the same vessels in which it is cooked, and these are often of gold, but when of the baser metal the kettle is set into a rich golden bell-shaped holder, the handle of which is held by a slave while the Sultan eats. The Sultan never uses a plate. He takes all his food direct from the little kettles, and never uses a table, and rarely a knife or fork—a spoon, his bread, a pancake or fingers are found far handier.

The Last of a Noble Name.

A cable letter to the New York Sun contains the following, which to Americans will probably be more suggestive of historic reminiscence than any other item of European news for some time past:

With the death of Senator Edmond de Lafayette the famous family has become extinct. The last bearer of the name was a kindly old gentleman, very rich and very charitable. It is recorded of him that at a recent soiree given by the governor of the Bank of France he was twitted with being a bachelor and that he replied: "The family is all but dead, but what does it matter? Our name will be forever associated with the greatest republic and most powerful nation the world has ever seen—America." The United States legation will be represented at the funeral.

A BERLIN cable dispatch of recent date tells how Dr. Koch sought long and in vain among his countrymen for the money necessary to give pauper patients the benefit of his treatment. He got from them only 20 marks. But a Jewish banker, hearing of the case, gave the great scientist 1,000,000 marks.

Always in Season: Salt.

Oh! ye who teach the ingenious youth of our great and growing nation, let them learn the noble art of self-defense, as Salvation Oil is the specific for hurts.

Two charming little girls were dancing "the racket" in the streets. "What makes you so happy?" a gentleman asked. "Oh! our mas have thrown away all our horrid medicine, and we have only to take Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and that ain't bad at all."

Law is like any other commodity; you can get just as much as you can pay for.

AN EXTENDED POPULARITY. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES have for many years been the most popular article in use for relieving Coughs and Throat Troubles.

We deceive ourselves as often as we deceive others.

For internal cramps and external chills, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment excels anything in use.

Blessed be the capacity of being fond and and foolish.

If every woman in this land knew for herself the actual quality of Dobbins' Electric Soap, no other washing soap could be sold. Millions do use it, but other millions have never tried it. Have you? Ask your grocer for it.

Every man, almost, is both a sheep and a goat.

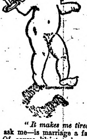
Dishonored Drafts.

When the stomach dishonors the drafts made upon it by the rest of the system, it is necessarily because its fund of strength is very low. Toned with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, it soon begins to pay out vigor in the shape of pure, rich blood containing the elements of muscle, bone and brain. As a sequence of the new vigor afforded the stomach, the bowels perform their functions regular and the liver works like clock-work. Malaria has no effect upon a system thus reinforced.

A man will tell a lie to get sympathy, and a woman will tell a lie to give it.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

At twenty we know, at thirty we think we know, at forty we give it up.



"It makes me tired! People ask me—is marriage a failure? Of course 't aint; s'pose I don't know my biz—what am I here for?" If the women only keep healthy they keep in good spirits and cupid is in demand. Let every enfeebled woman know this—there's a remedy that'll cure her, the proof's positive.

Here's the proof—if it doesn't do you good within reasonable time, report the fact to its makers and get your money back without a word—but you won't do it!

The remedy is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—and it has proved itself the right remedy in nearly every case of female weakness. It is not a miracle. It won't cure everything—but it has done more to build up enfeebled and broken-down women than any other medicine known.

Gloom in New York.

"Do you know what most forcibly impresses a foreigner visiting New York for the first time?" asked a titled member of the British iron workers.

"The dirt?"

"No," said the ironmaster. "The dirt is bad enough in all truth; but something more important than this strikes any foreigner of average power of reflection. It is the extraordinary cloud of gloom and preoccupation which hangs over the citizens of New York. It has an almost saddening effect upon a stranger. I do not wish you to think that I am speaking recklessly or flippantly. I am not. The thing has impressed me forcibly ever since I have been here, and I do not recall any other city in the world where it is so noticeable.

"In Chicago business men look worried and excited; in Boston there is a large enough leisure element and sufficient jollity to amuse any crowd, and so it is in all of the other cities of the country. But New York men have the gloom of Egyptian mummies. You may enter and leave a thousand elevated cars without seeing a smiling face, and men talk with one another with the serious and preoccupied look of criminals discussing their fate in the cells of a jail. Visitors to New York always speak of it as a very jolly place, but the citizens of the town apparently miss all the fun."—New York World.

Should an Actor Feel Emotion.

I believe, then, that every great actor ought to be, and is, moved by the emotion once or twice, or when he is studying the part, but that he must feel it in a greater or less degree—and to just that degree will he move the hearts of the audiences—whenever he plays the part, be it once or a thousand times, and that he must cultivate this susceptibility to emotion as carefully as he cultivates the development of his vocal organs, or the habit of moving and walking easily and gracefully.—Salvina in Magazine Century.

FRED ACTON'S TREACHERY.

IN the elegantly-furnished drawing-room of a certain mansion sat a young man, whose gentle bearing, broad, noble brow, from which his chestnut hair was tossed back in graceful carelessness, and large thoughtful eyes, bespoke him to be one of nature's noblemen. He was evidently waiting impatiently for some one; for, as a slight noise was heard on the landing, he would start and fix his eyes upon the door.

At last, apparently unable to sit still any longer, he arose; and, walking to the window, stood tapping nervously on the glass, and watched, with listless eyes, the chameleon-like crowd that passed. While thus occupied he failed to hear a slight rustle as a girlish figure entered the room, ~~and,~~ gliding softly to his side, touched him lightly upon the arm, his quick start, and the loving yet gentle manner in which he gathered her to his heart, showed at a glance that they were lovers.

While they hold sweet converse let us pause a moment while I describe my heroine.

She was of medium height, of slender, delicate figure, and possessed a nameless grace of movement, which, added to her other charms, had won her the name, among her many admirers, of "Nellie, the Irresistible." Her beauty was of the true blonde type, and, clad as she was in a shining blue dress, she looked well worthy of the name. On her arms gleamed with a tawny lustre broad golden bands, and from one of these, suspended by a small chain, hung a tiny heart-shaped locket, one side of which bore a forget-me-not set in turquoise, with a brilliant diamond sparkling in the center.

Guy Hartley, for such was our hero's name, had called, glad of an excuse, to acquaint Nellie with some arrangement which he had just completed with regard to their soon approaching marriage; and, after a short time spent in pleasant conversation, he reluctantly rose, and, bidding a tender adieu to the fair girl, left the house with a firm, elastic trend.

Hardly had he taken his departure when the front door-bell again rang, and once more a young gentleman was ushered into the drawing-room. The new comer was tall and slight, with jet black hair, and a piercing look in the black eyes that boded no good to an enemy. As he sank into a chair, something glistening upon the floor caught his eye: and as he recognized it, he could scarce refrain from a shout of pleasure; for Fred Acton had long been the secret rival of Guy, each striving to win the hand of fair Nellie Pomeroy. And now, as he held in his grasp the tiny locket, which by some evil chance had become detached from the bracelet on Nellie's arm, he felt that he possessed an almost certain means of revenge on Guy, and stood, perhaps, a better chance of winning the fair girl for his wife; for the locket as he knew, had been Guy's first love-gift to Nellie and was prized as one of her choicest possessions.

At this moment the footman entered the parlor, presenting Miss Pomeroy's regrets, and a request that Mr. Acton would excuse her that afternoon. The truth was, that with her womanly intuition she had long ago divined the secret which he had thought known to himself alone; and having treated him with polite indifference, she felt less inclined now than ever to endure a tete-a-tete with him. Rising as the footman entered with her message, and scarcely able to conceal the pleasure it afforded him at this moment, when he was still trembling with the fear of having been seen as he hastily hid the shining bauble in his pocket, he left his compliments and departed.

Going directly to a jeweler's he purchased a small ring, with which he fastened the locket securely to his watch chain; and then sauntered down the street, in the hope of meeting Guy. His wish was destined to be fulfilled, for he was shortly gratified by seeing Guy approaching, with a serene, contented look on his handsome face.

As they stopped to chat Fred, as if anxious to conceal something, placed his hand carelessly on his watch-chain, but Guy, as was intended, noticed the action and said laughingly; "What is that you are so jealously guarding, Fred? A love-token from some fair lady?"

"Yes; but for fear that it might blight your hopes in that direction perhaps I had better not show it to you just at present" laughed false Fred nervously.

"Oh, never fear for me!" said Guy, "for I have already caged my bird, and so shall not prove a dangerous rival to your suit."

"Well, then, behold," replied Fred, removing his hand and disclosing to view the tiny locket.

Guy turned pale as death, but mastering his emotion by a violent effort, playfully insisted upon knowing the name of Fred's charmer.

"Oh, come," said Fred, "you are feigning innocence; for surely you must have often seen this trinket upon the arm of fair 'Nell, the Irrestible,' who has this day bestowed it upon me as a pledge of her true love."

Guy had stood as if turned to stone while this flippant speech was being rattled out, and then, with a few commonplace words, passed on; but his tread was not as free and elastic as before he met Fred, and his head, which then had been raised proudly, was now bent forward dejectedly; for a dark cloud had suddenly arisen, which threatened to overshadow forever the bright morning of his happiness.

Fred watched him pass on with a sardonic smile on his handsome yet sinister face, and thought to himself, "Ah, my fine fellow, 'there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip,' as you may find to your cost; and then you will know the consequences of standing in the way of Fred Acton!"

* * * * * * *

That evening in her luxurious home, Nellie watched and listened in vain for the familiar footsteps she had learned to know so well; and she retired to rest at last, sad and dispirited, and with a dim sense of impending trouble, that was yet too vague to shape itself into connected thought.

The next morning, as the family were gathered around the breakfast table, a servant entered the room with a note addressed to "Miss Pomeroy." Grasping it eagerly, spasmodically, Nellie tore it open, and with blanched face read the following note:

"NELLIE—All is over between us. Thank God, I have discovered your perfidy before it was too late. I had the fullest confidence in you, Nellie; but that is all past now.

"I leave for France to-morrow, never, I trust to revisit this country, which would now be a sad home for me.

"Your once devoted lover,

"GUY HARTLEY."

Mr. and Mrs. Pomeroy, occupied in their own pleasant conversation, had not noticed the sudden paling of their daughter's face, as she hurriedly scanned the familiar writing, till as she reached the fatal termination, her eyes closed, and with a low moan of agony she sank to the floor in a death-like swoon.

* * * * * * *

For five years Guy wandered through Europe; for five years he vainly strove to find forgetfulness and happiness in constant excitement and change of scene; but failing in this he had at last resolved to again visit the land of his birth, if only to mark the ravages which time had made among his old friends. So he returned to London.

Not once had a suspicion of Fred Acton's treachery crossed his mind, for to Guy he had always shown the better part of his nature; besides the proof of Nellie's duplicity had seemed too conclusive to a limit of any lingering doubt his love might have suggested.

And Nellie? Thrown into a nervous fever by the cruel note from Guy, she wavered long between life and death, but finally her perfect constitution gained the victory and she again mingled in the gay world of fashion, but a certain sadness was perceptible in her manner, and a weary look in the blue eyes showed that her heart was not interested in the gay scenes by which she was surrounded.

Vainly had Fred Acton sued for her hand. Feeling that he was in some manner connected with Guy's mysterious behavior, she had only scorn to give him.

At first she had hoped that some trivial act of her's had displeased Guy, and he would soon return; but as the weeks rolled on and no word came from the absent one she finally ceased to expect him.

Fred Acton, after repeated refusals from Nellie, had at last given up all hopes of winning her hand: but, loving her still, as much as his selfish nature was capable of loving he attempted to down his disappointment in the wine cup; and, with drinking and fast horses, was rapidly eating up the handsome property left him by his father. One day while riding at break-neck speed, his horse, frightened at a fluttering rag, shied and threw him. When the hastily summoned physician had examined his wounds, he pronounced him mortally wounded.

Knowing then, that for him all thoughts of revenge on Guy were useless, and that he must soon render up an account of his evil deeds, his thoughts turned to Nellie, with a feeble wish he could undo the wrong he had done her. So he dictated a letter, confessing his sin, begging her forgiveness and containing the locket, and dispatched it to the injured girl, who, true woman that she was, could not but pity the dying man, bitterly as he had wronged her; and, that he might not die thinking himself unforgiven, sent a note to the hotel to which he had been carried, but the messenger reached there only in time to hear that the unhappy Fred Acton had breathed his last.

Guy had always supposed that Nellie and Fred were married, for the thought of treachery never entered his head. He was quite surprised therefore, to hear his former acquaintance speak of Miss Pomeroy, but refrained from asking why she had not married.

The news of Fred Acton's death soon reached him, and in a few days subsequently he found a brief note at his club from Nellie, detailing Fred Acton's confession.

There is little more to be said. Guy, overwhelmed with shame at his foolish jealousy, lost no time in making all the amends in his power, and succeeded so well that cards were recently issued for the wedding.—Evening World.

Shortening the Introduction.

A Berlin letter tells this story of Emperor William. The incident occurred during his visit to a little Silesian town where certain military manœuvres were conducted recently. The burgomaster took it upon himself to introduce various of the town dignitaries to his majesty. Fourteen of them were standing in a line and the major began as follows: "Herr Peter Paul Schmidt, his majesty the German emperor, king of Prussia, margrave of Brandenburg. Herr Heinrich William Sauerkraut—his majesty the German emperor, king of Prussia, margrave of Brandenburg." When the burgomaster proceeded to introduce Herr Leiberwurst to "his etc., etc.," the kaiser interrupted him, laughingly, with the remark: "That will do, herr-burgomaster: I suppose the gentlemen know who I am. Just mention their names and then there will be some prospect of a little refreshment before nightfall."

The Doctor Got His Pay.

All know how disciples of Izaak Walton who frequent the same fish pond feel toward an old reprobate wary enough to defy them for a whole season. Several Buffalo doctors felt the same way about an aged Italian who was always requiring a physician's services, but who never could be induced to pay. A brand new doctor took the patient in charge not long since, although warned that it would be a service of love.

"O, I'll get the money all right," said the young man, confidently. And, sure enough, a few days ago he announced, with no little pride, that he had got the money.

"How in thunder did you do it?" he was asked by a doctor who was less successful.

"Well, you see," was the reply, "I've just sold his skull for $3."

And the best part of the story is that it sticks closer than a brother to the truth.—From the Buffalo Express.

Iowa Territory's First White Child.

A few days ago at Humboldt, Ia., Mrs. Malvina Bankhead, who enjoys the distinction of having been the first white child born in Iowa territory, 91 years of age, rode from her farm to Humboldt, fifteen miles, on horseback, with only an hour's rest on the road. The excursion was in celebration of her 91st birthday. She is a well preserved old lady, handsome and possessed of a becoming taste for dress and modern styles. She was accompanied by her daughter, aged 70, and her son 68, who rode beside her in a buggy, being too infirm from age to endure horseback riding. The old lady has ten other children living in the county. She is the grandmother of 72, of whom 53 are grandparents themselves, making her the great-great-grandmother of seven—Des Moines Letter.

EVENTS OF A WEEK.

A Digest of the Interesting News of the Past Week.

AROUND WASHINGTON.

Assistant Secretary Chandler has ordered the cancellation of the homestead cash entry of Edward M. Lowe in section 10, township 127, range 62, of the Aberdeen (S. D.) land district, because when entry was made Lowe was employed in the Aberdeen land office, and therefore prohibited from exercising the rights of citizens in acquiring land under the public land laws.

The reports received at Denver from Eastern Colorado tell of an awful destitution and famine among settlers owing to the lack of rain. Many are dying of starvation, and hundreds will follow if assistance is not soon rendered.

By the premature discharge of a blast near the village of Stafford, N. Y., four men were killed and four others received injuries that will probably result fatally. The killed are Anndrew Hunt and three Hungarian laborers, names unknown. The dangerously injured men are also Hungarians.

A fire broke out in the kitchen department of Clinton prison at Plattsburg, N. Y., The new portion of the prison, the kitchen, the hospital, the store rooms, the state shop and the machine shop are in ruins. The new portion of the prison contained 670 prisoners and they made a regular stampede to escape, but the panic was soon checked in good order. The loss is estimated at $100,-000.

John L. Tangley and John Pearson, farmers of Barronett, Wis., were arrested and brought to Grantsburg, charged with horse stealing. After a thorough examination the court discharged them, holding that there was no cause whatever for their arrest. Heavy damage suits against the parties prosecuting will be brought at once.

Frauds which have robbed the government of over $1,000,000 within the last 12 months have just been brought to the knowledge of the treasury officials, and a searching investigation is in progress. The frauds have been committed by the consul and consular agents of the states in Canada, and by the exporters of Canadian goods to the United States. Some 20 consuls out of about 70, the larger number stationed in the province of Ontario, are implicated in the charges which are under investigation. The bulk of the frauds have consisted of illegal fees.

Rabbi S. M. Siskind, who had undoubtedly issued more of these fraudulent divorces than any one in the business has been arrested.

A terrible accident is reported from Warwick-on-Avon in England. While several thousand skaters were disporting themselves on the river at that place the ice suddenly cracked in the middle of the river. An immense fissure opened through which some 500 of the skaters were plunged into the icy waters. A cry of horror arose from the spectators, while the more fortunate of the skaters lost no time in reaching the river banks. When the first shock was over a number of people hurried to the rescue of the drowning skaters and a number of them were pulled out, but it is feared that many were drowned, as a large number were missing. The latest reports state that 17 bodies have been recovered, among them several women

The lymph patients in Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore are improving rapidly. All the doctors connected with the hospitals say that the discovery will save thousands o. lives every year.

Marshall Field & Co., the well known dry goods men of Chicago, have begun suit in the United States circuit court for the recovery of duties paid under protest as levied under the provisions of the McKinley tariff bill.

Mr. Stewart introduced in the senate a bill to authorize the construction of a railroad in Alaska. The bill grants to the Alaska Coal Mining and Development company the right to construct a railroad and telegraph line on the most eligible route from Portage bay to Henderson bay in Behring sea.

The American Armada is the name under which a novel expedition is to be sent from Boston to the principal South American ports. This fleet is to consist of several large ships loaded with American products and arranged for the display of the same. The secretary of the navy will be asked to dispatch one of the new cruisers with the Armada as an escort, and about April the ships will start on their mission.

Miners uncovered a twelve-foot vein of native silver at Gold Hill, Mont., The rock will run 2,000 ounces to the ton and the seam is pronounced a true fissure. The prospectors brought Saratoga nuggets of bright pure silver dotted with gold. Men who were in the Carbonate camp soon after the little Pittsburg discovery was made declare that Leadville will be forgotten in the spring.

George Hull, who left Superior a few weeks ago with his son in-law, C. W. Gates, to spend the winter East, has just died at Binghamton, N. Y. Mr. Hull was the originator of the Cardiff giant hoax, and reports as to his death are conflicting, one attributing it to suicide and another saying it occurred the day following the robbery of Mr. Gates, who lost $2,500 in New York. The Cardiff giant was dug up on Mr. Hull's farm about twenty years ago, and Mr. Hull made considerable money out of it before the hoax was discovered.

Took Him at His Word.

On the day succeeding the one on which Mrs Langtry first landed in this country, a popular and wealthy gentleman, whom I shall refer to merely as Col. C., as he is now dead, called upon the Jersey Lily at the Albemarle Hotel, and presented a letter of indroduction, written by a friend in London. He was courteously received of course. The Colonel suggested that the lady should take a look at the town, and for this purpose gallantly placed himself at her service. The offer was accepted, and a stroll upon Fifth Avenue and Broadway followed. Among the places visited was Tiffany's. Mrs. Langtry was very much interested in what she saw.

Thinking that she might fancy some trifle she inspected as a memento of the visit, and at the same time to add to the apparently favorable immpression he had made, the Colonel, with a gracious bow, said, addressing his fair companion:

"If you see anything here that pleases your fancy, Mrs Langtry, it will afford me much pleasure to have it sent up to your hotel."

The Jersey Lily strolled along glancing at the showcases apparently in an indifferent frame of mind. Presently she paused before a case filled with diamonds. After a hasty but critical examination of the jewels, she said, pointing to a magnificent necklace of steel-white diamonds nearly as large as filberts; "I think you may as well send that one up."

The Colonel stood aghast for a second, but did the best to conceal his chargin. As soon as he bade the lady good-bye at the entrance to the Albemarle, the Colonel hastened back to Tiffany's.

"What is the price of the necklace Mrs. Langtry selected?" he asked in a tremor of excitement.

"Seven thousand five hundred dollars!" was the cool response of the late Col. McClure, the head of the diamond department. Col. C. fell back in a fit. The diamonds were sent, but when after that the Colonel called at the Albemarle, the Lily was invariably "not at home."—From the New York Star.

A Railroad as a Civilizer.

From the New York Sun.

The great railroad which Russia has begun to build across Siberia to the Pacific Ocean will cost an appalling amount of money, considering the present condition of that country's finances. One of the arguments with which the expenditure of such an enormous sum is supported is very remarkable. Some leading men in Russia and influential newspapers advocate this line as a military necessity, in veiw of the possibility that some day the enormous hordes of China may again attempt to swarm far westward, and to even threaten Europe as the fierce warriors of Genghis Khan did nearly seven centuries ago. Western observers may be inclined to regard such an influx of Orientals as a possibility so remote as to be hardly worth considering. But some Russian statesmen look upon Russia as a bulwark which some day may save Europe from an inudation of Eastern barbarians.

ONLY A BIG SCARE.

Reports of a Terrible Battle Near Pine Ridge Are Denied.

Rumors That Gen. Miles Was Among Those Killed Proved Untrue.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—A dispatch received by Gen. Schofield from Gen. Miles at 6:35 this evening indicates that there has been no fight with the Indians to-day. This was the latest dispatch received up to midnight.

DENIED FROM ANOTHER QUARTER.

Gen. Ruger late last night said that he had become alarmed at the telegrams from Pine Ridge stating that a fierce battle was raging within a few miles of that agency, and telegraphed to Gen. Miles to ascertain the true state of affairs.

An answer was received from Gen. Miles at 9:30 p. m. stating that the reports were without foundation. The dispatch also proves, of course, that the rumors that Gen. Miles had been killed were false.

NO TRUTH IN IT.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—An extra edition of an evening paper published a dispatch from Rushville, Neb., stating that a terrible fight was in progress near Pine Ridge, and that Gen. Miles was in the battle. A telegram was received late to-night from Ten Miles, which proves the report to be false.

TUESDAY'S BATTLE.

One Soldier Killed and Seven Wounded on White Clay Creek.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Gen. Schofield has received the following telegram from Gen. Miles in regard to the Indian troubles:

Col. Forsythe reports, under date of 2d inst., the following casualties in a skirmish with hostiles on White Clay creek, S. D., near this agency on Dec. 30.

Killed—Private Domin M. Tranceschelh, Troop C, Seventh cavalry.

Wounded—First Lieut. J. D. Mann, Seventh cavalry; Privates M. C. Hillock and William S. Kilpatrick, Troop B, Seventh cavalry; Private Peter Clausen, Troop C; Private William Kern, Troop D; Farrier Richard J. Nolan, Troop I, and First Sergeant Theodore Raynor, Troop K, Seventh cavalry.

SITTING BULL'S DEATH.

Complaints Against Agent McLaughlin in This Connection.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—The News says that it is stated on definite authority that complaints of a serious nature are to be lodged against Indian Agent McLaughlin, who directed the killing of Sitting Bull. The complaints were suggested in a mild way by a number of army officers whom Mr. Porter visited. The sequel will demonstrate the intense feeling which resulted from the Sitting Bull affair.

Agent McLaughlin's interference disturbed the cherished plans of the department of the Missouri and hastened if it did not cause the present trouble. It is alleged that there were improper motives behind the killing. The charges against McLaughlin and other Indian agents will be preferred by army officers who are satisfied that the Indian agents are responsible for the Indian outbreak.

Interviews with a number of army officers are then given. They are of different tenor, but all agree that McLaughlin acted under orders and that the killing of Sitting Bull precipitated the recent battles.

EXPECT A BATTLE.

Indications That Trouble Is Brewing at Pine Ridge.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Jan. 5.—The indications that the greatest battle in Indian history is almost at hand are increasing. The report of every scout adds new and strong support to this view of the situation. Gen. Miles has also said so in strong words. The small handful of Indian employes here affirm it vehemently.

Extensive rifle pits are reported being dug twelve miles west of here by the hostiles. Last night the hostiles burned many houses belonging to the settlers along the White river, and finished killing the last remnant of a great herd of government cattle that they raided so heavily about a month ago and have been drawing on ever since. The arrival here of a large number of physicians indicates that the war department is convinced that great bloodshed is at hand.

FLEEING SETTLERS.

Women and Children Sent Away From the Scene of the Trouble.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, Jan. 5.—A party o several women and children, who had just come from the vicinity of Rushville, Chadron, Hay Springs and other points near the scene of the Indian trouble, were at the union depot last night.

One woman who came from Rushville and was en route to her old home at Decorah, Iowa, said that all those in the party were sent away from Rushville because of the exposed conditions of the settlements, and said that their departure was hurried by the fact that a band of fifty Indians had pitched their tepees within a few miles of the town. Their husbands remained at the front to attend to their property interests and to defend them if necessary. The woman also said that the settlers' families were all leaving the country and fleeing to places of safety.

Of No Benefit Now, Surely.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Jan. 5.—Representative Hall to-day tried to get a bill through which he reported from the committee on Indian affairs some time ago to give one Legree some $7,000 or $8,000 for the capture of old Sitting Bull when he was away off in Manitoba. The fact that Sitting Bull is now dead leaves an open question as to whether his capture was of any benefit to the country. Still Mr. Hall desires to get through the bill before the house decides that such legislation is unnecessary. But the chances are lessening, as to-day he failed to get recognition before the house adjourned, and suspension day only comes twice a month.

Removing the Wounded.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Jan. 5.—The event of yesterday was the taking away of twenty-nine wounded soldiers. Instead of all being taken to one point they will be distributed to Forts Omaha, Robinson and Riley. Much anxiety is expressed as to the effect on the unfortunates of the journey, and in some instances it is thought that serious results will occur, but every one approves of the removal.

A Very Sick Senator.

SPRING VALLEY, Minn., Special, Jan. 5.—Hon. E. D. Hammer, senator-elect from Fillmore county is very ill, and is not expected to live.

FOUND IN A MADHOUSE.

A Deserted Wife Succeeds in Finding Her Recreant Spouse.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—An interesting story of elopement, long-concealed identity and final discovery in a madhouse, came to light in the county court to-day. In 1882 Herman F. Boehne was a prosperous tailor living in New York city. Surrounded by a wife and children, he lived happily until another woman, whose name has now been forgotten by the unfortunate imbecile, turned his affections from home and led Boehne to elope with her. Six and a half years ago the fleeing couple came to Chicago and their New York friends lost all trace of them.

Boehne changed his name and was known here as Albert Westfall. But he did not prosper under the changed conditions. The woman for whom he left home deserted him and Boehne became deranged, and in June, 1889, he was committed to an asylum, where his condition has steadily grown worse until now he is an imbecile. His wife succeeded at last in finding him, and to-day he was brought into court that his identity might be established to the end that at his death his wife may be able to collect upon a life insurance policy for $10,-000 made payable to her. His identity was fully proved.

DIED OF STARVATION.

A Fearful Tale of Destitution Comes From Kansas.

STOCKTON, Kan., Jan. 5.—From Farmington, Rooks county, comes a fearful tale of destitution. Four years ago John Clifton died and left a widow with five children. Year after year the crops failed and the poor woman was obliged to sell off her stock until at last there was none left. This year finished the fight, and when the recent blizzard came it found the house with neither food nor fuel. The house was located in the Blue hills, four miles from the nearest neighbor. Saturday some persons passed the house and seeing no signs of life, entered, where they found the dead bodies of Mrs. Clifton and three of her children, while the other two were in the last agonies of death. They had starved to death. Prompt attention was given to the living, but there is little hope for their recovery.

DEATH UNDER GROUND.

A Large Number of Polish Miners Killed in a Coal Pit Explosion.

VIENNA, Jan. 5.—A terrible explosion occurred in a Polish coal pit Saturday. Sixty bodies of victims of the explosion have already been recovered. The bodies of the miners which have been recovered from the pit present a horrible appearance. They are terribly scorched and so dreadfully mutilated that it is very difficult to identify them by their features. Seventeen of the men who were recovered in an unconscious condition have since been revived.

Heartrending scenes are witnessed at the mouth of the pit as the rescuing parties continue to bring the mangled forms of the ill fated miners to the surface. Most of the victims of the explosion were married and were men of family, and the lamentations of their bereaved relatives, who are crowded around the fatal spot, are pitiful in the extreme.

A FULL BENCH.

Henry B. Brown Sworn in as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Judge Henry B. Brown of Michigan was this morning sworn into office as an associate justice of the supreme court of the United States and took his seat on the bench.

The ceremonies, which were very brief, were witnessed by a large number of Mr. Brown's friends, including several ladies.

The new associate justice took his seat at the left of Justice Lamar, and the routine proceedings began. Chief Justice Fuller took advantage of an opportunity his duty afforded him to pay a neat little compliment to the new justice. He was instructed by the court to announce its decision in a habeas corpus case brought here on appeal from Justice Brown's former district court. In announcing the court's decision the chief justice departed a little from custom and said:

"We concur in the views expressed by Judge Brown in disposing of this case in the circuit court, and the judgment is affirmed."

AMERICAN HISTORY.

Minnesota Well Represented at the Recent National Meeting.

WASHINGTON, Special, Jan. 5.—The meeting of the National Historical society which closed here last week established the fact that a growing interest is being manifested in American history.

Minnesota was represented by Dr. Judson, professor of history in the state university, and Mr. Earle S. Goodrich, who has been delegated by the Minnesota State Historical society to represent it at this meeting. Dr. Judson created a very favorable impression here, and his credentials from Prof. Northrop saying that he filled the history chair completely, was apparently verified by the prominent part he took in the annual meeting. The proceedings of the meeting and the best papers read will be published in book form in due time.

Mr. Goodrich will report to the state historical society his impressions of the meeting in his usual clear and forcible manner.

PRECIPITATED TO THE BOTTOM.

Twelve Men Killed in a California Mine.

SAN ANDREAS, Cal., Jan. 5.—Eleven or twelve men were killed in the Utica mine, Angel's camp, to day. A load of men were being lowered on a skip and when about 150 feet from the surface the rope broke, precipitating all a distance of 450 feet to the bottom of the shaft.

May Cause a Fight.

WICHITA, Kan., Jan. 5.—The orders telegraphed from military headquarters to Capt. Woodson, of the Fifth cavalry, to disarm the Indians in the Cheyenne and Arapahoe country, have created the greatest anxiety among the settlers in Oklahoma and on the borders of Texas, and genuine disgust among the troops. Taking away their arms will, it is feared, have the effect of arousing a spirit of resistance now dormant.

The settlers do not seem at all disturbed over the situation, believing in the ability of the government to subdue the excitement among the Indians, who are much more civilized and friendly than the Northern Sioux.

Wanted by Both Parties.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 5.—At conferences of the Republican and Democratic legislators to-night both parties took steps to secure the attendance of the three Farmers' Mutual Benefit association men at their caucuses, while the F. M. B. A. men announce simply that they will probably stand together.

Misleading Reports.

CHADRON, Neb., Jan. 5.—The dispatch dated the 31st ult. from Sheriff Dahlman to Gov. Thayer, stating that Indians were fighting here for two days, is misleading. There has been no figting and no hostile Indians within twenty-five miles of Chadron.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

MINNESOTA.

The Northern Pacific station at Battle Lake caught fire from a defective flue and burned. The freight and express were saved.

J. C. O'Gorman of Stillwater is in Washington on business with ex-Senator Sabin. There are several matters which the gentlemen are mutually interested in and which need attention in Washington.

F. E. Comstock, a clerk in the Northern Pacific office, suddenly disappeared from Staples. Search has been made along the line and in town, but no one has seen or heard of him since.

An effort will be made at the legislative session this winter to reduce the salaries of the officers of Goodhue county. The movement originates with the Alliance, which favors a horizontal reduction of 25 per cent.

Michael Hansen of Cold Springs died at St. Cloud of dropsy, aged fifty-nine years. Deceased was an old and respected citizen of Stearns county, and leaves a family of grown-up sons and daughters.

Constable Allbright has returned to Ashby from Breckenridge with Frank Fitch, whom he arrested on the charge of stealing a horse from his father, W. H. Fitch. The horse was sold in Henning. Fitch is in jail at Fergus Falls awaiting examination.

The Winona & Southwestern is now completed and in running order to Spring Valley. The company will give an excursion to Winona and return. About 200 will go from Spring Valley, together with a delegation of business men from Le Roy and Osage.

Representative Lind is with a party of congressmen in North Carolina shooting ducks. Several Southern members have undertaken to show the Minnesota member what duck hunting is in the South, and have also agreed to visit Minnesota next year in pursuit of prairie chickens.

Representative Dunnell recommended Dr. Henry Jones of Preston, to be a member of the pension examining board of Fillmore county in place of Dr. C. H. Robbins, resigned. Mr. Dunnell secured the appointment of V. F. Moffis of Winona county as a laborer in the pension office at a salary of $660 a year.

Henry Voygt, aged nineteen; Walter Paulsen, aged fifteen; Tommy Ryan, aged thirteen, and Johnny Ryan, aged eleven, were bound over at Northfield to the district court on the charge of burglary in the third degree. They were convicted of entering William Eble's store and taking a number of things.

The Howard Lake Roller mill caught fire and is now in cinders, caused by a disconnected bolt. Building, machinery and several hundred bushels of wheat are a total loss. The plant was valued at $18,000; insurance, $10,000. The mill was recently improved at a cost of $1,500, and was in readiness for a large winter business.

The remains of George Kane, who was killed by Marshal Booth at Hinckley on Christmas, were received at Hastings, accompanied by his brother, John. Many citizens gathered at the depot. Michael Kane, a twin brother of the deceased, who was also shot by the marshal, is, still lying at the hospital at Hinckley in a precarious condition. The age of the Kane boys was twenty-five years.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Baumgarten, who live a few miles northwest of Fergus Falls, drove in to attend the services in the German Lutheran church. They brought with them their three-months' old baby, and wrapped it up very thoroughly to protect it from the cold. When they reached the church and unwrapped the child they were horrified to find that it was almost suffocated from its wraps, and it died in a few moments.

J. B. Metz, agent of the West Shore & Hoosac Tunnel line at Minneapolis, who left there mysteriously, has been quietly living at Butte, Montana. He is in excellent health mentally and physically, and the inference derived from his letter to his superior in St. Paul, W. F. Wilson, that he is crazy seems without foundation. He refuses to give any explanation of the cause of his sudden departure further than to intimate that he had got into a fast set and was getting too deep in the social swim.

Prof. A. C. Gutterson died at Owatonna after a short illness, aged sixty. He was born in Vermont and came to Owatonna in 1860. In 1867 he graduated from the Normal Musical Academy of the Northwest at Madison, and since had devoted much time to music. He composed the cantatas of "Christmas," "The Seasons" and numerous other pieces of church and secular music. He has been alderman and mayor of the city, and was treasurer of the state school board at the time of his death. He has been cashier of the Formers' National bank since its organization in 1874.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The president signed the bill for the erection of a public building at Fargo.

This state ranks as the forty-first state in of point of population.

Edmund Hackett, Bismarck's first mayor, who lives in Seymour, Tex., has invented a machine that digs and sacks potatoes.

Ex-Gov. Pillsbury, of Minnesota, who has been traveling over the state, says: "Every farmer who sticks to his farm in this region will come out all right."

Nicholas Dahm stabbed and killed Pierre Dumas in a saloon at Neche. They quarreled about who should pay for the drinks. Dahm was arrested and hurried away to Pembina to prevent his lynching.

The state board of boiler inspectors has been meeting at Fargo, by comparing notes and putting in shape changes which they deem advisable to have made the coming season in the laws.

The Jamestown Alert says that Capt. Fetchet, of the Eight cavalry, who supported the Indian police in the capture of Sitting Bull, is the officer who was tried for knocking down and severely injuring a soldier at Bismarck on the 4th of July a year ago.

Traveling man in the Fargo Argus: Staples is getting to be a great town for sports. I was there recently and saw Johnny Fosdyke, of Jamestown, win $1,800 in about half an hour at "seven come 'leven." They were shooting $100 at a crack. He was singing "Down went McGinty" all the time and it seemed to bring him luck.

It appears that Bishop Walker, of this state, is not quite up to the times, notwithstanding his church-on-wheels revolution. The car has iron wheels and the Northern Pacific refuses to attach it to passenger trains. Therefore the bishop must travel by slow freight.

Some one figures that the wheat made into bread in the United States at Dakota prices costs $204,000,000—that is, 340,000,000 bushels at 60 cents per pushel—while the sugar consumed amounts to $300,000,000. From this it concludes that sugar costs more than bread, or about $4.40 per capita for sugar against $3.20 for bread.

The Fargo Argus has heard it said that Col. Plummer has been sent east to advertise this state in order to keep him from tampering with the legislature at Bismarck. The Argus says: "The colonel is a whole team and a horse to let—with a yaller dog under the wagon—so to speak, wherever he is put."

The Oakes Republican is responsible for the statement that in Sargent county Judge Lauder terminated the term of court rather earlier than was expected on account of "litigants being unable to meet court expenses as well as attorneys to work for windy promises." It is not thought that another term will be held until after next harvest.

Hon. James Mathews, of Larrimore, says he came to this state for his health. He has found it, his weight increasing from 136 to 170 pounds. Incidentally he has gathered up about 4,000 acres of land. He had 2,000 acres in crops this year, and sold his wheat at $1.25 per bushel. He has about 260 head of blooded horses that he has raised while he was resting.

Gerald Pierce, of Bismarck, sends the Fargo Argus a bottle of syrup made from sugar beets by a German woman living ten miles north of Bismarck. She has no machinery for its manufacture, and simply presses the beets and cooks the product. The family raises enough beets every year to not only supply themselves with syrup, but to keep the neighborhood in the article.

The bill introduced by Representative Hansbrough to disarm all the Indians and punish severely any one selling arms and ammunition to them should pass. It is a grave evil that the best quality of arms and amunition should be found in abundance among these savages, who are liable at any day to use them upon the troops and settlers. No other nation in the world permits such armament of the wild and partially wild people in its territories.

Dickey county pluck is to be commended. A carload of flour was recently purchased by the charitable people of Fargo and consigned to "the destitute people of Dickey county. The commissioners of that county promptly and politely replied that they knew of no destitution that could not be relieved without outside aid. Almost every county in either of the Dakotas could make a similar report if commissioners would do their whole duty in looking up the poor who are too proud to ask for aid, and helping them to tide over the winter.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Huron boasts that it has more school children than any other town in this state—620.

A pair of moose are to be broken to harness in South Sioux Falls. It is expected to drive them in Sioux Falls until the opening of the world's fair, when they will be taken to Chicago.

David Simmons, of Nebraska City, Neb., and his brother Curley, met at Lead the other day for the first time after a seperation of thirty-one years.

The city council of Deadwood has passed an ordinance licensing saloons, billiard halls and gambling dens. A saloon license costs $75 a month; with a gambling annex, $25 more.

A pretty story comes from Pennsylvania that Edward Kressig, of Saxony, is in this city hunting his brother, who was disinherited by his father forty years ago. Edward wants to divide a fortune of $1,000,000 with him.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Eckarat, sentenced to four years in the Sioux Falls penitentiary for killing her husband, has been declared insane, and on the order of Gov. Mellette, has been transferred to the hospital for the insane at Yankton.

Fifty or more of the mighty hunters of Pierre hunted the festive jack rabbit on Christmas day. One of them carried a Kodak camera and brought in a picture of a rabbit. The others got a cold dinner on their return, which, they ate standing, not being used to horseback riding.

The Deadwood Pioneer says that Rapid City is as safe as New York city from Indian invasion, but that the "Indian war" is and has been a big thing for Rapid City and the farmers of Pennington and Custer counties. Farmers who have anything to sell get good prices, and everyone who has a team gets $6 per day for transportation of supplies, ordnance or some other traps belonging to the government.

WISCONSIN.

Cornelius McDonald, who was running a restaurant at Janesville, is gone. He left a wife and a lot of bills.

Gustav Kuentzel, the postmaster at Marion, Waupaca County, is $1,461 short in his accounts, and has given his bonds-men possession of his property to secure them.

The name of Mayor Bashford of Madison, was mentioned for assistant attorney-generalship, but the men who control these matters are said to have vetoed any such proceeding.

Jay Trumbull, the Merrillan agent of the American Express Company, was made a present of $70 because he was robbed of $1,-000 a few weeks ago, Truly, corporations have souls,

William Smith happened to be on a St. Paul train near Racine Christmas Day. He reached up to pull the bell cord when Conductor Tilton felled him with a blow between the eyes.

Silas Coryell, an old resident of the town of Center, Rock County, was thrown out of his carriage when his team ran away. His skull was crushed, and death was almost instantaneous.

George Lloyd, of Ashland, received a box of nice candy for a Christmas present from some unknown party. Soon after he had eaten he was taken violently ill. The candy was poisoned and came from some secret enemy.

Little James Scribner, of Rosendale, Green Lake County took a dynamite cartridge to school with him and endeavored to fit it over a pencil. Portions of the boy's hand were scattered about the room, and for a wonder he was not killed.

While endeavoring to arrest Rhode Capile and two unruly sons at Whitewater, an officer of that town performed an almost unparalleled feat. He shot Capile's son through the hand, hit the father in the jaw and also struck a bystander, all with the same bullet.

Joseph Gibson, of Neenah, sent his boy out with a pail to milk a cow twenty-nine years ago. The boy set the pail against the farm-yard fence and ran away. Last Christmas Day the boy returned home. The old man thought his boy dead, and the family is rejoicing. Young Gibson is now nearly 40, and has been around the world.

James Arthur, who was probably the biggest man in Wisconsin, died at Linden the other day on his immense farm. Arthur lacked only a fraction of being 7 feet in height, weighed 300 pounds when in ordinary good condition, and was perfectly developed. He was a veritable Samson in strength, and his feats were the talk of the surrounding country for miles.

IOWA.

As a result of the recent prosecution the saloons of Carroll have changed managers, but the schooners sail over the bars just the same.

Palo Alto county will this year market 50,000 tons of hay. Kossuth county, the Algona Courier says, will go her several thousand tons better.

Iowa county owns about 3,000 acres of land in Ida and Cherokee counties, valued at $15 per acre. It is all leased, and pays Iowa county a rental of $1,700 per year.

C. B. Paul, of Algona, has patented a device to warm a cold bed. The heat is generated by a common kerosene lamp and conveyed into the bed by means of a tin tube.

In South Ottumwa pretty young ladies pass the contribution boxes in the churches and the pastors' wives buy buttons for the use of the family, like the wives of other citizens.

The will of the late Mrs. Ogilby of Dubuque, makes a provisional bequest of $5,000 to an eastern home for superannuated Methodist ministers. Mrs. Ogilby's estate is worth $50,000 or $6,000.

The Northwood Index says: Jack rabbits are becoming rather more numerous than jack pots. A few years ago they—the rabbits—were so scarce as to be decided curiosities.

Manchester's water-works have been tested and work satisfactorily. Water is taken from a big spring, and in case of emergency from the Maquoketa river. Two 750,000 gallon Smedley pumps are used.

Cedar Rapids made about $600,000 worth of building improvements the past year, according to the big and handsome Christmas edition of the Gazette. A prosperous year in all kinds of business is also reported.

In Pocohontas county the newspapers advertise the sale of the poor farm. Counting interest on the plant and the cost of committee work to see that it is properly cared for the farm costs more than it comes to.

An Original Parrot.

There was of late advertised a parrot who could make original observations—not mere slavish "copy," but the most apt remarks. A parrot fancier answered the advertisement, and the advertiser brought his bird. He was not beautiful, and he did not look accomplished. He no sooner opened his mouth, however, than his genius discovered itself.

"Supposing that this bird is all that you say of it," inquired the possible purchaser, "what do you want for it?"

"Fifty pounds," said the dealer.

"Make it guineas!" exclaimed the parrot.

The enraptured bird-fancier bought him at once.

Weeks rolled on, and the bird never said another word. Not even that solitary sentence "Make it guineas," which the purchaser naturally thought he had learned by rote as was the case with that world-famous bird that cried, "what a precious lot of parrots!" on finding himself in a bird show, and for evermore held his peace. He sent for the dealer, and thus frankly addressed him:—

"Of course, I have been taken in. This infernal bird is dumb; can't even say, 'What's o'clock; or "Pretty Poll.'"

"He only professes to make original observations," put in the dealerr

"Nonsense! he does nothing but scratch himself. You have got you money; at least, tell me how he contrived to say, 'Make it guineas,' at so appropriate a moment. I'll forgive you if you only tell me the truth."

"Very good, sir. Then he didn't say it at all, I said it for him. I'm a ventriloquist. My parrots all make original observations, but only in my presence."

Then the parrot fancier shook hands with the dealer and gave him a list of other parrot fanciers (his personal friends), who also in due time were taken in, which, of course, was very soothing.

The Motion Denied.

The late Judge Blackman was very particular in requiring attorneys to observe the rules of practice. In a certain cause, says the Albany Law Journal, Lawyer T. had sued out a writ of capias. Lawyer L. moved to quash the writ, and was proceeding with his argument, when the court interrupted him with the following query: The Court—"What are you reading from, sir?" Lawyer L.—"Fom a work on logic, your honor." The Court—"Did you give Brother T. notice that you were going to read from a work on logic?" Lawyer L.—"Of course not, your honor." The Court—"Are you aware, sir, of the rule of court which requires notice to be given of matter which would be liable to surprise the attorney on the other side?" Lawyer L.—"Yes, your honor; but the rule has no application to a matter of this kind." The Court—"I don't know, sir; I don't know. I know of nothing that would surprise Brother T. more than logic, and if you haven't given notice that you are going to read from a work on logic, why, I can't permit you to read it." Lawyer L. proceeded with his argument, and presently he was again interrupted by the court. The Court—"What are you reading from now, sir?" Lawyer L.—"Green's grammar, your honor." The Court—"Did you give Brother T. notice that you were going to read from Green's grammer?" Lawyer L. (very testily)—"Of course not, your honor." The Court—"Well, sir, I know of nothing in this world, aside from logic, that would surprise Brother T. more than grammar, and if you haven't given him notice that you are going to read from Green's grammar, why, I can't permit you to read it, and I shall have to deny your motion with costs."

Dec. 30 1890. S. M. Dainerd

Detroit (Minn.) Free Press: The present laws for the control of the railroads are very deficient, and have been openly ignored by the railroad officials, and the railroad and warehouse commissions as now conducted are a huge farce and amount to nothing. The commission is principally noted for traveling about the country on passes living off the fat of the land, drawing their mileage per diem and doing simply nothing and unless the laws can be made to regulate both the express and railroad companies more thoroughly it is useless to meddle with them at all.

Warren Register: The papers throughout the state are demanding that the coming legislature place the express companies under legal control. That's right. These highway robbers have gone unwhipped of justice too long. Let us have reform along this line. What need is there for express companies anyway, along the railway lines. Every railroad company should be required to do the work done by these express companies. It would be largely in the railroad companies' interest, as well as the general public.

The managers of the business expect to have the Minneapolis linen factory running in March. It will open with 100 hands employed, most of whom will be women. Only the coarser fabrics will be made at first but as soon as flax raisers learn to produce and prepare fiber properly the finer goods will be manufactured. The commercial Bulletin quotes Mr. Chute, who is secretary of the company, as saying that Minnesota and the Dakotas had under flax the past year 800,000 acres as compared with only 120,000 acres in Ireland, the great linen country. Heretofore flax in these states has been raised only for the seed, the straw being put to no use whatever. Flax growing being profitable under such a condition, and it undoubtedly was, what will it become after linen, binding twine and other industries that will require the straw and are now just coming into existence become full-fledged.—Marshall County Leader.

The movement to secure immigration the work of which is embodied locally in the Immigration Bureau of the Red River Valley in Minnesota, is not confined to local efforts. Nearly all parts of the state are taking steps leading to the same end. The St. Paul Chamber of Commerce has actively recognized the importance of the movement and propose to help it along. It urges the establishment of a state bureau of immigration and a reasonable appropriation by the state to defray the expenses of placing our attractions in a proper way before the world. Northern Minnesota and especially the western part of Northern Minnesota will naturally receive the greatest attention from immigrants, and is most deeply interested in the success of the efforts. Our representatives in the legislature have a duty in this direction to perform and we hope to see them alert to its importance and in discharging it.—Leader.

The salaries allowed Indian Judges by the general government would not prove much of an inducement to whites. These Indian Judges are located at all the principal agencies and have jurisdiction in ordinary cases in which the Indians are parties and their pay in the past has been three dollars and five dollars per month. For the current year there will be ninety eight of these Judges at twenty six agencies of whom fifty five will receive ten dollars a month each, [illegible] dollars, twenty three five dollars, and the remainder three dollars per month. One of these courts decided seventy-six cases the present year. The judges in most cases are among the older men of the tribe; most of them speak some english while a few are well educated. Their decisions are subject to review by the agent but it is said that it is seldom they are reversed, and it is also claimed their decisions are more acceptable to the Indians from being rendered by Judges of their own tribe.—St. Paul News.

Once more we receive the news of a bloody encounter with the Sioux Indians on the frontiers and this time at a place known as Wounded Knee Creek near Pine Ridge agency in South Dakota. This is but a repitition of many such events which have heretofore occurred and gone into the pages of our history. The cause which led to this last encounter with the Indians seems to have been the dissatisfaction of the Pine Ridge Indians and the defiant spirit of Sitting Bull's band. Some few weeks ago the Indian Police attempted to arrest Sitting Bull when a fight ensued between some of his followers and the police in which Sitting Bull and his young son were killed. At the time of this occurance it was hoped that this would put a stop to further hostilities, but time has shown that these hopes were groundless. On the 30th of Dec last when Big Foot's band was surrounded Major Whitsides ordered that the Indians should deliver up their arms, but very few obeyed the order and then a detachment of troops on foot entered their teepes to search for arms. Suddenly the reds opened fire on the troops with terribly fatal results and from twenty-five to thirty soldiers were killed and wounded. The soldiers at once returned fire with terrible effect and as the Indians retreated two Hotchkiss guns opened fire upon them with telling effect. Between 80 and 90 Indians were killed in this engagement. This band of Indians known as Sitting Bull's followers are the worst and most most untamable that ever infected the plains and the general desire of the people of the Northwest is that they should be exterminated.

Grand Forks Herald: As a matter of fact, the tariff of the United States is one of the most moderate in the world, says the Sioux City Journal. Its duties are incomparable lower than those of any other nation in the new world and and much lower than those of the old world. Take the tariff of Russia, Germany and France, for example, and compare them with the existing tariff law in this country, and the last will be found a monument of liberality. The contrary has been asserted so vehemently and so persistingly for partizan purposes that many have been misled to believe that the American tariff is a monstrous anomaly, yet nothing could be further from the truth. Take the Mexican tariff, for example. Nearly all its levies are arbitrarily made by the pound, and the results are almost incredible incongruous and burthensome It is very difficult to reduce its figures to a basis for comparison with duties of the United States tariff. Nor is it necessary since the mere statement of the former is sufficiently suggested. The Mexican duty on dressed lumber is 16 cents a pound. An ordinary door weighs from fifty to seventy-five pounds, and at the latter figure the frontier duty would be $11.25 The duty on common bar iron is 5 cents a pound. The duty on a keg of nails is $10, the same costing $16.50, in the City of Mexico The duty on glass is 25 cents a pound, on white lead 5 cents a pound, on stoneware 14 cents a pound, etc. But there are other duties besides the frontier duties—for example, a city duty which must be paid before goods can be entered into the town. A builder a few weeks ago imported forty carloads of doors, sash and blinds, into Mexico and the frontier duty was $60,000 or $1,200 a car. The Mexican duties, of which the above illustrations are among the least onerous, are as a rule far below those of many of the other Spanish-American countries.

It can be seen that Mr. Blaine's policy of reciprocity if it be put in practice, would give the United States an immense advantage over British and German trade, the duties standing against them. And as the duties of the United States tariff, which are to be swapped off, are so moderate, the rescinding of the same would have far less effect on the revenues of this country. The effect would merely be the direct payment with the farm and manufactured products of this country of the vast imports from the Spanish-American countries. But it is an important fact, in many aspects, that the United States have a tariffs which in comparison with the tariffs of other, countrys is very liberal and, in the long run, favorable to international trade.

The Waiter Stood Aghast.

A good story, in which two distinguished Louisianians and a no less distinguished Georgian figured somewhat conspicuously in a restaurant in Washington, D. C., was related to a newspaper man. The Louisianians were Hon. Thomas J. Semmes and Mr. James Legendre, of this city, and the Georgian was Hon. Ben Hill, son of the late senator, and himself a prominent Georgia politician. The party were en route to New York city to attend the centennial of the supreme court of the United States.

On the arrival of the train at Washington, D. C., the usual time for breakfast was announced, and Messrs. Semmes and party, taking advantage of the opportunity thus offered, hastened to the nearest restaurant. Each ordered as his taste and inclination prompted, and settled his own account. Messrs. Semmes and Hill attacked the bill of fare to the extent of $1, and Mr. Legendre contented himself with a seventy-five cent meal.

Breakfast ended, the three gentlemen each handed the waiter a silver dollar—the exact amount of money due by Messrs. Semmes and Hill. Twenty-five cents were due Legendre, however, and this amount the waiter returned to him on his tray. Mr. Legendre had enjoyed his breakfast, and being in good humor, replaced the quarter on the tray to "tip" the waiter.

The waiter, placing the money in a glass on his tray, passed it to Mr. Semmes as a gentle reminder of what was expected of him. Mr. Semmes was, however, busily conversing with his friend, Mr. Hill, at the time, and in an absent minded sort of way quietly appropriated the tip money under the impression, no doubt, that it was his change. The waiter was dumfounded, and Mr. Legendre, somewhat embarrassed, beckoned to him and dropped an additional quarter on the tray to soothe his feelings. Then the waiter passed to Mr. Hill with the hope that he, at least, had "caught on," and that Mr. Semmes might finally be brought to a knowledge of his mistake. But he again made a serious error. Mr. Hill did it with the tip money just as Mr. Semmes had done in the first instance and the conversation proceeded in the ordinary way.

Mr. Legendre was already out fifty cents in the scheme, and was consequently not further inclined in that direction, and before the waiter could recover sufficiently to explain the mistake the three strangers left the restaurant and were on their way to New York.—New Orleans Times Democrat.

Trimming Off Large Ears.

Modern surgery has not hesitated to cut a new nose out of the cheek, to loop up a drooping eyelid, or engraft the skin of one person upon another, but it has not until now given a man's ears a setback. To Dr. William W. Keen, of Jefferson college, came a brother physician to repair a job that had been badly done by nature's 'prentice hand, so to speak. The young man, for he was only 19, was all ears: that is to say, his ears were not only abnormally large, but they flapped in a painfully absurd manner.

The surgeon proceeded to lay bare the cartilage by removing the skin from the posterior surface of the auricle, and then excised a long, narrow piece of the cartilage—V shaped in cross-sections, as if he had run a miniature plow over the ridge on the back of the ear. Great care was taken not to cut clear through and thus cause a scar on the anterior surface. The edges of the cartilage were then drawn together by catgut stitches, in addition to those in the skin. This was done while the young man was etherized. He went to sleep with long ears, and he awoke with short ears—very sore ones, and so intricately fastened into position that for some nights he had to sleep flat on his back. But when the wound had healed and the plasters were removed he found himself possessed of symmetrical and fair sized ears.—Philadelphia Letter.

Wanted to Price Tickets.

There was a line ten feet long at the ticket window in the Hudson River railroad waiting room and the policeman on duty was busy reminding the slower travelers to be brisk with their change, when a tall, thin, elderly woman, with spectacles and with a complexion like a halibut, peered in at the ticket clerk and said:

"What do you ask for a ticket to Poughkeepsie?"

"One dollar forty seven."

"Is that the lowest price?"

"Only one rate."

"Eliza Smith went up last month and only paid one dollar and thirty cents."

"There's been no change, madam. Do you want a ticket?"

"Would I save anything if I went to Peekskill, got off and bought another ticket there?"

"Costs more. Hurry, madam, there are others waiting."

"Well, I only wanted to price tickets. I never knowed Eliza Smith to tell the truth before and I just wanted to be sure that she hadn't broke no record."—New York Tribune.

A New Way of Booming.

Many unique devices have been resorted to for booming embryo towns, but that employed by the real estate pushers of a fledgling on Puget sound takes the lead. Two professional wrestlers were matched and the result of the contest telegraphed throughout the coast. It was not stated whether the contest was held under a big fir tree or on the tide flats.—Exchange.

Mr. John Keowan, the worthy post master at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other." The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of all symptoms of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular. For sale by Justus L. Johnson.

The Same Old Game.

"I was reading in a car once on my way from Boston to New York," said a prominent citizen to a New York Tribune man, "when some one behind me slapped me vigorously on the shoulder, saying: 'Hello, Charley, old man.'

" 'My name isn't Charley,' I said, sweetly.

" 'Oh, I beg your pardon,' said the man who had slapped me so generously. 'I thought you were a friend whom I often meet on the road. I am a commercial traveler—drummers, we call ourselves.' Then he went to another seat. Presently he came back.

" 'Is this seat engaged?' he asked.

" 'Oh, no,' I answered, pleasantly.

" 'I hope you will excuse me for my rudeness,' he said. 'I felt very much like a fool when I saw what I had done.

"He chatted entertainingly for a while, and seemed a very decent fellow. Then he yawned, and I looked at him.

" 'My uncle died the other day,' said he.

" 'Did he?'

" 'He didn't treat his nephew very generously.'

" 'H-m-m.'

" 'He was pretty well off, was my uncle, and he left none of his money to me.'

"He yawned.

" 'Nothing except a ring. I don't care for rings myself, but he always wore the diamond—prized it highly. It is said to be worth $200 or $300. I never wore a ring in my life.'

" 'Have you got the ring with you?' I asked.

" 'Oh, yes, I have it in my pocket.'

" 'How much is it worth?'

" 'It isn't worth much to me, because I have no use for it.'

" 'What would you take for it?'

" 'Oh, anything—$30, say.'

" 'I couldn't afford to give that much for a ring.

" 'Well, say $25.'

" 'That is a little more than I could afford.'

"The drummer turned the stone in his hand and looked at it. In the seat behind us was a man who I knew was watching and listening. He had leaned forward until his head was over the back of our seat. I threw my head back against the cushion, and tilted my hat over my eyes, the drummer was still meditating over the ring.

" 'See here, Jimmy,' I said, 'I got six months once for the same game; see?'

"The man behind me burst into a roar of laughter.

" 'By Jove,' said he, 'I thought you were booked.' The 'drummer' was scurrying down the aisle, making for another car.

Drop a Nickel and Get a Wash.

From the New York Sun.

You don't exactly drop a nickel in the slot, but you see in front of you at the wash basin a nickel-plated cylinder about eight inches high and an inch and a half in diameter, rising above the basin upright from the outer end of an arm which is attached to the upper end of the pipe from which the water faucet projects. At the lower end of the cylinder you see a little handle. On the front of the cylinder is a plate which says: "Soap. Wet your hands and pull the handle." With one hand you pull; the other you hold under the cylinder and a little dash of white powder falls upon it. As you proceed to wash your hands you find that it is soap powder, and if you were to talk with the inventor he would doubtless tell you that in hotels and other public washrooms this is cheaper and cleaner than the cake of soap that goes swimming.

FARMERS' ALLIANCE

Nearly a Thousand Members Assemble in State Convention at St. Paul.

Ignatius Donnelly, President—Miss McDonald State Lecturer—the Platform.

The great convention of the Farmers' Alliance met in St. Paul, and contrary to expectation there was no great fight between the Donnelly and Anti-Donnelly factors, and Mr. Donnelly was promptly elected President by the surprising vote of 592 for Donnelly, 105 for Halvorsen, 6 for Hall and 3 for Owen. Most of the first day was spent in organizing the convention, an unwieldy committee on credentials, causing a long delay, but the time was occupied with the delivery of speeches by Mr. Donnelly, by Mr. Ashley of Iowa, lecturer of the National Farmers' Alliance; H. L. Loucks of South Dakota, president of the Alliance of that state and late candidate for governor on the independent ticket; Mr. Donnelly and Miss Eva McDonald. Mr. Ashley detailed at length the difference between the National Farmers' Alliance, which is distinctively the Northern organization, and the National Farmers' Alliance and industrial union. The Southern or secret order, which recently held its convention at Ocala, and adopted the famous "subtreasury platform." An attempt had been made at St. Louis to unite the two, but an organic union at that time was deemed inadvisable and impossible owing to inherent differences in the specific ends sought to be reached by each, although their ultimate aim, the emancipation of the industrial and producing classes, was identical.

THE REPRESENTATIVES.

The committee on credentials finally made a report, showing 679 delegates entitled to seats among the counties as follows:

EX-PRESIDENT HALL'S REPORT.

At the second day's session Ex-President Hall introduced and read his annual report, as follows:

Mr. Hall reviewed the binding twine trouble and requested the coming legislature to make a thorough investigation of the methods of the board of managers of the Stillwater prison. He recommended that the convention select a legislative committee whose duty it shall be to secure the passage of a law that shall put four systems of American machinery to manufacture twine at the St. Cloud reformatory, during next season.

The inspection of grain at Duluth was touched upon. Farmers and shippers, he contended, were being plundered at that point. He recommended the erection by the state of public warehouses, where the producer may store his grain unmixed, in a special bin at actual cost, at Duluth and at the agricultural fair grounds.

Referring to the troubles in the Alliance during the late convention, Mr. Hall said:

"I have no hesitancy in saying that had it not been for the attacks made on the Alliance candidates by the Great West, S. M. Owen would be the next governor. I have no apologies to make for the Alliance campaign committee. To say the least they are the peers of the men who slandered and defamed them. I am informed that there is nearly $1,000 shortage. The Farmers' Alliance should take immediate action to wipe out the debt."

The report went to the committee on resolutions.

THE ALLIANCE FINANCES.

Gen. J. H. Baker then made his first public appearance on the scene of action to move the adoption of a resolution of thanks to President Hall, which went through with a cheer by a unanimous rising vote. Mr. Donnelly then wanted to put in his advice, but at the suggestion of John Diamond he gave way to the report of the treasurer, H. P. Bjorge, one of the representatives-elect from Otter Tail county, which showed a balance of $10,785. A. L. Stromberg, who wears John Lathrop's shoes with dignity and grace, also presented a report of the financial transactions of his office since Sept. 10. There was a disposition to ask John Lathrop for an accounting, but it was headed off by a report from H. V. Poore, chairman of the finance committee. This report reviewed the entire difficulty between Mr. Lathrop and members of the executive committee, which has already been aired in the public press.

EVA MCDONALD WINS.

Nominations were received for state lecturer. There were a host of aspirants—Gen. Baker, Dr. Fish, J. O. Barrett, Carrington Phelps, G. W. Muller, Miss Eva McDonald, J. M. Bowler, James Ball. The question was raised as to whether Miss McDonald was a practical farmer. President Donnelly ruled that she and Fish were both eligible. It was decided to have the first ballot informal, and the call of counties began. The vote was badly scattered, resulting as follows: J. H. Baker, 130; Ball, 4; Poore, 2; O. H. Page, 6; Dr. Fish, 148; J. O. Barrett, 86; Phelps, 21; Eva McDonald 227; J. M. Bowler, 15. A motion to make Miss McDonald's election unanimous was headed off by Carrington Phelps, who withdrew in favor of Gen. Baker. Dr. Fish paid a high tribute to Miss McDonald, but felt convinced that she was not eligible, and also withdrew in favor of Mr. Baker.

Miss McDonald's adherents saw a good chance for a nice play and rushed that lady to the platform, where she made a little talk for herself and said she did not propose to retire from the fight, although she had not been a candidate of her own volition. A formal vote was ordered. The natural gallantry of the tillers of the soil carried them away and it all went the lady's way. She won by a vote of 436 to 209. Mr Donnelly introduced her as another illustration of the fact that "the hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that moves the world." She acknowledged she had wanted the office and was glad she got it, and would do the best she could to fill it.

THE PLATFORM.

Gen. Baker presented the declaration of principles, over which the committee had studied all night. It is a lengthy document and reads as follows:

The Farmer's Alliance o' the State of Minnesota in convention asembled, hereby ordain and establish the following declaration of principles.

First.—We demand that the "war tariff," which has too long survived the object of its creation, shall be radically revised, giving very material reductions in the necessaries of life and placing raw material on the free list to the end that we may compete with the world for a market, and that such luxuries as whisky and tobacco shall in no manner be relieved from internal taxation till the high protection tariff has been wholly divested of its extortions, and we especially denounce the McKinley bill as the crowning infamy of protection.

Second.—We demand government control of railways, both by state and nation, to the end that all discriminations shall cease; that reasonable rates shall be established; that watered stock shall not receive the reward of honest capital; that the pooling of rates is such an element of monopoly as should be absolutely prohibited; that our legislature shall enact a freight rate law which shall fix rates no higher than those now in force in Iowa, and the reduction of railroad passenger rates to two cents per mile. We anticipate the ultimate ownership of railroads by the government as the solution of this question.

Third.—As producers we demand free and open markets for our grain, and that the railways shall receive and ship grain as they receive and ship other commodities for the owner to its destination. That the grading of wheat at country stations be abolished, and grain be bought and sold upon its merits; that the right to establish side tracks to grain warehouses and the equal use of cars shall in no manner be abridged.

Fourth.—We demand the maintenance of the present freedom of traffic law, the present grain laws and the law for the distribution of cars and the erection by the state of public warehouses where the producer shall store his grain unmixed in special bins at actual cost, at Duluth and the agricultural fair grounds, and we demand that the legislature shall thoroughly investigate the method of handling, inspecting and weighing grain under existing rules. We demand a law forbidding any railroad corporation from issuing any mortgage bonds or stock until an itemized account of the cash, labor or property duly sworn to, has been presented to some officer of the state for examination, and if found to be a true account of the money, labor property received, to register and certify to the same as issued in pursuance of law and as constituting a part of the capital stock of such corporation.

Fifth.—Our public lands shall be reserved in small quantities without cost to actual settlers only, and we favor laws for the protection of our forests. Alien ownership of land should be prohibited, and we demand the forfeiture and restoration to the public domain of all unearned land grants.

Sixth.—The present high rate of interest is unjust; it should be reduced to 7 per cent. per annum, with stringent penalties to prevent money loaners from exacting a higher rate.

Seventh.—We favor an increase in the volume of money equal to the requirements of increasing trade and business. We demand the free coinage of silver, and condemn the silver bill as a fraud upon the people.

Eighth.—All public offices which affect the interests of the people should be made electoral; therefore we hold that United States senators and railway commissioners should be elected by popular vote, and also the superintendent of public instruction.

We ask the next legislature to establish the Australian system of voting for the whole state, and that election day be made a legal holiday.

Tenth.—We demand the prohibition of the employment of children under fifteen years in the mills, shops, factories and workshops of the country, and we also favor the adoption of the factory and mine inspecting law and the employer's liability act, and we favor the publication o. free text books.

Eleventh.—We favor the settlement of all strikes by arbitration, and equal pay for equal work, irrespective of sex, also for shorter hours of labor in factories, stores and public works, and we also favor a lien law that will give labor a first lien on its products.

Twelfth.—We are opposed to the giving away of valuable franchises by the state and municipalities.

Thirteenth.—That we hold that mortgage indebtedness should be deducted from the tax on reality whether such mortgage is held at home or abroad, and we ask such laws as will make the hidden property pay equal taxes with the visible property.

Fourteenth.—We believe in a graded income tax for corporations and individuals to the end that wealth shall be compelled to contribute its share to the various burdens of taxation.

Fifteenth.—That the salaries of all our public officers, state and county, should be reduced to correspond with the reduced income of the producers and working people.

Sixteenth.—That in obedience to a reasonable demand we request the coming legislature to submit the question of constitutional prohibition to a vote of the people.

Seventeenth.—That we renew to the soldiers whose valor saved the nation the expression of our profoundest gratitude, and we declare that it is the sense of the American people that the men who fought for the Union shall receive liberal pensions, and that the same generous spirit should be extended to the widows and orphans of the heroes of the war.

Eighteenth.—That while we still believe that the convict labor of the state could, if honestly directed, furnish cheap binding twine to the farmers of Minnesota, yet, as it appears that it is the manifest purpose of the present management of the penitentiary to thwart that just desire, we demand of the present legislature a thorough investigation of that institution and of the recent purchase of a system of twine machinery, and if necessary for its radical reformation, and the removal of the penitentiary from its present location.

Nineteenth.—We demand the passage of the Conger lard bill now before the United States senate and such further legislation as may be necessary to control the traffic in adulterated food products.

Twentieth—That auction gambling on boards of trade should be abolished, and we ask the state and congress to pass such laws as to make all such transactions a criminal offense.

Twenty-first.—We denounce the force bill now pending in congress as a dangerous and revolutionary measure, devised for partisan purposes. It will open the wounds of the war and retard the happy day of regeneration and peace, and we hold that one of the grandest aims of the Alliance is the restoration of fraternal feeling and true concord to the people of the republic.

Twenty-second—That the governmental methods of dealing with the Indians is illogical, imbecile and expensive. The entire management in all its details should be promptly transferred to the war department, and our bold pioneers saved from perpetual menace of life and property, to which American citizens should be no longer exposed.

Twenty-third.—That we demand that the government foreclose its lien on the Union Pacific railroad and take possession, and operate the same in the interests of the people of the United States, and we do not approve the report of Senator Davis, of this state, on that question.

Twenty-fourth.—That the Alliance deems it unwise and impolitic to establish an organ, but regards with favor and will encourage with its support all papers which espouse its cause and defend its principles.

Twenty-fifth.—That we invite all industrial organizations of kindred principles with our own to federate with the Farmers' Alliance each maintaining its seperate and distinct identity, with a view to confederating them into one grand union.

After the resolutions, the constitution, and many other things were debated the convention adjourned.

Careful Creditors.

"Perhaps," said a business man to a New York Tribune reporter, "there are a good many of us who believe that all the world has absolute confidence in our honesty; but there are so many schemes creditors have for keeping an eye on debtors that the honest men are watched as carefully as the dishonest ones. When I went to Europe last summer I owed my my tailor two or three hundred dollars, I suppose.

"When I returned I went around to him to order my fall clothes."

" 'How do you do, Mr. L——?' said he. 'How did you enjoy your trip to Europe?'

"Now I had gone away quietly and had returned no less quietly. Not a dozen of my friends knew when I started or I got back.

" 'Europe!' I said. 'What do you mean?' and I looked at him banteringly.

" 'Why,' said he. 'I mean your last trip. I see that you returned only last week.

" 'Where did you see it? I asked.

"He stopped for a moment and looked embarrassed.

" 'Come, now,' I said, 'how did you know I had gone to Europe or that I had returned?"

" 'To tell you the truth, Mr. L——,' he answered, 'we know about every movement of those who owe us money. We receive weekly reports from an agency; and you will find that many other business houses know as much about their customers."

The Fakir's Victim.

A three shell fakir had just begun operations on the outskirts of a Southern village when an old fellow wearing a green vest and a long jeans coat came along, who, after looking for a while at the manipulation of the shells, said:

"You've got some sort of a tricke I reckon."

"Oh, not very much of a trick. Sort of a game that's as fair for on, as it is for the other.

"No," replied the fakir, continuing to work the shells, "I don't think so. I have lost considerable money at it in my time."

"Why don't you do something else, then?"

"Truth is I have been at this business so long that I don't know how to make a living any other way."

"Raised to it, I reckon."

"Yes, my father done the same thing."

"And he lost a good deal of money, too, I reckon."

"Got broke up and had to quit the business."

"And I reckon you 'low to foller in his footsteps."

"Not if I can help it; still, I've got to take my chances."

"I reckon you air right about that. Say, how do the thing work?"

"I'll show you: You see I put this pea down here and cover it with a shell."

"That's easy enough done," said the old fellow, wiping his tobacco-stained mouth on the tail of his coat.

"Oh, yes, putting it there is easy enough, but the thing is to guess which shell it is under."

"Wall, but I don't have to guess when I seed which one you put it under."

"Well, you are entitled to your opinion, but I'll bet you five dollars you can't guess which shell the pea is under."

"I' bleve I'll go you once for luck. It's under that one right thar."

The fakir lifted up the shell indicated and there was the pea.

"Yes, sir you got me that time. Suppose we try it again. Now I'll bet you ten you can't tell which one it's under"

"Up with yo' money. I'm yo' man."

The money was put up. Under this one," said the old fellow.

"Well, you happened to lose that time," said the fakir, taking up the shell and then taking the money. "Want to try it again?"

No, I believe not," the old fellow replied, sauntering away. Shortly afterwards he was stopped by an acquaintance, who said: "Jerry thought you had more sense than that."

"Than what?" he asked in surprise.

"Why, I didn't think you would let a man come along and beat you out of your money that easily."

"Has anybody beat me outen any money?"

"Why, of course. That fellow back there beat you out of five dollars."

"That so? Now let me calculate a little. I bet him five the first time and won; and the second time I bet ten and lost."

"Yes, which means that he beat you out of five."

"It do look a little that way, but let me sorter explain. I knowed that he wanted to draw me on and that I could git the fust bet, and I did; but the next time I put up a counterfeit ten. He has mixed it up with his other money and now couldn't tell what he got it. My son is a constable, you know, and after a while he will pull the feller for havin' counterfeit money and then we will run him in and fine him and make a few dollars by the operation. Times air so hard now that it do push a honest man might'ly and when I manage to pick up a five now and then I consider that I have done putty well."

Victim of a Vampire.

Mrs. Cornelius Rainwater, of Savannah, Ga., received recently a letter from her brother, James Uhl, who is engaged in the wholesale coffee business in Calabozo, Venezuela, in which epistle he gave an account of the singular death of his daughter last September. The young lady, who had just entered her 17th year had been a somnambulist since childhood, and it was supposed that it was while in one of her frequent trances that she left the house and wandered several miles in the country. She was missed, and, on being searched for, was at last found near the roadside dead, with a large vampire clinging to her throat.

The bat at the approach of the searchers rose from the body of its victim and attempted to fly off, but was so gorged with blood as to be unable to make its escape, and was shot by one of the party. The placidity of the young lady's countenance showed that her death had been a painless one, and it was probable that it was not until she sank down, still fast asleep, that the vampire fastened upon her. A small wound, resembling the puncture of a large needle, just over the jugular vein, marked where the small white teeth had been liberated the blood which it had then sucked, all the while soothing its victim to deeper sleep by a gentle lulling movement of its outspread wings, which is the habit of these creatures. The one which killed Miss Uhl was unusually large, measuring three feet and some inches from the tip of one wing to that of the other, and while its weight would have naturally been ten or twelve pounds, it was so engorged that it was found to weigh something over twenty.—From the Chicago Times.

The Moon-Weather Problem.

From tables made by the use of synoptic charts, eliminating local disturbances, Dr. G. Meyer believes he has accomplished what other investigators have sought to do without success—shown an influence of the moon on the weather. The height of the barometer, in months of September to January, is lowered at the time of full moon and raised during the first quarter. No effect can be traced for other months.

Effect of Inventions on Labor.

An illustration of the manner in which changes in style and the introducton of new inventions injure whole classes of people, sometimes by throwing them out of employment, is the fashion of wearing russet shoes in summer, which takes away the employment of the boot blacks, and kills the demand for polish blacking. The owners of the shoes save thirty-five cents per week, and the boys have to seek other employment. Every introduction of new machinery produces similar results. Electricity, as a motive power, has bankrupted hundreds whose plants are only adapted to making steam engines, and will do away with the use of thousands of horses on street car lines, and many think the day not far off when all lines of railroad will be operated by electric power, with storage batteries. Farm machinery has lessened the number of farm hands needed, and further inventions will no doubt reduce the number still further, and in other directions and employments machinery is doubtless destined to supplant hand labor to a much larger degree. In the process of readjustment, thousands suffer loss, and so rapidly do changes occur that the number affected is constantly increasing, though on the rule of the greatest good to the greatest number these changes are beneficient and must go on.

The above is a simple illustration of the fact that the best seeds will rapidly degenerate under unfavorable conditions. The wise will take heed, therefore, and buy their seeds of D. M. Rheumatism

Is of two kinds, acute and chronic. The former is accompanied by high fever, and in the swollen joints there is intense pain, which often suddenly changes from one part of the body to another. Chronic rheumatism is without fever and not so severe, but more continuous, and liable to come on at every storm or after slight exposure. Rheumatism is known to be a disease of the blood and Hood's Sarsaparilla has had great success in curing it. This medicine possesses qualities which neutralize acidity, and purify, enrich and vitalize the blood.

When Bagpipes Had No Charms.

An amusing episode recorded of the Peninsular war seems to prove that even the charms of our beautiful national bagpipes fail to soothe these savage beasts! It happened that, while one of the Highland regiments was marching across a desolate part of Spain, one of the pipers for some inexplicable reason found himself separated from his comrades. Halting on a lonely plain, he sat down to eat his breakfast, when, to his horror, he saw wolves approaching. When they came very near he flung them all the food he had with him, fully conscious, however, that this meagre meal would not stay their advance for many seconds. With the calmness of desperation he then said: "As ye've had the meat ye'll hae the music, too," and thereupon he proceeded to "blow up his chanter." No sooner did his unwelcome guests hear the first "skirl" of the pipes than they turned in wild terror and fled as fast as their long legs would carry them. "De'il hae ye!" said the piper; "had I thocht ye were so fond o' the music ye wad hae gotten it afore meat, instead o' after!" Then hungrily he went his way, not forgetting from time to time to blow a bla... so wild and shrill as might effectually scare any prowling foes.—Temple Bar.

No Sense of Humor.

There are various ways of coming to grief, when one attempts telling another's stories.

"Annie, tell that anecdote Cousin Oliver told the other night, please," said a young lady to her sister while they were making a call. When Annie had complied, her sister announced sympathetically, to the company. "You can imagine how funny it was because Oliver tells a story so well!"

Another unfortunate relator of a borrowed tale who ventured to ask an intimate friend, "Why don't you wear a wig?"

"I'd rather dye," was the answer, and though the punn was an old one it happened to be a new one to the hearer, and greatly amused him—not so much that he did not speedily forget the point.

That night, on returning home, he said to his wife, "Richardson said an awfully good thing this afternoon. I asked him why he didn't wear a wig, and he said he'd rather commit suicide than do such a thing. Why don't you laugh? But then, women haven't any sense of humor to speak of!"

END OF HOSTILITIES.

Nothing But an Accident Can Now Prevent the Ending of the War.

All the Indians From the Bad Lands Now Close to Pine Ridge.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Jan. 13.—Gen. Miles has written a letter to Brig. Gen. W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill), and Brig. Gen. Colby, both of the Nebraska National guard, stating that all the hostiles are within a mile and a half of the agency, and nothing but an accident can prevent the re-establishment of peace.

Gen. Miles also says that he feels the state troops may now be withdrawn with safety, and thanks them for the confidence they have afforded the people in their frontier homes.

ALL DANGER PAST.

PIERRE, S. D., Special Telegram, Jan. 12.—Gov. Mellette to-night received the following dispatch from Gen. Miles at Pine Ridge:

"Indians have moved up White Clay creek and camped within sight of our troops and not two miles distant. Everything indicates that the military will have control of the entire body. Nothing but a mistake or accident can prevent a most desirable result. They are, however, very excitable and wild and it will take much time to get them under full control and restore confidence and permenent peace. As far as I can see the danger to settlers is passed."

NEARING PINE RIDGE.

The Main Body of the Hostiles Move Closer to the Agency.

PINE RIDGE, S. D., Jan. 13.—During the morning a number of bucks and squaws from the hostile camp arrived on horseback and in wagons, in all stages of dilapidation. The arrivals, however, were not as numerous as had been expected, the main body of Indians still remaining near the mission. As the refugees or visitors reached the outposts they were derived of their arms by the guards. The wily hostiles, however, displayed only a few weapons, and these were later returned them when the owners went back to the hostile camp. It is not at all improbable that many of the bucks had arms concealed about their persons.

Shortly before noon Frank Gourard, who had been to the hostile camp, arrived and announced as he flew by that the Indians were not coming in. Up to midday the chiefs mentioned in these dispatches of last night, who were expected to hold a big talk with Gen. Miles, had not made their appearance, and it began to look as if Gourard's report was correct, but shortly after noon it was discovered that the hostiles had made a rapid advance, and about 1,000 of them have arrived to within 1,000 yards of the pickets outside the agency.

Gen. Miles and staff went to the picket lines and after a short inspection of the bands returned to the agency for the time being. The Indians will not be permitted to enter the agency and communication with them from within has been prohibited. When they do come in the Ogallala Sioux will be stationed near Red Cloud's house west of the agency, while the Brules will be placed on the east. Gen. Miles has had a short talk with American Horse and his band.

THE HOSTILES' CAMP.

It Is in a Small Valley and Comprises Three Hundred Tepees.

PINE RIDGE, S. D., Jan. 13.—Shortly after the announcement that the hostiles had gone into camp a short distance beyond the picket line this afternoon the associated press representative was given permission to visit the breastworks from which a view of the hostile camp could be obtained.

The works are about three-quarters of a mile north of the agency. They occupy several prominent bluffs and command the valley, which is nearly two miles wide and about as many miles in length. They are guarded by a 3.2-inch Hotchkiss gun, which has a range of four miles. This belongs to Capt. Capron, of the First artillery. There are also Companies B and H of the First infantry. Both batteries and the infantry are under command of Capt. Dougherty. At the northern extremity of the valley, beyond White Clay creek and at the base of a semi-circular, pine-covered bluff, the hostiles have tented shelter. Their village comprises about 300 tepees, with about eight hundred Indians, who seem to be well supplied with ponies. All of the village, however, is not visible, even under the glass, because a number of tepees, it is suspected, are concealed in the draws which lead out of the valley and in the direction of the mission.

The view is picturesque and a site from which the Indians might easily retire were they not followed closely by Gen. Brooke and his command. The latter is a few miles north of the mission and less than five miles in the rear of the hostiles.

What is to be done with the Indians is a question which has not yet been answered. The disposition seems to be to let them rest in peace, and for that reason all communications with them, even by newspaper men, is being rigorously prevented. To-morrow they promise to send a delegation of chiefs to talk with Gen. Miles. The result of this conference cannot be divined. It has been said that some of them will insist upon going to Washington to lay their grevances before the Great Father, and the opinion prevails that the suggestion will be respected, notwithstanding that Gen. Miles has the settlement of the case in his own hands.

Arms for North Dakota.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Jan. 13.—Senator Casey has been busy at the war department to-day looking after the requests made by Gov. Burke. The governor telegraphed him to use his influence to hasten the 1,000 stands of arms, ammuniton and a gatling gun. The senator says the guns have been shipped from Philadelphia and the ammunition from Rock Island, and will arrive in North Dakota with as little delay as possible. The Gatling gun was ordered shipped to-day.

Another Draw.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—The fifteenth championship chess game between Steinitz and Gunsberg resulted to-day in a draw after thirty-nine moves.

A School House Burned.

ASHLAND, Wis., Special Telegram, Jan. 13.—A new school house in the western part of the city was totally destroyed by fire to-night. The building had just been completed and cost $2,500; insurance, $1,800. It will be rebuilt at once.

Four Men Meet Death.

VICTORIA, B. C., Special Telegram, Jan 13.—A terrible accident occurred here to-day. While engaged unloading salmon from the steamer Danube the wharf collapsed under the heavy freight and four men were killed and several others injured.

She directs that her body should be cremated after a thorough test by electricity. They are to deposit $100,000 with the United States Trust company and pay her mother, A. M. Abbott, $400 a month. Mrs. Wetherell, mother of her late husband, receives $10,000.

Other bequests were: $25,000 each to her brothers Leon H., George H. and Frederick Abbott; $25,000 to her sister, Mrs. Lizzie Abbott Clark; $5,000 each to the children of Leon H. and George H. Abbott, the children of Mrs. Ella Clark, the deceased sister of her late husband, and the children of M. L. Wetherell. Vas Houghton receives $10,000; D. A. Consadine, the testatrix's secretary, $5,000. The sum of $5,000 is given to each of eight Congregational churches at various points East, and the same sum to each Mrs. S. V. White of Brooklyn and her friend, Mrs. Sarah Bird. All of Miss Abbott's music, operatic scores and private papers are bequethed to Alice Cafferty of Jersey City who also receives $5,000. Her diamonds and jewelry are given to the executors with the direction that they may be sold and the proceeds to form a part of the estate. The will contains a forfeiture clause against contestants.

STILL IRELAND'S FRIEND.

Reassuring Words Coming Indirectly From Gladstone.

ST. LOUIS, Jan 13.—During the heat of the Irish elections in December last, Dr. P. S. O'Reilly of this city addressed a letter of encouragement to Hon. W. E. Gladstone, telling him of the feeling of Irish-Americans in this city on the Irish question and promising Mr. Gladstone moral and material support. A reply has been received from Mr. Richard J. Gladstone, dated Hawarden, Dec. 4. Speaking for his father, the young man says:

"It is most satisfactory to know that the opinion of a large majority of leading Irishmen in St. Louis remain true to the policy which nearly five years ago joined Irish Nationalists and English Liberals in a firm and, we trust, a lasting friendship, you recognize that on our part we have been in every particular, large and small, abidingly true to the proposals of 1886.

"In heaven's name why should the divorce court be allowed to compromise the future of Ireland? British Liberals have sacrificed much for Ireland during the past five years. They have refused to give precedence to any British question until Ireland received home rule. All of a sudden Mr. Parnell turns his back upon us, ignores his own speeches and declares that we are guilty of treachery to Ireland. Can anything be more preposterous? He himself, if the charge be true, has been a leading agent in the treachery.

"We who have been true to Ireland and who mean to be true to us in order to carry through a great national settlement of the home rule question. Kilkenny has spoken decisively, and I have no doubt that Ireland will adhere to the solemn pledges which her representatives gave us in 1886."

STRUCK IT RICH.

Immense Body of Iron Ore Found in a Mine Near La Prairie.

LA PRAIRIE, Minn., Special Telegram, Jan. 13.—The wildest excitement exists here on account of the striking of hematite ore in the Buckeye mine on section 30, town 55, range 20, at a depth of fifty feet. The ledge has been drilled four feet, which developes the fact that the ore increases in quality as they go deeper. Gen. J. H. Baker of Mankato, Hon. W. W. Braden of St. Paul and Gen. B. R. Cowen of Cincinnati, stockholders in the mine, are now on the ground and will leave in a few days for the Gogebic range to inspect the latest machinery used in mining. They will purchase such machinery and ship to the mines at once. A force of at least 150 men will accompany the machinery. They will meet General Manager Fisher, of the Duluth & Winnipeg railroad, for the purpose of having a road built from La Prairie to the mine, which is eight miles from here.

There is a divergence of opinion whether this ore is on the Vermillion or Mesabic ranges. The ore now being taken out assays not less than 62 per cent. The North Star and Diamond mines, in the same neighborhood, expect as soon as the water is pumped out of their shafts to strike the same ledge. There seems no question but this part of Itasca county is as rich in iron ore as in the neighborhood of Tower or the Gogebic of Wisconsin.

FEELING UNCLE SAM'S HAND.

Eleven Alabama Citizens Arrested on a Charge of Conspiracy.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 13.—The row at Catherine, Ala., Dec. 30, originating in a business dispute between two merchants, one of whom, William Bruce, was a Republican, and resulting in the arraigning of the blacks and whites against one another and the subsequent forcing of William Bruce, who is a nephew of Judge John Bruce, of the United States circuit court, to leave Catherine and the resignation of the negro postmaster at that place, has followed to-day by the arrest of eleven persons under the charge that they entered into a conspiracy to prevent Granville Bennett from occupying and holding office under the United States.

Caved in as Expected.

ASHLAND, Wis., Special Telegram, Jan. 13.—Another extensive cave-in occurred at the Norrie iron mine Saturday night. The ground just west of the cave-in two weeks ago went down, carrying with it the spur track of the Milwaukee, Lake Shore & Western road running to No. 2 shaft and seven ore cars. The cave-in was expected and the men ordered out of the mine on Friday.

Enveloped in Flames.

ALBERT LEA, Minn., Special Telegram, Jan. 13.—Yesterday as Ida Spoon was filling a gasoline stove while it was yet burning an explosion took place, enveloping her in flames, and before the fire could be extinguished she received very severe injuries, at one time thought to be fatal, but there is now a chance for her recovery.

The Outlook Threatening.

HURON, S. D., Special Telegram, Jan. 13.—Capt. J. H. Hurst, in command at Fort Bennett, was here to-day on his way to Pine Ridge to report to Gen. Miles. He says the outlook is indeed threatening, but believes the placing of the agencies in charge of military officers will have a good effect.

Canadian Indians Quiet.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 13.—Hon. E. Dewney, superintendent general of Indian affairs, to-day received a dispatch from the commissioner of the Northwest mounted police, which states that the Canadian Indians continue to be perfectly quiet. The report of trouble near Delorain is a canard.

Soliciting Aid for South Dakota.

RED WING, Special, Jan. 13.—Cornelius M. Bingham of Westport, Brown county, S. D., is in the city soliciting aid for the settlers in that section. He says they have had a total crop failure for two years in succession now, and many are totally destitute,

THE LEGISLATURE.

Digest of the Proceedings of Both Branches of the Legislature.

Tuesday Jan, 6,

SENATE.

The organization of the senate and house was completed to-day precisely as predicted. President, pro. tem., N. B. Pinkham of Cass; secretary, C. C. Bowsfield of Dickey; assistant, Fred Falley of Richland; engrossing and enrolling clerk, L. D. McGahan of Ward; bill clerk, W. D. McClintock of McHenry; journal clerk, Miss A. Nelson of Pembina; sergeant-at-arms, Arne P. Haugen of Grand Forks; chaplain, Rev. S. E. Ryan of Bismarck; clerk of judiciary committee, D. S. Dodds of Nelson.

Those voting for Pinkham were Brynjolfson, Almen, Cashel, Arnold, Johnson of Traill, Ink, Nelson, Engle, Welser, Enger, Svennungson, Bidlake, Palmer, McCormick, Patch, Bluter, Kuhn, Svensrud, Johnson of Ward.

Those voting for Worst were La Moure, McCormick, Bjorgo, Haggart, Lowry, Bisbee, Fuller, Little, Miller, McGillvray.

HOUSE.

In the house W. B. Allen of Dickey was given the full Republican vote for speaker. George Lutz of Stutsman received the complimentary vote of thirteen Democrats. Other officers are: H. Holleton of Grand Forks, chief clerk; E. P. Sanford of Stutsman, assistant; W. A. Kelly, of Traill, enrolling clerk; H. E. Lavayea of Grand Forks, bill clerk; Gunder Olson of Walsh, sergeant-at-arms; Rev. George Kline of Bismarck, chaplain; Miss Ada Knapp of Grand Forks, stenographer. Speaker Allen has already shown his ability and will make a good presiding officer. He is only thirty years old, but weighs 240 pounds, and has already earned the title of Tom Reed No. 2. Congress

Wednesday, Jan. 7.

SENATE.

Both houses of the legislature met in joint session and first listened to the message of the retiring executive, Gov. Miller. He read for about one hour, and reviewed the work of the various state departments during his short administration.

The senate organization is taken as strongly indicating that all contests will be settled without unseating anyone in that body.

HOUSE.

In the house there are two contests from Burleigh county, and it is more than likely that Philbrick (Rep.) will be seated in the place of Tegen (McKenzie Ind.). Tegen had an apparent majority of thirty, but both sides prove and concede about fifty legal votes in one precinct, These are undoubtedly cast for Tegen and he is in great danger of losing his seat.

Thursday Jan. 8.

SENATE.

Very little business was transacted in either house except the introduction of bills. The Australian ballot reform demands a large share of attention, and already half a dozen bills are introduced to provide for its adoption, Senator Worst introduced the first one with McCormick of Ramsey second was decided to take up the contests and settle them as soon as the elections committee was appointed.

It is becoming more apparent that little business of importance will be transacted until the senatorship contest is over.

HOUSE.

In the house to-day eight bills were introduced. J. N. Brook, of Devil's Lake, introduced a bill providing for the maintenance of the deaf and dumb school at Devil's Lake, and also a bill providing for the Australian system of voting at elections. H. H. Strom introduced House Bill No. 7, to amend the constitution so as to forever prohibit lotteries.

Friday Jan. 9,

SENATE.

The senate held a very short session today. Among the bills introduced was one by Kinter to fix the salaries of county superintendents of schools according to the number of schools in the county, raging from $300 to $1,500. Worst presented a bill to permit the parole of prisoners who have served the minimum sentence for crime. Kinter also proposes to have county funds deposited in the bank making the best bids therefor and giving good security against loss. Lieut. Gov. Allin announced the committee on privileges and elections to be Arnold, Ink, Kinter, Worst, Cashel, Kuhn and Lowrey. The senate then adjourned until Monday afternoon.

HOUSE.

In the house most of the time was consumed in the selection of seats. Kearney got a committee appointed to investigate some Jamestown contractors who had given a bond to the state. Lutz introduced a bill to provide facilities for marketing wool under the direction of the state commissioner of agriculture. Loomis to regulate salaries of county treasurers; Burke to regulate admission of attorney to practice only by the action of the supreme court. Ritchie introduced three bills to amend the 1890 revenue law, one for the transfer of delinquent tax records from county treasurer to auditor and one providing for discharge of chattel mortgages without fees; Gill to permit changing boundaries of school districts on petition of two-thirds of the voters. No committees were announced, and the house adjourned till Monday. It is expected that the committees will then be ready and business can be transacted.

Some people think that the office of oil inspector is a great snap, and there is a host of applicants for the place. Ole Axvig, Democratic member from Cavalier, has introduced a bill to dispense with the office.

Saturday Jan. 10.

No session of the legislature was held today. The speaker and lieutenant governor are held at work on the committees, and those in the senate will likely be announced on Monday. The house has not yet secured a committee on rules, and this will probably delay the committee announcements until Tuesday.

The senate committee on elections is at work on the contest cases, the first one being from Ramsey county. The testimony is very voluminous, and a prominent member of the committee has expressed the opinion that it will take two weeks to decide the cases. There is a good deal of bitterness manifested, in the Ramsey county cases.

Monday Jan. 12.

Related by Judge Payson.

Philadelphia Telegraph: I was talking to Judge Payson the other day about some of the astonishing things of the last election. "A few years ago," he said, "there lived on a place of forty acres adjoining that of mine at Pontiac a man who was known throughout that part of the country as a ne'er-do-well. Though his farm was hardly larger than a truck garden, it was more than he could attend to. He planted his crops in the spring, let the weeds grow up in the summer, and there was nothing to harvest in the fall. In the morning, at noon or at night, whenever there were any loungers about the corner store he was among them. Shiftless and slow at all other things, he was a glib talker. He would tell yarns and talk about the problems of capital and labor, though he took no active interest in either. While he was discussing these problems at the store his wife was stuffing old hats and odd articles of discarded clothing in the windows to keep the cold wind away.

"In due time a mortgage was foreclosed, and his forty acres went at sheriff's sale. Gathering up his family and the few goods and chattels remaining to him he moved on, and was soon forgotten by his former neighbors. He took up his home in Nebraska, and resumed his old habit of lounging about and talking about capital and labor. The present member of congress from the district within whose border he took up his residence was elected by a majority of about 6,000. When the formality of nominating a man to run against him this fall was gone through with there was no one wanted the honor of being beaten by him. They did not have time to spare for the hopeless canvass. But my neighbor had the time, so found himself with official warrant for talking labor and capital. His voice was strong, and he was in his element. The 4th of November came, and the men in that district cast their votes. When those votes were counted it was found that my ex-neighbor had been elected to congress by a majority of over 10,000. He had made a gain of about 16,000 votes."

About Speaking Fishes

The great German naturalist, Stern, published in the Revue Politique et Literaire a short time ago a very curious and interesting article on speaking fishes. Some varieties, he affirms, can whistle, bark and grunt, while others do very well as songsters, considering the fact that they are scaled instead of being feathered. Did we enumerate all of the peculiar speaking, grunting and whistling denizens of the waters mentioned by Prof. Stern the entire space allotted to "Notes for the Curious" would be taken up; however we must give a few of the most striking instances of vocal sounds made by the great German's piscatorial rarities; Scievis, a little six-inch chub variety of the lagoons of Italy, sticks its head above the water and sings a dainty song equal to that of some species of warbling birds; Trigla hirundo (the sea swallow) is known to every fisherman of the Danube and the Rhine by the peculiar grunting noise it makes. Trigla nolitans make a whining noise like a young puppy, while Scivena gathers in bands to hold regular concerts, no doubt originating the fable of the Sirens.

Coffee Drinking.

New York Sun: "Young man, you drink too much coffee, said an old gentleman. "I was doing exactly the same thing five years ago. I drank five cups of coffee every day of my life, and I was living like an exposed nerve all the time. As soon as I realized that I was a slave to the habit I made up my mind to throw off the shackles, and I thank my stars to-day that coffee and I are strangers."

"How did you do it?" asked the young man. "It is no easy thing to break off a popular habit."

"I know it," returned the old gentleman, "but I did it. I stopped coffee by substituting tea. I drink four pots of tea every day now."

The forth annual show of the Southern Minnesota Poultry association opened at Winona with over 600 entries, and more to hear from. A lively interest in the affair is being manifested by poultrymen from all over the state.

David Smith of Duluth has brought suit in the United States circuit court against the commissioners of Carlton county for careless discharge of a blast in making approaches to the bridge between Thomson and Twin lakes across St. Louis river. He asks $20,250 damages.

One of the finest specimens of the golden eagle ever seen was shot a few days ago by Mr. George Ebeling four and a half miles west of Northfield. He measured seven feet from tip to tip of the wings when fully extended and weighed twelve pounds. His plumage is something wonderful.

At Hinckley burglars broke into the Brennan Lumber company's store and stole over $150 worth of clothing, knives, silk handkerchiefs and money that was in the till. Mr. Davis, the manager of the company, was at the time sleeping above the store and heard no disturbance. No clue to the burglars.

The state prison board held a meeting at Stillwater and kept busy with the new binding twine factory. The machinery has arrived at the prison and will be sent up immediately. The prison board bought a car load of hemp fibre which was raised in Minnesota. It is expected that the binding twine plant will be in operation by Feb. 15.

The St. Cloud Journal-Press figured the improvements, public and private, of the city at $652,505 for the past year. Of this amount the Great Northern car shops and trackage cost $200,000, St. Cloud Fibre Ware mill $50,000, pulp mill $10,000, Bishop Zardetti's residence $10,000, and other public improvements at $159,505. This is the best record of any of the years past.

Congressman Lind has recommended that Jackson, Jackson county, be made a presidential office, and that Alexander Fiddes, the postmaster, be appointed by the president for the next four years. It is believed that the receipts of the Jackson office are large enough to entitle it to become presidential. Madelia, in Watonwan county, has become a presidential office, and Capt. Mullen, the present incumbent, will be appointed.

The appointment of Capt. Albert Garvin, formerly warden at Joliet, Ill., to the wardenship of the Stillwater penitentiary creates delight among the prison employes and citizens at Joliet. A large number of prominent citizens have signed and forwarded to him a congratulatory letter, and many have sent private letters of congratulation. His appointment is regarded as a recognition of the best and highest professional prison service and worth.

Edward Tillow, a single man 30 years old, a citizen of Grey Eagle, has been missing from his room since Dec., 21, and his body was found hanging in a tamarack swamp near Birch lake. No doubt he committed suicide. He is well-to-do, owned considerable property in Grey Eagle, and had $75 in his pocket when found. There is no known cause for so rash an act. He used his suspenders and drew up his feet in order to get a clear swing. He had a sister living in Lone Rock, Wis.

The normal school at Valley City, was opened on Oct. 13 with a dozen students. There are now thirty-five. As yet the school has been run by private subscription. A legislative grant is badly needed. There would be plenty of students if there were a good building and an efficient staff of teachers.

Quite a number of private bankers in this state have incorporated within a few days to escape the penalty which is provided by the law passed last winter. A heavy fine attaches to any banker not incorporated who receives deposits after January 1, 1891. The private bankers tested the constitutionality of the law in the district and supreme courts and were beaten. A few still hold out and have organized to secure the repeal of the bill. Friends of the law, after a careful canvass of the legislature, say that the law will be sustained.

It has developed in the Des Moines search cases that justice, constable and saloonkeepers were in league to defraud the people. The saloonkeepers knew when the officers were to search their places and would put a small quantity of liquor where it was easily found. So the business of securing fees in a multitude of cases was expedited. Justices Johnson and Callender and Constable Cleggett have been indicted for conspiracy, in addition to the indictments hitherto mentioned.

Romance of a Silver Dollar.

New York Evening Sun.

A few days ago a Buffalo man in buying some articles, received in his change a silver dollar. Something in the way the piece struck the counter attracted his attention, and he rang it a second time. He looked closely at it. The face of the goddess upon it looked up at him with the most honest eyes in the world. Then he called the shopkeeper's attention to the way it struck the wood. It sounded like lead, but it surely looked like silver. He finally pocketed the piece, but went on pondering about the strange contradition in its sound and in its look. A few hours afterward he happened to be in a bank, and drawing the dollar out of his pocket, he asked one of the clerks to look at it. He, too, acknowledged the queerness of the coin, but could not explain it. Another clerk came up, and still another, and had a spin at it. Suddenly in the midst of the investigation, the face of the dollar sprang up like the lid of a locket, and inside appeared the face of a pretty woman. Here was a bit of romance sure enough! One of the clerks instantly recognized the face as that of the young wife of a prominent man, to whom a note was dispatched asking him to come down and get back his picture-dollar by exchanging a solid one for it. It is perhaps, needless to say that he went at once, and that his anxiety to keep the matter from his wife's ears was not regarded.

Strangers at Washington Receptions.

New York Tribune.

The Washington receptions where strangers come and go unknown to the host and hostess, some with invitations and some without, have often been described. The latest story is about a reception given in the palatial house of a rich Senator. He is not fond of society, but is perfectly willing to have his wife entertain the whole world if she wishes. During this particular reception his house was packed from basement to garret with a chattering, lively crowd. The Senator in one of the rear drawing-rooms had fallen into a favorite fit of abstraction, and with his hands clasped behind him was walking up and down thinking possibly of some affair of business, when he was approached by a man who did not recognize him as the host and tapped him on the shoulder as he said: "Say, pard, you seem to be something of a stranger here yourself. There is not a soul in the house that I know. I am trying to find some one to work for a drink."

Witty Judge Maule.

Mr. Justice Maule once addressed a phenomenon of innocence in a smock-frock in the following words: "Prisoner at the bar, your counsel thinks you innocent, I think you innocent, but a jury of your own countrymen in the exercise of such common sense as they possess, which does not seem to be much, have found you 'guilty,' and it remains that I should pass upon you the sentence of the law. That sentence is that you be kept in imprisonment for one day; and as that day was yesterday, you may go about your business.—Green Bay.

The Indianapolis (Ind.) Journal sets this sum: "Take a pencil and multiply—twice two are four, twice four are eight, &c,—and you will find that in the twentieth generation you had 1,048,576 ancestors, without counting the intermediate generations. The census bulletin just issued makes the Indian population of the country, exclusive of Alaska, estimated at 36,000, as 244,704, of which number 32,210 are fed by the government. This brings the total population of the country up to sixty-three millions.

It is the general opinion that the dissolution of the recently organized American Harvester Trust will result in a merry war between the different machine manufactories, and that cut and slash and the devil take the hindmost, will be the watchword the coming season. The prospect is one to which grain growers will enter no protest.—News.

Grand Forks News: There is a widespread belief that the Indian war is being prolonged in the interest of individuals who figured in the rebellion in the capacity of army contractors. It is by competent authority, that the Indians could have been controlled and driven back to their reservations in one week after they left the agencies. As the case now stands, the United States government will soon be called upon to consider enormous claims for Indian depredations and destruction of property and there is no question but that the government will be compelled to pay such demands, as time will show that the rebellion could have been squelched in a few weeks and at a small outlay in cash and sacrifice of lives, as compared with the facts of today.

It is reported that Mr. Blaine has informed a man from Oregon that he is planning to give his entire attention to his reciprocity schemes and that he is not a candidate for nomination for the presidency. It is now in order for the Minneapolis Tribune to interview Mr. Blaine and settle the question of his candidacy; it might then be saved from using space worth $40 per inch in advertising Mr. Blaine as a candidate.—Northfield News.

The great state of Iowa has made a record for the past year in the direction of railroad building which will live in history. In that period there has been completed within the state an entire mile of railroad—no more—no less. Considering the fact that a little over a year ago an Iowa court ordered a railroad to be sold for the cost of the old iron and lumber it contained, it must be said that the railroad industry of Iowa is in a flourishing condition. After the Iowa commission has had ample opportunity during the coming year to badger the bad railroads and to enforce its equitable sets of tariffs it will be surprising if, during the year 1891, there shall not be found enough philanthropic capitalists throughout the entire country to at least double the record of railroad building which Iowa made for itself during the year 1890.—Dispatch.

The average editor is a funny cuss. Now I speak from experience. He must be provided with a hide from which adverse criticism slides off as freely as does water from a duck's back. Abuse him, swear at him and he don't care; you only make him more determined than ever. Praise him and he'll take it as a matter of course, and yet, editors get so little praise in the aggregate, that a little once a year furnishes a rarity that is not at all unpleasant. There is no profession in this great big world of ours, which gets it in the neck quite so often as the editorial, and by gracious, there's nothing stands it better and always comes up smiling.—Anoka Union.

A Colorado editor estimates that tobacco cost the people of Colorado in 1890 over $2,500,000 a sum which would have paid off every farm mortgage, painted every school house and put in repair every farm house and farm barn in the State. The man who kicks against a quarter of a cent tariff tax on a tin pail does not stop to think about the cost of the quid he is rolling as a sweet morsel under his tongue. After all, the biggest taxes that we pay are to our own bad habits. Tobacco, cigars, beer, whiskey, carelessness, bad planning, failure to use our head as well as our hands, and general laziness and neglect of our opportunities, add immensely to the debit side of farm account. This fact does not justify unnecessary tariff taxes, extortionate railroad charges, but it suggests that we might save dollars by reforms that begin at home, while we are doing our best to save cents by reforming other people who are inclined to dip too deep into our pockets. Reform like charity should begin at home, but it is not necessary or patriotic to let either end there.

Marshall County Leader: Almost before the State Senators commenced to draw their five dollars a day a bill was introduced to lower the legal rate of interest. The same effort has been made over and over again without success but this time it will probably go. We predict that if the legal rate be reduced to 7 or 8 per cent and no loop hole left for evading it nine of every ten mortgages on land in this part of the state will be promptly foreclosed if not paid when due. No law can force the loaning of private money, and a rate which is deemed by the loaner inadequate to the risk as compared with other opportunities for investment will simply drive capital to other investment. Nearly every dollar loaned on land here is owned in the east and while we who are here on the ground know that the security is first class it is not so highly regarded by easterners and with the allurement of higher profits removed the money will also be removed. The opponents of the measure have grown weary of the continual struggle and will probably not try very hard to prevent the experiment. Nothing but a trial will convince the advocates of the falseness of their theory.

This would give us four small and unimportant counties with high rates of taxes and no benefits except to towns in which the county seats will be located. We will be greatly surprised if the farmers lend their aid to this wildcat scheme.

Minneapolis Tribune: Wherever a bushel of wheat is raised there is rejoicing at the collapse of the harvester trust. It was a monster of such vast possibilities for mischief that the news of its birth was greeted with a shudder throughout the whole land. It has "died a-bornin'" and there will be no mourners at its funeral except its greedy parents. The anti-trust laws of the various states, particularly those of New York and Illinois, supported by the decisions of the supreme court of the states named, are to be thanked for this happy result. The projectors of the trust found it necessary to increase its capital by the issue of $15 000 000 in bonds in addition to the $25 000,000 combined capital stock of the members of the concern. When an attempt to float these bonds was made it was found that financial institutions would not handle them. The laws and the courts had made such paper a risky investment. The decisions of the New York and Illinois supreme courts were in effect that one corporation cannot legally hold stock in another corporation for the purpose of controlling it. Fortunately this principle will apply to other combinations for the purpose of limiting production and controlling trade, and the dissolution of the harvester trust will have a sanitary effect upon companies engaged in other lines of manufacture that may have contemplated the organization of similar combines. If capital can be made to regard the securities of all such combines with distrust the problem will have been solved. Legislatures and courts can bring this about for trusts are not "law-proof."

Crookston Times: Things are becoming desperate at Red Lake Falls. Those boys who have put their little all into real estate on some of the numerous additions to that ancient, though not yet extinct city, feel that there is but one chance left to revive the corpse, and that is to obtain for it the name of county seat. They don't care if the embryo'c county does not contain more than two or three towns. They will get an office and the taxpayer can pay the fiddler. With this object in view they are now working on a scheme to divide the county into four instead of two, giving a county seat to Red Lake Falls, Fisher, Fosston and Crookston. It is hardly probable that it will be successful. The people of the county are not so insane as to saddle upon themselves an extra burden of taxes in order to give a town that has never been able to secure anything else a county seat. A proper division of the county, one that would be for the best interest of the people would meet with very little opposition, but if the county is to be divided up into small pieces simply to give aspiring towns a county seat without regard to the interest of the taxpayers, let it be done so all the towns may share alike. McIntosh St. Hilaire, Thief River Falls and East Grand Forks would perhaps like to be county seats also, and some of them would be much better selections than one or two of the places that are now screaming for it.

J. WILKES BOOTH'S TRUNKS.

They Were Picked Up from a Wrecked Vessel Below Quebec and Sold.

Thomas Casey, a typical Irishman of 60 years or more, stood in front of the Opera house in Detroit, Mich., intently studying the show bill that bore the name of Edwin Booth, who was playing an engagement there. He asked a man who was standing near him if Edwin Booth was any relation to J. Wilkes Booth. Being assured that he was, Mr. Casey repaired to the hotel to tell Mr. Booth the following remarkable story:

In June, 1865, while Mr. Casey was an auctioneer in Quebec, a schooner called the Emma loaded at Montreal with oil for Nassau. In the cargo were seven large trunks marked "J. W. B., Nasau, to be called for." The schooner passed Quebec, but a short distance below that city a storm struck her, and she was wrecked. The crew and officers were never seen, but the derelict was picked up by some Quebec sailors, who claimed salvage.

The goods recovered were put into the admiralty court to be sold, and Thomas Casey was the auctioneer to whom the sale was intrusted. He opened the seven trunks and found them filled with rich velvet suits, jeweled daggers, armors, helmets, plumes and various other theatrical accessories. Old letters bearing the address of "J. Wilkes Booth" and hundreds of tickets with the initials "J. W. B." were also found.

The goods were much damaged by water. For some of them there was no call, and Mr. Casey kept them. The sailors realized $500, and $500 was deposited to the credit of J. Wilkes Booth or his heirs. Mr. Casey had never heard of J. Wilkes Booth. Away down in Quebec he took but little interest in the affairs that were then interesting the American mind, and he made no effort to find the owner, who, he then supposed, was drowned on the Emma, nor had he any interest in inquiring for Booth's relatives. In the lapse of time the affair escaped his memory and he did not think of it again. Casey's endeavor to see Edwin Booth was futile.

The fact that the trunks were consigned to Nassau leads to the belief that J. Wilkes Booth evidently hoped to escape to the Bahama islands and there resume his profession, believing, no doubt, that his offense would be considered a political one and that he would be safe in a foreign country.

Casey is a resident of Montreal.—Cor. New York Times.

Tact in Managing the Boys.

A quaint story is told about Master Tommy Anderson, an old time pedagogue. Once he taught a school in Farmington where the boys had driven out several teachers. He found that the chief conspirator was a good looking, grown up girl, bright, saucy and proud. The schoolmaster wore his hair in a cue, as was the fashion in those days. When he was "doing a sum" with his head down, she tossed his cue back and forth as if it were a toy, much to the amusement of the scholars. Uncle Tommy said nothing but kept up quite a thinking. He knew if he called out the guilty girl and punished her the big boys would rise and carry him out. So he adopted unusual tactics in conducting his campaign.

He found a lot of long hair hanging up in a barn. From this he selected and cut out a bunch nearly the size of a cue, and tied it up nicely with a ribbon. Taking this to the school house early the next morning, he suspended it from the peg where the girl always hung her cloak and hood, then commenced to set copies as usual. When she came in and spied the curious contrivance she looked surprised and puzzled. Quoth Master Tommy in a mild tone of voice, "Miss, I have brought that bunch of hair for you to use as a plaything instead of my cue." The proud spirited girl was humiliated before the whole school and could not help crying. Uncle Tommy had won the victory by stratagem rather than by force of arms and had no further difficulty with his scholars.—Farmington Chronicle.

English Words and French Slang.

It is very odd that Frenchmen should be so fond of copying English ways and using fragments of British speech. No language is improved by crude importations from other tongues, and most of the English words which have come into general use in France have been annexed in the crudest manner possible, often with no clearer understanding of their meaning than the lady who had invited some friends "pour fiveoclocquer a six heures." As for pronunciation—that, of course, is impossible. The word club, for instance, has long been a French possession; but it has usually been pronounced "clib." Now it has been discovered by the arbiters of chic, who not so long ago were called la haute gomme—French slang is very fleeting—that "cloob" is nearer the English style, and "cloob" it is henceforth to be.—Paris Letter.

The table used by President Harrison as a writing desk is made of the timbers of the British ship Resolute, which an American vessel rescued in the Arctic ocean. When the ship was being repaired the queen caused a table to be made of some of the timbers and presented to the then president of the United States.

The cost of maintaining one of the proposed battle ships while cruising is about $25,000 per month.

Mr. John Keenan, the worthy postmaster at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other. The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of all symptoms of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular. For sale by Justus L. Johnson.

There may be persons in this community who are at times troubled with colic, or subject to attacks of bowel complaint. If so they should try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Flying Machine Experiments.

Philadelphia Telegraph.

Although the solution of the problem of an effective mode of flying by machinery seems to be still afar off, experiments are being systematically conducted both in England and in this country, which are gradually establishing a number of reliable data that may at some future time bring forth fruit in the construction of a practical machine. Hiram S. Maxim has constructed the most elaborate apparatus for the series of experiments on which he has for some years been engaged, and has succeeded in determining the efficiency of a screw working in the air, the amount of push enveloped by a screw, the power required for propelling plans at different angles, as well as sundry frictional phenomena and sundry other details connected with the subject. He has succeeded in making motors that will develop one-horse power for every six pounds. He finds that 133 pounds can be sustained in the air by the expenditure of one-horse power. He also finds that for a successful flying machine a speed of at least thirty miles an hour is necessary, fifty miles being still more favorable to good work, and 100 miles an hour being well within the limit of possible developments in aerial locomotion.

Workingmen in Polite Society.

William Morris, the poet, and other advanced socialists of London are making the experiment of introducing the workingmen to some of the refinements of the West End Club, and of enabling him to meet those who are his social superiors on equal and friendly terms. The United Democratic club has been formed for that object. It will have weekly meetings, with debates, smoking and singing. At the opening night a "Bohemian supper," consisting of English beefsteak pudding, Irish stew, Scotch tripe and Welsh salad, was served by ladies.

Electricity in His Bed.

A new use for electric lights has been revealed by an Idahoan, who says that at home he takes the cheerful little electric bulb to bed with him. It keeps him warmer and snugger than all the rubber bags and tin boilers known, and the look of it alone on a cold night is, he thinks, as good as a roaring fire in a room. He considers it an altogether goodly thing to have around when the thermomenter is 40 below zero, and he many times goes to sleep with it between his feet.

"German Syrup"

Here is something from Mr. Frank A. Hale, proprietor of the De Witt House, Lewiston, and the Tontine Hotel, Brunswick, Me. Hotel men meet the world as it comes and goes, and are not slow in sizing people and things up for what they are worth. He says that he has lost a father and several brothers and sisters from Pulmonary Consumption, and is himself frequently troubled with colds, and he often coughs enough to make him sick at his stomach. Whenever he has taken a cold of this kind he uses Boschee's German Syrup, and it cures him every time. Here is a man who knows the full danger of lung troubles, and would therefore be most particular as to the medicine he used. What is his opinion? 'Listen! "I use nothing but Boschee's German Syrup, and have advised, I presume, more than a hundred different persons to take it. They agree with me that it is the best cough syrup in the market." ⓪

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Proceedings of Both Branches of the National Legislature.

Tuesday Jan. 6.

SENATE.

The senate resumed consideration of the financial bill and was addressed by Mr. Teller. He said he knew that in voting to displace the election bill he would renew the slanders that had been perpetrated for the last eight or ten months to the effect that the friends of free coinage of silver had entered into an alliance with the opponents of the elections bill for its defeat in return for their votes in favor of free coinage. There never was a more unfounded slander published than this.

Mr. Vest urged in favor of the free coinage of silver.

HOUSE.

The house committee on invalid pensions agreed to report favorably a bill granting a pension of $100 per month to Franz Sigel, late major-general of volunteers.

Representative Wheeler, from the committee on military affairs, reported to the house a substitute for the senate bill to revive the grade of lieutenant-general in the army. It authorizes the president to appoint the lieutenant-general who is to be selected from among those officers in the army who have distinguished themselves for courage and ability.

Wednesday, Jan. 7.

SENATE.

Senator Shoup of Idaho, drew the term beginning in 1889, and Mr. McConnell that ending March 3 next. The conference report on the urgent deficiency bill was agreed to. The bill for education in Alaska was discussed but not disposed of. The financial bill was then taken up and Mr. Daniel spoke in favor of the absolute free and unlimited coinage of silver. Mr. Plumb followed Mr. Daniel. He credited the silver act of last session with having had the effect of preventing a universal financial panic. It had facilitated the purchase of $100,000,000 of American securities that had been sent back from Europe, and thus the Bank of England and other financial institutions of Europe had been able to tide over the difficulties of the Barings, arising out of South American financial troubles.

HOUSE.

Mr. Funston of Kansas has introduced a resolution (which was referred to the rules committee) setting apart Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday next for the consideration of the "options bill."

Thursday Jan. 8.

SENATE.

Mr. Stewart called up his motion to vote upon the financial bill to-morrow, and Mr. Gorman is objecting and arguing for an elaborate debate.

After a tedious discussion on Mr. Stewart's proposition unanimous consent was given to a proposition made by Mr. Ingalls that general debate on the finance bill shall close at the adjournment on Tuesday next; that then ten minutes' discussion shall be in order, and that the final vote on the bill and amendments shall be taken before the adjournment on Wednesday next.

HOUSE.

The house went into committee of the whole on the shipping bill. Mr. Fithian, of Illinois, opposed the measure, and Mr. Wheeler, of Michigan, favored it. Mr Grosvenor, of Ohio, said there was a feeling of sentiment in favor of the bill, whereupon Mr. Spinola, of New York, brought to the front his measure for the erection of a monument to the memory of the victims of the prison ships. After a lengthy debate the house adjourned without reading a vote.

Friday Jan. 9.

SENATE.

Senator Stanford introduced in the senate a bill for the extension of the executive mansion in accordance with the plan proposed by Mrs. Harrison at a cost not to exceed $950,000. The present intention and hope is that the corner stone of the new structure can be laid with appropriate ceremonies Oct. 12, 1892, as this date is peculiarly appropriate, being the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America and the centennial of the laying of the foundation of the present edifice.

The president sent to the senate the following nominations: William A. Russell of Massachusetts, Lambert Tree of Illinois, Nathaniel P. Hill of Colorado to be commissioners to consider the establishment of an international coin or coins, as recommended by the international American conference, etc., as provided for in an act making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular serving for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891.

The senate passed the house bill to relieve Maj. Wham and house bill providing an additional associate justice of the superior court of Arizona. Mr. Blackburn and Mr. Morgan addressed the senate on the financial bill.

HOUSE.

The entire forenoon was spent debating (without action) a bill for the relief of the Citizens' Bank of Louisiana. The night session was devoted to private pension bills.

The house committee on appropriations completed consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill for for the next fiscal year. The bill carries with it a total appropriation of $21,555,146. A special clause is inserted providing that contracts for houses and mail wagons for the senate and house of representatives shall let be annually to the lowest responsible bidder therefor. The object of this is to prevent such scandals as were exposed in the Wheat postmastership investigation.

Monday Jan. 12.

SENATE.

In the senate to-day Mr. Stanford introduced a bill to provide for an extension of the executive mansion.

The senate to-day resumed the consideration of the finance bill, and Mr. Allen spoke in advocacy of Mr. Stewart's amendment. To attempt, he said, to demonetize silver was another attempt to demonetize gold. He would therefore give his support to the amendment, and in doing so he felt that he was in harmony with the wishes of his constituents.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Senator Davis to-day introduced a proposed amendment to the apportionment bill, the purpose of which is to increase the representation in the house to 360. The amendment also gives Arkansas seven instead of six congressmen, Minnesota eight, Missouri sixteen and New York thirty-five.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—In the house today Mr. Dockery, rising to a question of privilege, offered a resolution reciting the fact of the reference of his "silver pool" resolution item to the committee on rules and the fact that that committee had refused to report the same and directing the committee on rules to report the resolution to the house for consideration.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The house to-day went into committee of the whole for the further consideration of the army appropriation bill.

Mitchell Has No Opposition.

SALEM, Or., Jan. 12.—The sixteenth biennial session of the Oregon state legislature convened to-day. The legislature stands on a joint ballot: Republicans, 64; Democrats, 26, and will elect a successor to United States Senator Mitchell, who will probably be returned, as he has no apparent opposition.

Senator Vance Renominated.

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan 12.—Senator Vance was unanimously renominated for United States senator by the Democratic legislative caucus here to-night.

The Surplus Increases.

WASHINGTON, Special. The available cash surplus of the treasury, which was reduced to about $5,000,000 during the recent financial flurry by the heavy purchases of 4 per cent bonds, has been steadily increasing since the 1st inst. by reason of a large excess of receipts over expenditures, until it has now reached nearly $18,000,000. In speaking of this increase a prominent treasury official said today that the department was once more in a position where it could again go into the market and buy 4 per cent bonds if there was any urgent necessity for so doing.

Cold Wet Weather

Drives the blood from the surface of the body, and causes congestion of the liver and kidneys, which are thus unable to fully perform their duty of eliminating impurities. Hence lactic acid is accumulated in the blood and deposited in the joints and tissues, resulting in the pains and aches we call rheumatism. Hood's Sarsaparilla has had great success in curing this disease, both chronic and inflammatory. It purifies the blood, neutralizes the lactic acid, and restores the liver and kidneys to natural action.

Romance of a Silver Dollar

New York Evening Sun.

A few days ago a Buffalo man in buying some articles, received in his change a silver dollar. Something in the way the piece struck the counter attracted his attention, and he rang it a second time. He looked closely at it. The face of the goddess upon it looked up at him with the most honest eyes in the world. Then he called the shopkeeper's attention to the way it struck the wood. It sounded like lead, but it surely looked like silver. He finally pocketed the piece, but went on pondering about the strange contradition in its sound and in its look: A few hours afterward he happened to be in a bank, and drawing the dollar out of his pocket, he asked one of the clerks to look at it. He, too, acknowledged the queerness of the coin, but could not explain it. Another clerk came up, and still another, and had a spin at it. Suddenly in the midst of the investigation, the face of the dollar sprang up like the lid of a locket, and inside appeared the face of a pretty woman. Here was a bit of romance sure enough! One of the clerks instantly recognized the face as that of the young wife of a prominent man, to whom a note was dispatched asking him to come down and get back his picture-dollar by exchanging a solid one for it. It is perhaps, needless to say that he went at once, and that his anxiety to keep the matter from his wife's ears was not regarded.

Dangerous Ground.

"San Salvador is all on a volcano," said Senor Jose Fulano, of Pasolibre, to a Chicago Tribune man at the Grand Pacific the other day. "It has been three times destroyed by earthquakes, but the people get used to it and do not seem to mind it. It comes at intervals, and, really, while it makes one excessively nervous, there is little danger to life. I have known the shocks to come as frequently as eighty times in an hour. The effects are quite peculiar. In the city of Salvador is a brick column nine feet high and three feet square. That was shoved some one hundred feet without losing its perpendicularity or cracking the mortar.

"The ground under the city of Salvador is full of caverns of unknown depth. A man was digging a well there. The last stroke he gave with his pick the bottom fell out, and he and his pick and all fell through nobody knows where; to China probably. There is a volcano not far from Salvador that some years ago discharged lava over a forest. The wood all burned, of course, but the lava being light and easily cooled hardened into long arcades through which one may walk, and as you go you can see the imprint of the trunks and branches of the trees in the now cooled lava."

Pat and the Buffalo.

There is a good story told of an Irishman's adventure with a buffalo bull in early Montana days that is amusing. The name of the Irishman was Patrick O'Flinn.

On arriving in this country Pat turned his "attention" to railroading, and had scarcely set his foot on America's soil ere he accepted a big job of shoveling dirt, and a week after had been rushed off to the northwest, and was soon far out on the frontier digging away with his shovel as only a hearty Irishman knows how.

At that time there were still a few buffaloes along the contemplated line of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and Pat, having learned to ride a horse and shoot a gun, though both very awkwardly, went out one day with a party of travelers to have some Nimrodic sport. In the course of a few hours' travel the party ran upon a heard of buffaloes, and, after considerable manœuvering, each hunter selected out his game and started for the expected prize. The country was very rough in the vicinity where the game was sighted, and the chase was of the most exciting character, each hunter being separated from the others, and, of course, attacking his game single-handed. However, the hunters experienced good luck with the exception of Pat, who had chosen the tough old bull in the herd and made a dashing charge, shooting him, but not fatally. As the animal was quite fleet-footed and angry it turned upon its assailant, and the horse becoming frightened at the appearance of the enraged brute, reared and plunged, and soon had Pat sprawling on the ground, while the equine steed escaped as fast as its legs could carry it. In fact, Pat and the bull were left alone to fight it out in whatever way they might choose.

Pat had been somewhat shocked by the sudden fall, and at first seemed rather slow to recover, but when he observed the buffalo charging down upon him, with every part of the animal's anatomy fairly bristling with rage, he scrambled pawed the ground in his haste to reach a small cliff of rocks near by that appeared to offer him a meager but apparently his only chance to escape. Fortunately luck was in Pat's favor, for between two good-sized rocks he found an opening that would just barely admit his body far enough to prevent the bull from reaching him, and yet quite close enough to tantalize the monster into the most furious rage. In the fall he received Pat let drop his gun, and so was entirely without any weapon of defense, and but for his companions, might have been imprisoned for an indefinite period. When the rest of the hunters had killed their game and had gathered together for the homeward march, Pat was found to be missing, and search was at once instituted for him. The hunters began making a circuit, and while riding up behind some bushes, they heard a voice as of some one talking, apparently engaged in an animated conversation. They stopped and listened and were soon convinced that it came from Pat. It was evident, too, that he had gotten into a predicament, for just at that moment he was saying:

"Ah, ye ugly lookin' baste, what are yees tryin' to cum in here for? Have yees no sinse at all, at all? The divil set fire tor yees, for the great black heavy craythur that yees are. Sure it's the likes o' yees ought to have been banished from the sod long ago. Begob, if I had my gun I'd put an end to yees a foolin' round here and disturbin' a mawn from his rest as yees do. The divil a bit can ye hook me, and it's a great pity for the likes of yees to be throwin' away your strength like ye are doin'. Ye'd betther be savin' it up to pull the tender grass and get fat on, so yees had."

But the buffalo didn't seem to appreciate Pat's advice, but kept hooking away in an effort to get at its enemy.

"And it's tryin' to come in, yees are, agin?" exclaimed Pat. "Whin yees squaze through between these two stones ye'll be mighty thin, so yees will, and its the divil of a sixpence I'd be givin' fer yer hide full of holes and the hair peeled off."

The bull ceased operations for a minute and backed off a pace, evidently hoping to entice Pat to come out from his secure retreat, but Pat saw the game and expressed himself thusly:

"Yees needn't be tazin' me to cum out at all, at all. I know the tricks o' yees too well to be taken in afther that kind of style. Away with yees. Yees can tackle thim stones to your heart's contint, but mind and keep away from doing me any harm. If I only had yees by the tail I'd pay yees off for bothering a man that never done yees no harm."

About this time the hunters concluded that they had had enough fun at Pat's expense, and going up closer drew a bead on the buffalo with their Winchesters, and the animal tumbled down dead as a door nail. Pat was quite overjoyed at his deliverance.—Globe-Democrat.

Roofing a Mountain Cut.

A letter from Los Angeles, Cal. says that an unique piece of engineering is just being completed on the Santa Fe line, through the Cajon pass, "that will take rank with the famous Tehachapi loop on the Southern Pacific." It amounts, in effect, to roofing over the mountain. Much trouble was experienced last winter on account of the landslides in this pass, which kept the line blockaded most of the time, and to obviate this difficulty this work was designed. It consists of a series of terraces, four in number, rising up from the track where the cut is the deepest, excavated so as to break the forces of the water coming down the slope, and carrying it off laterally by a series of wooden conduits and surface drains. These terraces range from 500 to 300 feet in length measuring in the aggregate 1800 feet, and are all roofed over. An army of men and teams have been at work for mroe months.

The Rain-Making Scheme.

Col. D. T. Casper of the signal service thinks that there may be something in the idea that rain can be produced by means of dynamite explosions, and speaks favorably of the proposed experiments in that line to be made by the Government. Many people will, as a matter of course, pronounce the scheme preposterous, but, after all, it may prove as practical as was Franklin's suggestion that lightning might be brought under human control. Possibly, a few years hence, a rain-making bureau will be attached to the signal service, and expert cloud creators will be in demand by the Government. When Colorado, Arizona, and other western States, which are now as barren of vegetation as the great Sahara desert, will bloom like a vast garden, then there will be no droughts, and no failure of crops through lack of moisture, and then forests and prairie fires will be speedily extinguished.

Queer Crimes in Scotland.

Some very interesting facts of crime are revealed by a Scotch sheriff. He knew of one woman who, between the years of 1844 and 1865, was committed to prison 167 times for being drunk, and when drunk her invariable practice was to smash windows. A man when drunk stole nothing but Bibles and was transported for his seventh theft. Another man stole nothing but spades; a woman stole nothing but shoes; another stole nothing but shawls; but the queerest thief was one who stole tubs, and was sent to penal servitude for his seventh tub.

The Chilian minister at Washington has received no information from his government in regard to the published report of the revolt of the Chilian navy against that government. He attaches no importance to the alleged outbreak.

The secretary of the navy has received a letter from Commander Reiter, who was severely censured by the secretary for his conduct in the Barrundia affair, protesting against the censure. He says that he regards the censure as unjust, undeserved and unwarrented, and demands a trial before a naval court.

The United States supreme court advanced and assigned for argument on the second Monday of the next term the case of the United States, appellant, vs. the Des Moines Navigation and Railway company, involving title to some 100,000 acres of land along the Des Moines river north of Raccoon Fork. These lands have been in litigation for years.

The available cash surplus of the treasury which was reduced to about $5,000,000 during the recent financial furry by the heavy purchases of 4 per cent. bonds, has been steadily increasing since the 1st inst. by reason of a large excess of receipts over expenditures, until it has now reached nearly $18,000,000. In speaking of this increase a prominent treasury official said that the department was once more in a position where it could again go into the market and buy 4 per cent. bonds if there was any urgent necessity for so doing.

PERSONAL.

A consultation of physicians was held to consider the case of Senator Hearst, and it is understood that it was decided that there is no hope of the senator's recovery. His death is said to be imminent. His disease is understood to be cancer of the stomach.

Fire at Norfolk, Va., destroyed the saw mill of the Tunis Lumber company. But for a heavy rain which prevailed at the time millions of feet of lumber would have been destroyed. The saw mill was burned to the ground. Loss $100,000 covered by insurance.

A terrible accident occurred at the Atlantic mine, near Elk Garden, W. V. When half way up the cable of an incline broke and the car started down. Two men jumped, and were saved, but the third, John Devaley, was killed. The car dashed into a group around the fire, killing Jeff Paugh. Curtis Owens had three pounds of powder in his pocket. He was knocked into the fire and the powder exploded, burning him badly. Frank Hughes had an arm broken, and others sustained bad bruises.

At Pittsburg Rev. J. T. Riley, the Methodist Episcopal minister, has been found guilty by a church committee of imprudence and unministerial conduct. The charges were preferred by W. T. Minnick, who alleged that Rev. Mr. Riley alienated the affections of his wife.

George M. Bartholomew, formerly president of the Charter Oak Life Insurance company, who has been in Canada for several years, returned to Hartford, Conn., pleaded guilty to embezzling $10,000, and was taken to the penitentiary for a year's sentence. He is seventy years old.

Maj. Woodruff leaves the office of treasurer of Arkansas and will be succeeded by Col. Morrow. A sensation was created by the statement given out by C. T. Walker and W. H. Turner, two leading bankers, who have been at work on the treasurer's books. One of the bondsmen is reported as having said Maj. Woodruff's shortage would not fall short of $94,000. The investigation is not yet concluded, and it is likely that the shortage will reach a much larger amount.

A prisoner named Crosier made his escape from jail at Maryville, Kan. Sheriff Bentley and three of the prisoners, Crosier being one, were playing cards. Crosier walked to the stove which was behind the Sheriff, picked up a shovel and struck the sheriff on the side of the head, cutting a deep gash. He also gave him a hard blow with the back of the spade full in the face, laying the sheriff out senseless. Crosier pulled a revolver out of the sheriff's pocket, and held the other prisoners at bay and backed out of jail. The sheriff is not expected to live. A posse of twenty men are hunting for Crosier, and if caught he will likely be lynched.

General Master Workman Powderly, of the Knights of Labor, has just issued a circular recommending a joint conference of industrial organizations to be held next July at Washington, D. C., for the purpose of formulating a political industrial platform. There was exciting times in the lower house of the Colorado legislature. There are two Republican factions in the house, one led by H. H. Eddy and the other by James Brown. The Brown crowd number fourteen, and by forming an unexpected combine with the Democratic members secured a working majority. When the newly elected speaker, Hanna, attempted to announce his standing committees, the Brown-Democratic faction blocked legislation and the result was that nothing could be accomplished. Brown was ordered under arrest for interrupting the speaker. The sergeant-at-arms started to arrest Brown, when four deputy sheriffs sprang into the aisle and defied the sergeant-at-arms to do so. A scene of the wildest confusion and uproar prevailed. Quiet was finally restored, but the deadlock continued until midnight, when the Brown-Democratic wing, numbering twenty-eight members, walked out and organized another lower house all by themselves. This will complicate legislation this winter. Speaker Hanna is firm, and has employed fifteen assistant sergeants-at-arms.

A DEAD HISTORIAN.

An Order Issued by President Harrison Regarding the Funeral of the Late Mr. Bancroft.

Another Order from the Navy Department of Which Mr. Bancroft Was Once Secretary.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The president issued the following executive order to-day:

The death of George Bancroft, which occurred Saturday, removes from among the living one of the most distinguished Americans. As an expression of the public loss and sorrow, the flags of all the executive departments at Washington and of the public buildings in the cities through which the funeral party is to pass, will be placed at half-mast on to-morrow morning until the body of this eminent statesman, scholar and historian shall rest in the state that gave to his country and to the world.

The secretary of the navy issued the following general order:

It is with deep regret that the secretary of the navy announces to the navy and to the marine corps the death of Hon. George Bancroft, formerly secretary of the navy. The long and honored career of Mr. Bancroft, his high character and the distinction which he achieved both in public office and in literary labor have made his name one of the most familiar and venerated in American annals. His successful administration of the navy department from March, 1845, to September, 1846, was marked pre-eminently by the foundation of the naval academy—an act which has earned for him the most profound and lasting gratitude of the naval service. As a mark of his respect to his memory it is ordered that the navy department be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days, and that all business be suspended therein on the day of the funeral.

FROM EMPEROR WILLIAM.

This morning J. C. Bancroft received the following telegram from the emperor of Germany, transmitted through the German legation in this city:

Sir,—His majesty, the emperor and king, remembering the relations of friendship which for many years existed between his majesty the late Emperor William and the late Hon. George Bancroft, as minister of the United States to Berlin, has directed me to express to you and to your family his most sincere sympathy with the great loss which has fallen upon you and upon your country.

In accordance with the expressed wish of Mr. Bancroft before he died, in which his family concur, there will be no military ceremonies in connection with his funeral, but the secretary of the navy and other principal officers of the department will attend his funeral in a body. Rev. Dr. Douglass of St. John's church will conduct the service, which will be held at St. John's at 11 a. m. to-morrow. The public will be admitted to the church, though a number of seats will be reserved for the president and his cabinet, the diplomatic corps and other high officials.

In the senate to-day Mr. Hoar made a motion, which was agreed to, that the adjournment to-day be till 12 o'clock to-morrow, in order to give senators who desired to attend the funeral of Mr. Bancroft an opportunity to do so.

He added that Mr. Bancroft was perhaps the most illustrious man of letters, with one or two exceptions, in the country. He had a peculiar relation to the people of the United States by reason of the fact that he was everywhere recognized as the great historian of the great eras of the foundation and achievement of American independence and of the formation of the constitution. Mr. Bancroft's [illegible] the senate in a way in which no other name had been by a special permission that he should be admitted to the floor of the senate at all times.

CAMP OF CONFEDERATES.

First Annual Dinner of the Order in New York.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The first annual dinner of the Confederate Veteran Camp of New York at the New York hotel to-night brought together many prominent men from all parts of the Union.

This camp is said to be the first ex-Confederate organization north of the Potomac since the war. Covers were laid for 160 guests. The dining hall was elaborately decorated. Col. A. G. Dickinson, commender, made the opening address, and the following toasts were responded to:

"The Memory of Lee," Col. Charles Marshall of Baltimore; "Let Us Have Peace," Gen. Sickles; "The Confederate Veteran," Gen. William C. Oates of Alabama; "Our Country—The United States," Col. Charles T. O'Ferrall of Winchester, Va.; "The Soldier Journalist of '61—'65," Col. John A. Cockerill; "Our Old Home—The South," Hon. Benton McMillan of Nashville, Tenn; "Our Soldier Dead," was drunk in silence.

The mention of the name of Gen. Grant brought forth cheer after cheer. His name was spoken with that of Lee, and alternate cheers were given for the memory of these two great generals.

Thomas A. Young sprang to a table and shouting at the top of his voice, said that he wished to pledge the energy of every member of the Ex-Confederate Veteran Camp to complete the monument of Gen. Grant. His sentiment was fondly applauded. The entire body arose and in silence drank the memory of this great general of the North.

Another agreeable surprise was the presence of Miss Winnie Davis, "the daughter of the Confederacy." She graced with her presence this first annual dinner of this Confederate veteran camp.

NOT TO BE SLIGHTED.

Some Coast Towns Dissatisfied With the Action of a Commission.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Jan. 20.—Senator Mitchell to-day introduced a resolution which may open up an interesting state of affairs in connection with the location of the site for a gun factory on the Pacific coast.

The commission appointed under an act of last session selected Benicia, near San Francisco.

Since that action was taken there has been complaint made that other cities on the coast were not given the attention that their merits warranted. Several places in Washington and Oregon, among them Seattle, Tacoma and Portland, through various organizations submitted evidences of their own desirability as sites, and for some reason or other little attention was given to these places.

Senator Mitchell's resolution asks the secretary of war to send to the senate copies of all recommendations and statements of boards of trade, chambers of commerce and other commercial bodies and municipal corporations presented since Oct. 1, either to the war department or to the military board, which have been submitted to show the commercial and military importance and other facilities of the several sites suggested to such board as proper for the purposes desired.

Helped by the Lymph.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 20.—About one month ago Dr. E. T. Painter, a well known local physician, sailed for Berlin, his object being to undergo a lymph treatment. To-day a letter was received from him, giving an interesting and technical account of his symptoms. The doctor was suffering from spinal tuberculosis and was carried on a stretcher. He writes that the treatment is heroic, but in his case successful. The third injection nearly killed him, but after the sixth he arose from his bed for the first time in months, and is now shuffling around a Berlin hospital, improving daily.

LOYAL INDIANS.

Report Made by Missionaries on the Situation at Standing Rock.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, Jan. 20.—Four missionaries of the Catholic church, Rev. Fathers Kenel, Marty, Strassmair and Gerschmyler, have written a letter to Secretary Noble, in which they give the Indian situation at Standing Rock, in North Dakota.

They say that some misleading reports have been sent out from that place. The majority of the Indians are well pleased with the action the government has taken through its agent to settle the difficulties. These men say the Indians manifest no dissatisfaction, but are glad at the result of the government's policy, and believe it will have a good effect in the future. The late decisive events showed that there are more well disposed, loyal Indians than had been supposed. The Indians at Standing Rock desire no change. They want Maj. McLaughlin retained as agent.

Since the flight of Sitting Bull's followers, many of whom have now returned, not an Indian, so far as known, has left the reservation, and all reports to the contrary are untrue.

Authority has been granted to Gen. Miles to transfer temporarily, as a military measure, the Northern Cheyenne band of Indians from Pine Ridge to Fort Keogh, Mont. This authority is granted by the secretary of war with the concurrence of the secretary of the interior. This has been thought to be necessary by Gen. Miles or the protection of the Cheyennes who have been serving as scouts against the hostile Sioux.

Senator Sanders to-day introduced a bill making it an offense punishable by fine and imprisonment for any person to sell or lend fire arms and ammunition to Indians.

KILLED AT THE CARD TABLE.

Masked Robbers Attack a Party of Poker Player.

HELENA, Mont., Special Telegram, Jan. 20.—McCartysville, the headquarters of the graders of the Great Northern extension, was the scene yesterday of a horrible and shocking affair. Three masked men entered a tent where five graders were playing poker, being attracted by the sight of about $700 which the men had on the table.

The graders were commanded to throw up their hands, and, upon refusing to do so, the robbers opened fire, killing two players outright and severely injuring the remaining one. The masked men secured what money was on the table and, hurrying outside, mounted horses and fled.

It was some little time before the alarm could be given, but as soon as the fact became known the entire camp turned out. Striking the trail of the murderous wretches the incensed graders followed it for about fifty miles, when all traces disappeared. Had the pursuers overtaken the robbers the murder of their co-laborers would have been speedily avenged.

A gang of thieves have been operating along the line of the extension for some time past, but have never made so bold a stroke as that of yesterday. The officials of the Great Northern in charge of the construction at that point have authenticated the report, and Sheriff Houston of Missoula county has been notified of the killing.

THOSE REFRIGERATORS.

The Raum Investigating Committee at Work A—The Raum investigation was resumed this morning. Assistant Secretary Bussey, of the interior department, testified that he did not now have and never did have any interest in the refrigerating company.

Bradley Tanner, Commissioner Raum's private secretary, testified that he was secretary and treasurer of the District of Columbia Refrigerator company, of which the Universal Refrigerating company is the parent company. No stock had ever been issued. The incorporators were Commissioner Raum, Mr. Bussey, S. Allett Kilbourn, Joseph Bishowski, Richard W. Tyler and himself.

Green B. Raum, Jr., was asked by Mr. Cooper the name of the man who took care of his horses. He replied that his name was O'Donnell; and when asked if the man was in the pension office, said: "That's none of your business."

The committee admitted the questions and Mr. Raum stated that O'Donnell was a messenger in the pension office at $70 a month. He had been appointed by witness' father. O'Donnell did his duty and attended to witness' two riding horses after office hours, for which witness paid him. He refused to tell the compensation, stating that it was none of Mr. Cooper's business.

HIS LIFE EBBING AWAY.

King Kalakaua Lying at the Point of Death in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20.—King Kalakaua of the Hawaiian Islands, is lying at the point of death at the Palace hotel here suffering from Bright's disease and uramela. Col. McFarlane, the king's chamberlain, stated to-night:

The king is very low and his illness is most alarming. The disease took a sudden turn for the worse this morning, and he has been in a semi-unconscious state ever since. For forty-eight hours he has been unable to take solid food, and is nourished with milk and brandy.

He is attended by Fleet Surgeon Wood, of the United States man-o'-war Charleston, and Dr. Sawyer. The physicians are greatly alarmed and have held several consultations to-day with prominent physicians of this city. Rear Admiral Brown to-day sent a telegram to the navy department at Washington telling of the king's condition and the Hawaiian minister was notified by Consul General McKinley.

Tripp Behind the Bars.

HUDSON, Wis., Special Telegram, Jan. 20.—Officer S. Shortall of Stillwater and J. B. Jones of this city arrived here last night with Samuel Tripp, the notorious horsethief who was captured Sunday at Minneapolis. They turned him over to Sheriff Donohue on the charge of stealing Frank Egloff's horse. Bashford & Disney, who are attorneys for the prisoner, attempted to liberate him to-day on a writ of habeas corpus, claiming the officers had no right to bring Tripp from Minnesota to Wisconsin without requisition papers. Judge Reid deferred decision on this point until Tuesday, and the preliminary examination was adjourned until Wednesday pending a decision on the writ question. Tripp has been in the Minnesota penitentiary thirteen years for various felonies.

Dangerous Experiments.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Further details have been learned of Prof. Koch's experiments with his lymph. It is reported that five scientists died after testing the glanders bacillus, and that three men who were working on the cholera microbe subsequently suffered from a violent attack of the disease.

Distinguished Theater Party.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. — Quartermaster General R. N. Batchelder, of the army, gave a theater party to most distinguished guests this evening, when Charles Frohman's company of comedians presented Gillette's "All the Comforts of Home" at Albaugh's theater for the first time in Washington. The members of the general's party were the president and Mrs. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. McKee and Miss Dimmick, Secretary Proctor, Mrs. and Miss Proctor, Private Secretary Halford, Miss Halford, Marshal Ransdell, Mrs. and Miss Ransdell; Mrs. Gen. Miles and Miss Miles, and Col. Thomas F. Barr. The theater was packed and the comedy achieved a great success.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, North and South Dakota News in a Nutshell.

MINNESOTA.

H. J. Wagoner was appointed postmaster at West Union, Todd county, W. H. Davis at Moorhead and Hans M. Serkland at St. James.

State Senator Hammer of Fillmore county has so far recovered from his sickness as to be up, and will be able to occupy his seat within two weeks.

Congressman Comstock has recommended the appointment of William H. Davis for postmaster at Moorhead. Mr. Davis is one of the leading citizens of the Northern part of the state.

The senate confirmed the following nominations for postmasters in this state: Charles G. Mullen, Madelia; W. H. Savey, Moorhead; H. M. Serkland, St. James.

A bill to authorize the construction of a bridge across the St. Louis river from St. Louis, in Douglas county, Wis., to New Duluth in St. Louis county has been introduced in Congress.

An agitation has been commenced in Goodhue county, having for its object the amendment of the high license law so as to place money derived from licenses in county instead of village and city treasuries.

A new Duluth company has just closed negotiations with one of the largest industries to be established at the head of the lakes, viz, a pipe and foundry plant, capital $500,000. The concern will employ 800 men.

Alden Wheeler, a young carpenter living in St. Charles from boyhood, took a sudden departure, leaving numerous creditors. He made several purchases of clothing, tools, etc., within the last few days, promising to pay. Sheriff Braidey has gone to St Paul with a warrant for his arrest.

County Treasurer Bodin, of Wright county who was robbed on Jan. 1 of $3,885, replaced that sum in the treasury personally without calling on his bondsmen. The loss falls very heavily on the retiring treasurer, and leaves him, it is supposed, almost without a home. Frank McKnight, who succeeded Bodin, took the office with the funds intact. No trace or clue has been found to the robbers.

Mrs W. J. Blaisdell, of Otter Tail county, who has for some years been known as "the Minnesota Blizzard," is happier than she has been at any time since she named herself the blizzard and began to be breezy in her effort to secure a pension for her husband. The pension was allowed, being increased from the figure it was placed at some time ago to $72. Mrs. Blaisdell has ing to the case.

There is considerable excitement in Swift over the arrival of a band of Indians at Norway lake. They are camped close by the graves of 14 people that were killed by the Sioux in 1862. It is reported that they have killed some cattle belonging to the farmers in that neighborhood. W. H. Merryman and O. Strom, two Kerkhoven business men, drove out to see them dance recently, and the Indians began hostile demonstrations at once, making them beat a hasty retreat.

At the annual meeting of the state agricultural society, held at St. Paul F. B. Clarke, of St. Paul, was elected as president for the ensuing year. The retiring president, F. C. Pillsbury declined a re-election. Mr. Pillsbury, speaking of last year's work of the society, said: There was no clash in the least at the last fair, and I take pleasure in congratulating the society upon its present and future prospects. We have endeavored, and I think succeeded admirably, in making this a purely agricultural institution. The annual report shows remarkably well, and in due time will be published. I would suggest that at future meetings of the society arrangements be made whereby tents may be provided in which farmers who so desire can live during fair week. This would save them much expense, and would be something of a novelty besides. There should also be some evening meetings during fair week at which agricultural topics should be considered.

The Douglas county commissioners are considering the possibility of proceeding against E. T. Carroll, late county superintendent of schools, for malfeasance in office. Just previous to turning the office over to his successor, Mr. Carroll destroyed all the data that had accumulated in the office during the past half-dozen years. In addition to this he failed to turn over two more of the records furnished him by the county. Whether he has made himself criminally liable is not yet known, but the matter will be investigated by the county attorney.

Arrangements are being made to fight the collection of all notes now held by harvester companies in this state, and it is said the amount is about $3,000,000. The ground of the contest is that the notes were given for binders with the contract that repairs should be furnished free, and the recent combine, the American Harvester company, has made a rule that all repairs must hereafter be paid for in cash. Another ground for the contest will be that the new company is a trust, and is therefore contrary to the laws of the United States and the statues of the state.

The collapse of the American Harvester trust at Chicago is hailed with delight by users of farm machinery in this section. She has recently become insane, and it is likely that an effort will be made to secure her pardon."

A Family Affair.

I was paying a call to the editor of a weekly paper in a town in Vermont, says an exchange, and, after looking over the editorial page of a copy on his desk, I remarked:

"You don't appear to have much to say about the party candidates."

"No, not much," he replied.

"But are they satisfied?"

"They have to be. It's pretty badly mixed around here."

"How?"

"Well, this is a Republican paper, but my son Nate, who is a Democrat, is running for state senator against the Republican candidate. I can't call Nate a horse-thief and a liar, you know, because it's in the family. If I come out and blow for the man, then it's agin Nate, so I sort o' keep still."

"I see."

"As to the candidates for the legislature, my brother-in-law is on the Democratic ticket against our candidate. I can't pitch into him without making fifty relatives mad, and so I have to go softly. I did manage to call our candidate a Cicero, but that's as far as I dare go."

"How about sheriff?"

"Well, my brother Bill is running on the Democratic ticket, and while I can't help him any I don't want to hurt his chances."

"And prosecutor?"

"My cousin Jim is a'ter that, and if I down Jim all his branch will stop their subscriptions. Awful sorry Jim is a Democrat."

"How's the judge of probate?"

"'Nother Democratic brother after that."

"And selectman?"

"Father-in-law on the Democratic ticket, and I've got to be neutral."

"And county surveyor?"

"My uncle Tom is the regular Democratic nominee. You see how I am fixed."

"How's your own politics?"

"Pretty near straight Democratic."

"Then why don't you run a Democratic paper?"

"It's a-comin' to that I fear. I've been on the fence, or neutral, for the last ten years, and I expect to wake up almost any morning and find I've dropped on the Democratic side. It's an awful thing to contemplate, but you see how it is—you realize the situation."

"Not so bad as that, Algie, but not now; next year, perhaps."

She did not love the sound of his aha.

But he said no more then.

Only gazed steadily at his ticker.

The county division schemers are still hard at work on their big scheme to make county seats of their towns and provide offices enough to go around As soon as the reservation is opened it will be necessary to divide Polk county and with the reservation new counties can be formed to the best possible advantage but the present scheme booming towns and making fat offices for strikers will not go down with the average taxpayer.

Northfield News: We will soon hear the question, "What shall we do with the Indians that are left after the soldiers get through with them. The soldiers are not through with them yet, but when they are why not round them up and locate them on the deserted farms in Vermont, which we hear so much about? The Indians would then be near their sympathysers, the philanthropists, who are yearning to reach out their hands and protect the noble red men from the ravages of the Indian agent and the uncouth civilization of this western country.

Warren Register. Two men who live in Dakota about fifty miles northwest of here, were in town on Monday and stated that on Saturday ten or twelve bucks [illegible] were seen crossing the Red River on their way towards the Red Lake reservation. Whether this means an attempt to stir up mischief is unknown, but it is at least, a suspicious circumstance. The Sioux and Chippewas are old time enemies, but have been compelled by Uncle Sam, to cease making war upon each other, though they still hate each other. The Red Lake Indians are Chippewas.

The Democrats are now damning the day that they nominated Adolph Bierman for state auditor. He has gone into wisconsin and appointed his brother as deputy and into North Dakota and selected his next best man. He retains S. G. Iverson, a Republican, (which is sensible, for Sam is a mighty competent fellow) and he will have but one place with which to satisfy (or dissatisfy) about steen hundred applicants. The State Central Committee, which held a session in St. Paul Friday, roasted the auditor to a turn for his action. Bierman will drop out of politics two years hence.—Mankato Free Press.

Washington Special Telegram, Jan. 15.—Estimates are being prepared at the general land office of the amount of appropriations which will be needed to complete the survey of the Chippewa reservation in Minnesota. It is likely that $125,000 will be the minimum figure, although until the estimate of the number of townships of timber lands into which the great forest will be cut up the genre cannot be accurately arrived at. The $50,000 appropriated last session is enough for hardly one-third of the reservation, and, as much of that part of the reservation which remains is heavily timbered and the timber bearing lands are to be divided into be divided into forty acre tracts, the expense of the surveys per square mile will be great.

The Red River Valley from all indications, is on the morn of a new growth. For years the rush to the West has thrown our section into the shade, but everything now points to an old-time revival of business. Letters are coming in from the East and West, from men who have heard of our valley and its capabilities and possibilities. Men who are wearing out their lives as renters or small farmers in the Atlantic or Middle states, would come here and better their condition if they but knew the facts. To all such a letter published in their local paper under the name of an old friend and former neighbor would help spread the good news about us, and banish doubt from the minds of those who hetitate because they think we are near the jumping off place out west, or up north under the Arctic circle.—Plaindealer.

AN INDIAN SCARE.

Considerable excitement has been caused lately by a report that the Chippewa Indians on the Red Lake reservation were preparing to have a ghost dance a few miles east of Thief River Falls, It is also reported that a band of Sioux from North Dakota arrived last week and are exciting the Indians here. Hans Langseth was here from Thief River Falls yesterday and informed us that these reports were greatly exaggerated He said that the Indians of the Thief River band, numbering less than twenty-five bucks, were preparing to have a social dance Wednesday evening, but that they had no idea of having a ghost dance or causing any trouble. The Indians say that they never had any trouble with the whites and do not intend to if they are left alone. If there are any Sioux Indians on the reservation they have not been heard from and are not as yet causing any trouble.

One of the great underakings of 1891 will be the extension of the Great Northern Railway from the north central part of Montana to Puget Sound a distance of 500 miles across the Rockies through the famous Flathead Lake country, across the panhandle of Idaho into the Kootenai country, and thence through the entire length of the state of Washington to tide water. When completed it will be the shortest line by 250 miles of any transcontinental route, and opens up a large area of undeveloped mineral, timber and agricultural country.

The following resolution was adopted by the board of county commissioners of Polk county at their last meeting:

Resolved the county auditor mail a copy of the following recommendation to each of our representatives in the legislature and senate at St. Paul, viz:

The board of county commissioners of Polk county, Minnesota, would respectfully recommend that you enact and approve a special law at the present session of the legislature for Polk county fixing the salaries of county officers and the amount of clerk hire allowed to each as follows: County auditor $1500 clerk hire $2200; county treasurer $1500 clerk hire $1200; clerk of the court $1500 clerk hire $500; register of deeds $1500 clerk hire $1500; and that all fees of the register of deeds and clerk of the district court be paid into the county treasurer of said county weekly, on the last day of each week and that all acts and parts of acts inconsistent there with be repealed.

Col. Ingersoll's Declaration of Rights.

I regard the world as a ship making [illegible] mysterious other, and upon that ship there are a few cabin passengers, and there are a great many steerage, and I believe when the steerage is out of food by reason of stress or storm that the cabin ought to divide, and I believe if the cabin will not divide the steerage will make it divide. I am not a believer in taking the property of the rich and giving it to the others; but let us see. We are invited this very night to this banquet. There ought to be a chair, and there was, and a plate for each. Suppose that when we arrived here we found that to a certain nobleman or millionaire they had given 50 seats, and 49 gentlemen were compelled to stand. The 49 would pass a resolution in favor of the eminent domain. Nature is my mother. I was invited to the great feast of life, and I do not propose to stand while there is a seat in the world that another fellow is not occupying.

The republicans in both bodies of the state legislature have been knocked out sat upon and completely squelched. They have not only not got a single office of any kind but they haven't got a majority on a single committee. This completely shuts them out from shaping any legislation and releases them from any responsibility in the matter. The alliance and democrats are in the saddle, and if the farmers don't get all the legislation they want, they will now have an opportunity to kick the democrats and themselves, and not the republicans as has been the custom here tofore. We believe that the people will find after this year's experiance that the republican party gave them better legislation than they have ever received from anyone else.—Fergus Falls Journal

White Earth Minn. Jan. 14.—The work of establishing the new boundary lines for the reduced reservation and subdivisions of ceded portions, in conformity to the treaty of Jan 14 189 is being rapidly pushed forward. A large force has been engaged in the work since early last fall, and it is stated that the work on the White Earth reservation is now completed and is now ready for the timber and land examiners to proceed with their work estimating the amount and value of timber and agricultural land contained thereon, etc. The work on the Red Lake reservation is also well advanced and it is conceded by spring that preliminary labors will have been completed, and, after the completion of surveys, estimates and examination of timber and agricultural lands, the same will be advertised for sale, and disposed of in forty acre lots to the highest bidders, but in no case at less than $3 per 1000 feet board measure the value of the timber land being based on the amount and quality of the timber contained; the agricultural lands to be disposed to actual settlers, under the homestead law, at $1.25 per acre, in five equal annual payments. It is conjectured that the greater portion of the surveys and estimates will be completed by next fall.—Globe

FLAX FIBER AND SEED.

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS TO THE FARMERS OF THE NORTHWEST.

An Experienced Man in Handling Flax Tells What He Knows About the Industry, in a Way That All Can Understand. Read the Article and Preserve It.

Many if not all of our western farmers can grow flax for fiber as well as for seed by adopting the methods generally in use in other flax growing countries. The following valuable hints about the culture of flax for fiber and seed, is copied from the Great Northern Railway Bulletin, a monthly publication full of good things concerning the Northwest, as condensed from a letter on the subject written by W. D. Hall, secretary of the Minneapolis board of trade:

"Sow one and one-half bushels of Belgian seed per acre, and when the straw begins to turn yellow and the foliage within six inches of the ground is drooping, pull or cut close to the ground at once. At this stage the seed in the bolls is changing to a dark green or brownish tinge. Tie the straw in small bundles and stand on end to winnow. When quite hard and dry put in stack. There is a larger and better yield of fiber when the straw is kept until the year following its growth. If fibre is required at once the seed can be rippled and the straw steeped in soft water, that is, rain water, or, if this is not attainable, in pits of water in which vegetable matter grows, and which has been exposed to the sun's rays for a period of five or six weeks. The straw should be protected from the earth at the sides of the retting pits; place the straw in layers until the pit is quite full; stones, or planks of wood with stones on top to keep the straw entirely under the water, are laid upon the top layer of flax or straw. If the temperature of the water is 80 deg. Fahrenheit or upwards, about six days will be sufficient to ret the straw. From the fifth day examine a few straws, at different parts of the pit several times daily, and when the fiber pulls readily and entirely off the woody core it is time to remove from the pits. Stand the sheaves on end to dry; pull the band or tying on each sheaf close to the top and spread out the root ends so as to expose to the sun and wind. When perfectly dry stack for a few weeks. This improves and mellows or brings 'nature,' or a soft silky feeling to the fiber. It is now ready for the machine.

"Practice and time are necessary to become proficient in this branch of husbandry. Until you have learned by experience to handle the flax straw so as to realize the best results, I would advise you not to invest money or credit in any machinery, but do what you can by hand and with your own labor during the winter months. I will soon have samples of machines that every farmer can make for himself at a cost not to exceed $2 and with which he may himself, during the winter months, work out the fiber of from one to six acres of flax straw, that will bring from $100 to $500. Experience will soon enable you to produce as good fiber as is produced in Ireland or any other country and I can promise you a cash market in Minneapolis for all the fiber you can produce."

The following statement will show you what one man has done and does every year: Mr. E. B [illegible], of Green Bay, Wis., in a recent communication to the National Department of Agriculture, relates the following interesting experience: "The six acres of flax grown on my farm last year, and referred to in The Gazette, of Green Bay, Feb 3, was sown May 1, 1888, with one and one-half bushels per acre of Belgian seed (which I consider the very best for this country) I pulled it by hand a little before ripe; let it dry [illegible] on the ground for eight days; then bound it with rye straw, and sheltered. I thrashed it by hand and spread it on land already harvested, and let it ret by dews and rains; then stacked it in the barn again, but bound this time with its own straw. I scutched it by the old system (breaker and knives, still the best in use when the work is done by skilled scutchers.) The soil is a black loam mixed with black sand about ten inches deep, with red clay for subsoil. The result was as follows:

Sowed 9 bushels Belgian seed, at $1.50 per bushel		$14 50
Pulling by hand		22 50
Binding and sheltering		5 00
Thrashing by hand		20 65
Retting on the ground		19 [illegible]
Scutching		[illegible]
Shipping		[illegible]
Freight to Boston, about		3 00
Total expense		[illegible] 95
Produce:
30 bushels seed, valued at $1	$30 00
600 pounds tow, 2 cents per pound	12 00
3,718 pounds fiber, at [illegible] cents per pound, as offered by manufacturers, Ross, Turner & Co., Boston	[illegible] 93	[illegible] 93
Net profit		[illegible]

I think we can estimate this as an average crop, with careful preparation of the ground and well conducted operations in retting and scutching.

The reason for sowing thick is to have the straw longer and finer, as it is only valuable for fiber from the root to where it branches out. The ordinary flax grown here will produce a good quality of fiber if pulled or cut close to the ground at the right time, and properly treated. Try one or more acres next year and see what you can do."

THE FAMOUS NO. ONE HARD.

Flour made from No. 1 hard wheat, cured naturally, contains 3 per cent less moisture than California flour, made from wheat dried in kilns, and will make proportionately more bread; a comparison with Eastern flour disclosed a difference in bread-producing capabilities amounting to no less than 15 pounds of bread in every 100 pounds of flour, in favor of the product of Red River valley wheat.

NOVEL PLEA OF A HIGHWAYMAN

Flattery Used as a Forcible Argument by a Cunning Negro Criminal.

Peter Ragland, the whitewasher, was arrested on a charge of having snatched a lady's pocket-book, says the Plattsburg Dispatch. "The proof," said the justice, "is so plain that further investigation is unnecessary."

"No, it ain't, sah," the negro replied, "Dar's times when suthin' dat done looks like proof shrivels up might'ly when you fling the firelight o' reason right strong down on de question."

"Well, but what firelight of reason can affect the proof that you met this lady walking quietly on the street and you snatched her purse.

"Now, jedge, lemme tell you somethin'. I wuz comin' 'laung de street an' yere come dis lady. She come er, laung, she did, er holdin' out her money bag dis er way [imitating], an' I tuck it, I did. I ullus takes everything dat is offered ter me, sah."

"But why did you think that she was offering it to you?" queried the judge.

"Wall, you see my little daughter hes been sick fer some time an' de white folks has been powerful kind ter me—gibs me suthin' putty nigh ever' day an' I thought dat dis lady yered about it an' wanted me ter git some medicine."

"That's all very well, but what made you run so fast after snatching the purse?"

"Who, me?" he asked, shuffling to gain time.

"Yes, you."

"Why, jedge," he exclaimed with the brightness of a sudden idea. "I wanted ter hurry home ter carry the good news—wanted to tell my po' wife dat de puttiest lady I eber seed in my life dun gib us money ernuff ter git de medicine we want. Oh, no sah, I ain't no han' ter poke erlaung when good news is er stirrin' up my heels. I has seed white folks dat had been sent atter er doctor poke erlaung, but it ain't datter way wid me, er when I thinks de puttiest white lady I eber seed has done gib me money. I ain't gwine let er crap o' grass grow under my feet. Jes look at dat lady, judge. Ain't she purty! Fo' de Lawd, she done put me in mind o' my young mistis laung fo' de wah. Pretty ladies is er gittin' mighty scarce now. Oh, I know 'em. Ole marster uster say ter me: 'Pete,' he'd 'low, 'ef I wuz ez gooder jedge o' beauty ez you is I wouldn't do nothin' but stan' aroun' an' pick out wives for dese good-lookin' young men.' Now, jedge, I has dun gib my 'splanations ah' you mer sen' me ter jail ef yer wants ter."

"Judge," said the woman, coyly holding her head to one side and tittering just enough to be girlish, "perhaps I was to blame. Indeed, I think I offered him the purse, not thinking of what I was doing at the time. I think you ought to let him off."

A broad smile became epidemic in the court room. The judge said that the purse-snatcher was free.

MERRIAM'S MESSAGE

Gov. Merriam Delivers His Biennial Message to the Legislature.

He Reviews the Work of the last Two Years and Makes Some Suggestions.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

Constitutional enactment permits me the opportunity of submitting to this body, such facts and suggestions affecting the present condition of state affairs as are deemed worthy of consideration. Availing myself of this privilege, I shall first call attention to matters pertaining to general legislation, and later refer more specifically to such items as I regard of special importance. Permit me to reiterate the sentiment expressed in a communication to the legislature assembled two years ago as to the desirability of a careful scrutiny of all bills, the purposes and requirements of which call for the expenditure of public moneys. Too much care cannot be exercised in this direction. Let the taxes be kept at the lowest point consistent with prudent and wise administration. The penal and charitable institutions, as well as our public school system, should be supported in a manner worthy of the state and its citizens, but every demand for increased facilities, or enlarged expenses, should be carefully considered and aid only extended when absolutely needed. Further on I shall take the liberty of expressing my views as to what sums should be allowed the different institutions. The opinions offered are based upon a careful computation of the revenues to be derived from various sources during the coming two years.

Allow me to say that I regard as a great and growing evil, in connection with all legal enactments, both state and national, the tendency toward class legislation. It is too common an occurrence for localities, and for individuals, to demand of the law-making power action that will tend to their exclusive benefit. Laws should be passed that will bear upon and benefit equally all citizens, and the greatest care should be exercised that no advantage of any kind or character to the detriment of the general public be given to any special class, or to any particular locality. It is quite the custom among the many well-meaning citizens to ask of the legislature relief from every trouble, imaginary or real, many of the difficulties being from causes beyond its curative resources. All should be protected in their personal and property rights. Discrimination of any character that is to the advantage of one citizen and works injury to another should be studiously avoided as unfair, and not in accord with the spirit of free institutions. In this connection, too, I regard paternalism, so-called, in government, as an evil that will ultimately result in great trouble and endless confusion. It is a malady that seems to be spreading, and carried to its logical and legitimate conclusion will end in the building up of favored classes and localities, to the detriment of the great masses of the people. Your responsibilities in this direction are important, and I commend to your consideration the necessity of avoiding all legislation of the character I have noted.

RAILROAD AND WAREHOUSE COMMISSION.

The report of the railroad and warehouse commission gives full insight into the work that has been accomplished under the direction of that body during the past two years.

Since the passage of the law creating the present board the records will clearly demonstrate the fact that much has been accomplished that has been of direct benefit to the general public. Among other things, and important, has been the gradual but material reduction in transportation rates for freight and passengers, and such action as has resulted in requiring of the railroad companies equal consideration for all classes of shippers. We must not forget, however, that competition, improved methods in handling trains, newer and better machinery, lower grades, and the reduced cost of transacting business, aided by a continually growing traffic, have all assisted in making lighter the burdens of transportation. To my mind one of the greatest evils incident to railroad management is the pernicious habit indulged in by too many railroad officials of discriminating in favor of certain patrons and against others. It is an abuse over which the public feel justly incensed. So manifestly unfair is it to give one shipper any advantage over another that, in calling attention to the matter, to simply state that the practice exists seems to be all that is necessary at this time. The penalties for disobedience of the section of the law referring to discrimination should be so severe as to administer a lesson to him who breaks it that they will not soon be forgotten. The commission, in its reports of 1885, and of later dates, speaks of a certain form of discrimination that is worthy of your consideration. I quote from these reports relative to the system so common among railroad managers of bestowing free passes: "It is the conviction of this commission that the issuing of free passes as now practiced in this state is an unjust discrimination as against every passenger that pays, and thus opposed to the spirit of the act passed for the regulation of common carriers; that it is a fruitful source of corruption; that it is injurious alike to public and private interests, and to the interest of the companies themselves, and that it is one of the chief obstacles in the way of proper and necessary reform in railway management and the control thereof under authority of the state." The present law regulating common carriers especially permits the issuance of passes for the free transportation of passengers, although all other discrimination is prohibited under severe penalties. Comment is unnecessary.

It is gratifying to state that those sections of the law requiring that cars shall be furnished to individual shippers have been carried into effect more fully during the last two years than at any time heretofore. While there have been individual cases where the railroad managers have been derelict in their duty in this respect, yet on the whole the spirit of the law has been met, and its provisions generally complied with.

The decision rendered in March last by the supreme court of the United States, holding that certain provisions of the act of 1887 regulating common carriers are not in harmony with the federal constitution, will make necessary some changes in our laws in this regard. It was generally understood when the law of 1887 was enacted, that while the railroads were entitled to receive reasonable rates for service rendered, the legislature was the sole arbiter as to what rates were reasonable. It was also generally admitted that this power could be delegated by the legislature to a board of commissioners. With this in view, the law of 1887, as interpreted by the supreme court of the United States, delegated this power to the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners, and provided no means for a review of its action. The court of last resort has determined that action upon such matters is not final, either in a commission or in the legislature itself. The power of the legislature to make reasonable rates for common carriers is not denied, but whether a given rate so made is reasonable is a judicial question, and must be settled as other matters of law and fact are determined, through the medium of the courts. The statutory provision of 1887 should be so amended as to provide a plain, direct and speedy method of review of the orders of the commission, either through the medium of appeals or by direct proceedings on application of the board, or of any party or corporation interested, to the supreme court of the state. Much can be done in the direction of reducing the cost of marketing our principal cereal at the terminal points when the amendment suggested is carried into effect.

GRAIN INSPECTION.

One of the important interests entrusted to the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners is the inspection and weighing of grain. I confess to approaching this subject with diffidence, as I am not entirely positive whether our present system is all that can be desired. The grading of wheat is not an exact science, but is largely a matter of individual judgment. Grain experts will not always agree, and as a result there is frequently a divergence of opinion between inspectors in the country and at terminal points of so marked a character as to produce much confusion and often dissatisfaction. I have addressed communications to many of the leading farmers of the state as well as to some of the prominent receivers of wheat, and with practical unanimity they concur in the opinion that the law, in its present form, with possibly some slight amendments, is as effective as any enactment that can be devised for the purposes intended. Some suggest that a board of appeal be provided at each terminal point to adjust any question of grades arising in connection with inspection. This I deem to be a wise suggestion. The problem of grading at local stations is more difficult to solve. It would be impracticable to maintain state inspection at the thousand and one points throughout the state where grain is bought, and therefore it would seem as if the small shipper must avail himself of the right to ship his wheat direct to the receiving points and demand state inspection and weights in case he is dissatisfied with the inspection of the local elevator agent. I am well aware that many hardships arise from undergrading at country stations, but I see no way whereby this difficulty can be overcome save in the manner indicated.

THE STATE PRISON.

The board of managers of the state prison at Stillwater has submitted its annual report, giving an account of the important transactions that have occurred since the last legislature convened. After advertising for bids for labor, in accordance with the law of 1889, and receiving none, a contract was made with the Minnesota Thresher company whereby about one hundred and seventy-five of the convicts were employed by that corporation. The board of managers were reluctant to make this arrangement, but it seemed to be the wisest plan, all things considered. A large number of buildings within the walls of the prison were owned by the Thresher company, having been the property of its predecessor. It was necessary in order to make the contract with the Thresher company to agree to take these buildings as part payment for the labor furnished. There was a question in the mind of the attorney general whether the buildings, legally, were not the property of the state, as they were placed upon lands belonging to it, but as it was known that they had been constructed by the former contractor, and were in reality the property of his successor, in the interest of equity, the board decided to purchase them in the manner indicated. All question of ownership of the buildings is therefore now settled. The contract so entered into by the board of managers expires in October next, in accordance with the law under which the prison is managed at this time. If the present system of contracting the labor of a portion of the convicts is to be continued, it will be absolutely necessary to permit the board of managers to make a contract for at least ten years in order that the state may reap the full advantage of this plan of using its convict labor, it being practically impossible to induce capitalists to expend the necessary sum to utilize so large a number of men unless they are given a contract extending over a sufficient period of time to warrant a large outlay in establishing a permanent plant. A number of the convicts have been employed in the labor of manufacturing woodenware with results sufficiently satisfactory to justify its continuance.

THE STATE REFORMATORY.

The state reformatory at St. Cloud is in full working order, and is apparently accomplishing the result claimed for it. The building is entirely inadequate to the demands upon it, having within its walls more than can be comfortably cared for. It is no longer a question that much good can be effected in checking criminal impulses by means of reformatory methods, and to that end provisions should be made to so enlarge the present buildings as to meet the requirements arising from the increased number of inmates.

AUSTRALIAN SYSTEM OF VOTING.

The last legislature enacted a law relating to the manner of voting and the holding of primaries in cities in this state containing 10,000 people or more, and a test of the plan (known generally as the Australian system) was made at the last general election. The law in the main worked satisfactorily, some minor changes being apparently necessary to perfect it. In my judgment the statute should be so amended as to make it applicable to the entire state, and I suggest for your consideration the desirability of causing such additions to the present laws as will accomplish that result. Public sentiment is fully alive to the necessity of throwing such safeguard about the ballot box as will insure purity in elections. No means should be spared to prevent fraud, intimidation, or corruption at the polls.

EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM.

Our whole educational system is so excellent, and rests upon so secure a foundation, that I hardly deem it necessary to enlarge upon it particularly. The excellent character, of the work being done in the university, in the normal schools and in the high schools, is so generally known and appreciated as to require but little comment, other than words of highest praise. Some changes are needed in the direction of the management of the high schools of the state, as well as some additional appropriation to meet the natural growth incident to a rapidly increasing population. It would be well to enlarge the present high school board, consisting of three members, to five, the two additional to be selected, one by the board of regents, and one by the normal school board. The employment of a special secretary, who would devote his time to the inspection and improvement of the high and graded schools, seems to me desirable.

Quite a number of graded schools might rank as high schools if the appropriation was increased $8,000 per year, and thus a very desirable result would follow a moderate additional expenditure. The sum of $400 is allowed each high school under certain conditions, and at this time the appropriation only provides for sixty. At least twenty-five additional schools should receive the aid of $400, as by this assistance they would grow into excellent institutions, and raise the standard of education in the counties where the are situated.

INSPECTION OF ILLUMINATING OILS.

At the last session of the legislature the law concerning the inspection of illuminating oils was amended, whereby the fee system was abolished and the position of inspector of oils made a salaried office, all emoluments arising from inspection being covered monthly into the state treasury. No appropriation having been made to pay his salary, the inspector deducted the amount due him under the provisions of the law each month from the fees collected. In March last, however, in a suit brought in the district court of Hennepin county by a company dealing in illuminating oils against the deputy oil inspector in that county, it was decided that the term "package," as used in the statute might refer to a receptacle for oil of any size, and, that the vendor of oil was not compelled to submit to inspection by the barrel unless he so elected. The practical effect of the decision was such as to render it impossible to procure an inspector to serve who would be willing to accept the legal compensation for inspecting a "package" containing one hundred or more barrels at the rate of 40 cents, that being the maximum sum allowed by the statute. As a result, and if other temporary measures had not been taken, illuminating oils would have been sold broadcast over the state without inspection, endangering, possibly, human life and property. After consultation with the attorney general and the representatives of the large dealers in illuminating oils an arrangement was made whereby the companies dealing in and distributing oil agreed to pay the salaries of three inspectors until such time as the law could be amended to meet the case involved. This was undoubtedly the best plan that could be devised to meet the emergency. I respectfully urge upon you the necessity of prompt legislation in connection with this matter. Illuminating oil is very generally in use throughout the state, and provision should be at once made to avoid any calamity that might occur from a neglect to rigidly inspect the same. It might be well to consider the desirability of returning to the fee system, reducing the amount per barrel to ten (10) cents in accordance with the law in neighboring states. The public will be better served, and the perquisites after deducting the sum necessary to provide deputies to strictly enforce the law would not aggregate an excessive amount in view of the labor performed. From such information as I have at hand the number of barrels that are likely to be subject to inspection will not exceed 80,000 per annum in the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis. There would perhaps be 25,000 to 30,000 barrels to be inspected in other parts of the state, to be handled by local inspectors. After deducting necessary expenses of rigorous inspection in the two cities, it would leave between $3,000 and $4,000 as a salary to the chief inspector. Should it be deemed advisable to continue to pay a salary to the inspector, the amount should be provided for in the general appropriation bill.

THE NATIONAL GUARD.

I desire especially to call your attention to the efficiency and excellence of the National Guard. It is composed largely of young men from all parts of the state, many of them from the agricultural districts, who are devoting themselves with great earnestness and faithfulness to the manual training necessary to develope them into soldiers equal to any emergency. The reports of the adjutant general indicate a constant improvement in point of proficiency and drill and the other requisites for military service. It is well to have bodies of trained men for the purpose of protecting life and property should exigencies arise in the way of local disturbance, and in case of war with foreign countries, well trained officers could be selected as the basis of material for organizing an army from the ranks of the national guard. At present no provision has been made to furnish overcoats or blankets to the men, for use in case they are ordered out on duty in extreme weather. An appropriation for this purpose is manifestly a proper one, the articles purchased to remain the property of the state.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The world's fair to be held in Chicago in 1893 will be an event of national importance, and proper steps should be taken by the legislature to insure a full exhibit of the resources of our state upon that occasion. No means should be omitted to have the various advantages of Minnesota made known to the thousands who will visit the greatest exposition of modern times. It will be necessary in order that we may receive the attention commensurate with our wealth and population to make an appropriation adequate to the proper representation of our vast agricultural and mineral products, and to formulate such plans as will call the attention of visitors to our matchless climate, our educational system, and our manifold advantages in all that pertains to industrial and social life and development. It may be deemed wise to create a commission into whose charge this whole matter shall be entrusted. I consider this of special importance, and trust no means will be omitted to provide for a full and complete exhibit, as the results that will accrue cannot fail to be of lasting benefit.

WAR HISTORY OF MINNESOTA TROOPS.

The commission appointed under the act of April 16, 1889, to collate the history of Minnesota troops engaged in the late war, as well as the Indian war of 1862, has reported in full as to the work delegated to their care. The results of its labors have been eminently successful. The book published under its supervision has been largely circulated in accordance with the enactment. I desire to embrace this opportunity to express the obligations of our citizens for the faithfulness and diligence shown by the members of the commission in the fulfilment of a work of such interest to the people of our state.

SWAMP LAND GRANTS.

I respectfully urge upon this body the desirability of disposing of several unsettled swamp land grants. The state has granted from time to time, during the last twenty-five years, quite an amount of swamp lands to aid in the construction of various railroads. Some of the roads have selected nearly or quite the number of acres to which they are entitled. Others have preferred to delay, for one cause or another, until a large amount of unfinished business has accumulated in the land office, necessitating the employment of extra clerks and causing more or less expense. Some of the grants have have been forfeited by non performance of contract, while others await further legislation to determine rights. A sufficient number of acres have been deeded to the state by the general government to fill the grants to railroads (saving possibly one road), and state institutions whose rights have been fully determined. The time has now come for the lands to be deeded to the proper parties, and the state relieved of further annoyance and care. To that end I suggest that a law be enacted directing the parties entitled to land to select the same within a reasonable time, say three or five years, and after the expiration of that time to provide that all grants, of every kind and nature, be declared absolutely forfeited.

KANDIYOHI COUNTY PUBLIC LANDS.

Permit me for the second time to call the attention of the legislature to the necessity of making some disposition of the public lands in Kandiyohi county, amounting to some 6,400 acres, held for a capitol site. These lands should be sold and the proceeds turned over to the treasurer for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the state. There can be no possible advantage in retaining the lands longer and much benefit will result to the citizens of Kandiyohi county if these acres are made subject to taxation. Several attempts have been made to dispose of the matter, but all have been futile. The sum of $75,000 would be realized, it is estimated, from this source.

THE BANK EXAMINER.

The report of the public examiner gives in detail the result of the work accomplished in his department. Under the provisions of an act passed by the last legislature a large amount of work has been entailed upon the bank examiner in connection with the building and loan associations. I doubt very much the desirability of placing the various loan and building societies under state management unless the laws under which they are organized and regulated are uniform and more strict. It is an impossibility for state officers to properly look after institutions formed upon a business basis so insecure and be officially responsible to those who invest their savings. Many of the associations guarantee profits that are not obtainable if ordinary business methods are pursued, and proper care exercised in the way of prudent investments and economy in management. Building societies, founded upon right principles and conducted upon a safe and prudent basis, have proved remunerative investments, and in many instances have been of advantage to the community, but institutions organized for the purpose of providing large salaries for officers and directors, and conducted upon plans utterly foreign to well-known commercial rules, result in final disaster and loss to unsuspecting stockholders. If the state is to assume the guardianship of institutions of this kind let the law be so amended as to give the fullest opportunity to protect the public by means of ordinary safeguards. The work entailed upon this department is increasing so rapidly that some means must be devised to defray the expense of further clerical help. In order to meet this additional sum it would be well to collect of every bank, trust company or building and loan association a fee commensurate with the capital invested, to be paid into the state treasury. Quite an amount would be thus obtained to defray the expense of maintaining the office of examiner.

THE STATE FINANCES.

It is estimated that the excess of receipts over disbursements for the years 1892-93 will approximate $700,000. This sum will be available for purposes of enlarging and improving state institutions, and for other and necessary objects. The various boards and commissions have suggested expenditures that, if made, would involve an outlay of about $1,500,000. It will be impossible, under existing circumstances, in my judgment, to provide so large a sum of money. We are forbidden by law to create any further bonded debt, and it would be extremely unwise to increase the tax levy at this time. The times are not propitious for any additional burden in the way of direct taxes. I venture to suggest for your consideration the desirability of confining all appropriations for building purposes or extraordinary expenses to the sum above noted—$700,000. Attached to this paper is a full statement of the revenues to be derived from all sources for the next two years, as well as probable ordinary expenses. After a careful consideration of the demands made by the authorized boards representing the different penal, charitable and educational institutions I have indicated the direction, to the best of my judgment, all things taken under advisement, in which the money should be expended.

I need hardly refer, in conclusion, to your responsibility as the representatives of the people. You have accepted from the citizens of a great commonwealth no ordinary trust, and are charged with duties of the highest order. Not as individuals, but as the chosen servants of the people, you are to devise and formulate laws that will adequately protect the vast interests of the state. Permit me to express the hope that the results of your labors will prove of permanent value to the citizens of Minnesota.

Helpless 40 Days

The great agony caused by rheumatism is indescribable, and the gratitude of those who take Hood's Sarsaparilla and are cured is often beyond expression. The following is from a well-known Wisconsin farmer, and is endorsed by the editors of the Neillsville, Wis., Times as entirely true:

"For 25 years I have suffered with sciatic rheumatism. Last November I was taken worse than ever, and was unable to get out of the house. I was almost helpless for forty days, suffering great agony all the time. In December I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. After the second bottle I was able to be out and around and attend to business. I took five bottles, and am now so free from rheumatism that only occasionally I feel it slightly on a sudden change of weather. I have great confidence in Hood's Sarsaparilla." A colored man, who, a few days ago, obtained a marriage license, was at the clerk's office asking that it be taken back and the dollar refunded. The anxious clerk asked if the license was not filled up properly, and the answer was, "I thought so; but I find the lady is lawfully married already, and of course I can't marry her."

"You don't know," said some one in the office; her husband may die, or there may be a divorce, and the license will keep." The applicant went off still holding the license.—Washington Star.

London in a Fog.

London has been sunless for more than a month. "At one time this afternoon," writes Harold Frederick on Saturday, "it grew so light here in London that one could distinguish houses on the opposite side of the street quite plainly, but it didn't last long; and this evening people are bumping around in the same old pea-soup fog, which has enveloped the metropolis since New Year's. A little of this bat-like existence each winter has certain charms of uniqueness and variety, but Londoners this time are fairly worn out with it. No glimpse of sunshine has been permitted us now for thirty-eight days, and sometimes there have been bannocks of solid darkness lasting for fifty hours at a stretch. Moreover, it has been for the most part exceptionally cold from an English standpoint. To be sure, the mercury has never fallen beyond 13° above zero; but that is deemed such an inhuman temperature here that a driver on a coach between Cantebury and Dover the other night actually allowed himself to be frozen to death by it."

Trousers' Bottom Protector.

It seems as if the ingenuity of the inventor would never tire of seeking for new worlds to conquer. A singular invention is the subject of a recent patent. This is neither more nor less than a trousers' protector, which is held to the trousers by means of two small spring clips, and the balls or projections at its lower edge prevents the bottom of the trousers from coming in contact with the ground and getting muddy. It is claimed that by its use it is impossible to pick up mud, and that the unsightly method of turning up the bottoms of trousers in wet weather is avoided. It is said to be not noticeable when worn, and is made in different colors to suit the cloth. It weighs one-eight of an ounce, and can be instantly fixed or removed.

A London writer has alluded to the straitened circumstances in which Louis Kossuth finds himself. DIGEST OF THE NEWS

Interesting Digest of the Happenings of the Past Week Culled From the Associated Press.

Washington, Criminal, Foreign, Personal, Casualty, and Other Important News.

AROUND WASHINGTON.

Supt. Porter, in his first annual report to the secretary of the interior upon the census has seen fit to state over his own signature the fact that fraud existed in the Minneapolis census.

Indian Commissioner Morgan has sent F. D. Lewis, a special agent of the department, to Pine Ridge to chaperon the Sioux chiefs who are going to Washington. The commissioner does not know what these chiefs expect or what requests they want to make. But they are pretty likely to get some plain talk. They will be assured first that the government proposes to keep its treaty obligations and to carry out the agreement made with them when they ceded their lands. They will also be told in plain language that they are expected to quit the folly of the Messiah craze, and settle down and work like white folks.

PEOPLE IN PRINT.

Hon. Mr. Chapleau, secretary of state for Canada, in an address at Kingston, said Canada was prepared for free trade relations with the United States.

William Mooney, the New York architect, was sitting in the rotunda of a Peora (Ill.) hotel talking to friends, when he was seized with a fit of coughing. In fifteen minutes he was dead.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

There was an explosion in the Crescent brewery, Aurora, Ind. Two men named Swift and Pfeister were killed and four others seriously wounded.

There were earthquake shocks in Switzerland and simultaneously three skaters were drowned at Geneva Harbor. The ice was broken.

An oil pipe near Grafton, W. Va., burst, covering the Monongahea river for twenty miles with oil, which was set on fire. Thousands of trees were killed and five bridges burned, including the great iron bridge at Pine Grove.

While a large number of children were playing in a school ground at Nantwich, England, an infuriated cow charged upon them, tossing some in the air and trampling others under its hoofs. Forty-nine children received more or less serious injuries.

WAYS OF THE WICKED.

Three attempts have been made in two weeks to assassinate T. M. Todd, a Chicago real estate dealer, by some one unknown.

Ben K. Pullen, Jr., was arrested in Fort Worth, Tex., recently. He was formerly city register at Memphis; and is a defaulter to the amount of $6,000.

George Harris of Newberne, Ill., persists in fasting with suicidal intent. Twenty-six days have passed since the last morsel of food passed his lips, but he is still alive.

It is now stated that an additional shortage of $80,000 has been discovered in the trust funds held by Attorney John C. Hall of San Francisco.

Patrick Forrestal, until last October a trusted clerk of Simpson a New York pawn broker, is under arrest for theft of $8,000 worth of diamonds from his employer.

David Skiwinski, a New York Salesman, was engaged to a Huntingdon, Pa., girl. She wrote him breaking the engagement, and he went to her town and hanged himself.

Supreme Treasurer Krause, of the Michigan Patrons of Industry, is $1,400 short in his accounts. He admits the fact, and says that he used the money in establishing the organ of the order.

James A. Woods, the attendant at the Eastern Indiana hospital for the insane, charged with kicking T. J. Blount, a patient, to death, has been sentenced to twenty-one years in the penitentiary.

Bob Ford, the slayer of Jesse James, and J. B. Harder, a saloonkeeper, quarreled in Walsenburg, Colo., over a game of cards and engaged in a shooting match. Both were wounded, but not seriously.

The dead body of Mollie Woods, who bore an unsavory reputation, was found at Galena, Kan., with two bullet holes entirely through her head. No clue to the murderer.

At Rochester, N. Y., John Miller aged fifty-four years, upon being reproached for drunkenness by his eighteen-year-old son, stabbed him four times and fatally. The son is dead, the father arrested.

Stephen F. Sherman, of the late firm of Sherman Bros. & Co., who was convicted of grand larceny in connection with grain transactions, has been sentenced at Buffalo, N. Y., to five years in prison.

United States Marshal Fry of Clark, S. D., arrested two young bloods by the name of Walter Sage and Calvin Simmons, for selling liquor without government license. A deputy marshal is still in Clark, S. D., expecting to make other arrests soon.

During the trial of an opium smuggler at Seattle, Wash., Collector of Customs Bradshaw testified that during his entire term not a single can of prepared opium had been entered for duty at the custom house.

Sixty Italian laborers on the Baltimore & Ohio near Minatour, Pa., struck against a reduction in wages. About half of the gang wanted to continue work, but the strikers attacked them in a body and drove them off. The ringleaders in the riot have been arrested.

It has developed that S. J. Mings, ex-president of the National Bank of Galesville, Texas was short in his accounts several thousand dollars. The failure of the Oklahoma Lumber company involved the bank for a large sum, and since then Mings has disappeared and cannot be found. What the Galesville bank will lose cannot now be ascertained.

It is stated in New York that Count George Szirmoy of Austro-Hungary has been in that city three weeks hunting vainly for his seventeen-year-old daughter who was stolen from a convent abroad by a former mistress of the count, who thus sought revenge. Traces of the young countess have been found in the low dens of Thompson street, where it is believed her abductor placed her, but the girl cannot be found.

The train on the Rio Grande railroad, between Brownville, and Point Isabel, was wrecked and robbed by fifteen masked men. They placed obstructions on the track, derailed the train, held up the passengers, and got away with about $20,000 in Mexican money which was en route for shipment at Brazos by the steamboat Morgan to New Orleans.

The noted clerical, Abbe Laponniere, of the Church of St. Sulprice, France, has been arrested on the charge of embezzlement and infanticide. The niece of the abbe's cure was accused of complicity in the death of the child, and when Abbe Laponniere learned of her arrest he fled from the place, but was later taken into custody. The affair has created a prolonged sensation.

A handsome young woman who registered at a hotel in St. Louis as "Mrs. Hudson" was found dead, having committed suicide by taking morphine. An affectionate letter, addressed to G. B. Nichols, Galveston, Tex., was found on the table unfinished. In it she asked forgiveness, saying the temptation was too much for her. Nichols is a ticket agent there for the International & Great Northern railway.

A mysterious disappearance of two children occurred at Cincinnati. They were Rachel Frisch aged four, and Charles Phillips aged three. Two days afterward the lost children were found in a second story vacant room over Hart's shoe store on Fifth street, near Vine, only two squares from their home. The door was locked but was kicked open. There lay the two children on the floor, flat on their faces with hands spread out and faintly moaning. The little ones were almost frozen and were emaciated from their long fast, fright and exposure. Beneath the window the wall paper was torn off, showing where they had tried to climb up to call for help. The children could give no explanation of their imprisonment.

OTHER SHORES.

A general thaw has set in throughout England to the great relief of those who have been great sufferers on account of the extraordinarily severe weather which has prevailed in Europe.

A circular letter has been received in Pittsburg from London stating that George Westinghouse has received $250,000 for his air brake patents from the London Air Brake company. He is also to receive a salary of $30,000 a year.

It would seem that unless a miracle happens or the weather changes radically within a very short time, the inhabitants of Sebdon, a small town in Algeria will starve to death. Information reached the city of Tlemsan that the inhabitants of Sebdon were snowed in from escape and that they were slowly starving to death. Their stocks of provisions had run out before the bearer of the alarming news reached Tlemsan and it was said that the horses, mules and even the few camels at Sebdon were being killed for food.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Several hundred deluded negroes have reached Atlanta bearing with them cards entitling them to go to Africa via Savannah, for $1 per head. The villains who are working up this scheme for percentage are hard to get at, but they are demoralizing colored labor.

Mrs. Melvin White of Wheaton, Wis., who lay in a trance twenty-five days, receiving no nourishment but small quantities of milk, has revived. She still lies motionless with her eyes closed, but she opens them when told to do so and responds feebly to questions. She says she has been conscious all the time. The lady physician in charge says the ailment is an obscure brain lesion. She thinks the patient will recover.

Thirty-six Men Against 3,000.

This story of how thirty-six brave soldiers on the one side put to utter rout and rapid flight 3,000 brave soldiers on the other side is from the lips of a private who fought through the stirring scenes of the sixties and came out with an honorable discharge.

In 1862 Hanover Junction, a little town between the forks of the North Ann and South Ann rivers, was held by a body of troops from Longstreet's brigade. There were about 3,000 of them, and as the post was a vantage point, about the same number of troops were sent from Burnside's army to attack the place. Among the first to cross the North Ann River was Private McCarty of a New York regiment, now a resident of Kansas City. With him were thirty-four members of the same company commanded by Kilpatrick. The 3,000 defenders of the post were drawn up in battle file some distance from the river.

Hardly had Kilpatrick's men reached the bank when he commanded them to charge, and the little troop of thirty-six went charging directly in the face of 3,000 troops drawn up in line of battle. The sight of the little body charging alone was too much for the nerves of the 3,000 raw troops and they fled. Unused to the artifices of war, they thought there must be some trick in it, and they cut at once for the taller timber.

The little troop of thirty-six had accomplished without the loss of a man what might probably have taken 5,000 men to do.—[Kansas City Times.

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

Christ Abrahamson Murders Miss Annie Ronninger in Pope County, Minn.

Using the Revolver Upon Himself He Follows His Victim Into the Unknown.

GLENWOOD, Minn., Special Telegram, Jan. 27.—Word has reached here from Ben Wade township, this county, of a shocking affair at the residence of Mr. Simonson. It seems that Christ Abrahamson, a youth about eighteen years old, called at the residence and shot Miss Annie Ronninger, a young lady about fifteen years, she dying in a few moments after. He then shot himself through the head, dying almost instantly. The cause of the shooting is the fact that the girl had repulsed the affectionate advances of the murderer, who then, in a fit of anger, did the deed which sent two lives into eternity.

SLOWLY STARVING.

An Illinois Man's Terrible Mode of Ending His Life.

ALTON, Ill., Jan. 27.—In the little town of Newbern, twelve miles from here, George Harris lies on a sick bed, from which he will probably never rise. Last night closed the twenty-ninth day of his fast with the determined man still alive, but he is lingering in a condition of most ghastly weakness, stupor and emaciation.

When death does come it will mark the close of probably the most grim and stubborn march to the grave ever made voluntarily by a man tired of living, and George Harris' fast will break the record as an instance of a deliberate and prearranged suicide by a new and peculiarly appalling route.

Harris has been a hopeless invalid for some time, and on Dec. 28 he announced his determination to starve himself to death and has not tasted a mouthful of food since.

The scene at the house of his sister, Mrs. Dow, with whom Mr. Harris has resided for a number of years, is one that can never be forgotten. Friends of the desperate and obstinate man have been gathered about him all day. He lies in a sort of strange stupor nearly all the time, a condition of trance-weakness, that keeps him oblivious of his surroundings. Occasionally, however, pangs of hunger grow so keen that his sufferings rouse him from his lethargy. Then begins a struggle between his will power and his craving for food, which is the most horrible feature of his effort at self-destruction.

The iron will of the man invariably wins, and his condition is rapidly becoming such that the desire for food will be lost in the fatal lassitude that will precede his last hours. He is sinking rapidly, and it will be impossible for him to linger much longer.

ROBERT HAMILTON ALIVE.

His Alleged Drowning in Snake River Only a Ruse.

LEWISTON, Idaho, Jan. 27.—News has been brought in here by a ranchman named Sanford that Robert Ray Hamilton, who was reported to have drowned in the Snake river while hunting last June, is still alive and enjoying good health.

Sanford says he learned this from men who worked on the Hamilton-Sargent ranch. From their remarks he gleaned that there was a cloud upon Hamilton's life, and he wanted it to appear to the world that he was dead. The corpse of a man who very much resembled Hamilton was secured and placed in the river where it was found, and the information given out that he was dead.

The laborers said several prominent people were in the secret that Hamilton was still living, and that he had gone either to Australia or Alaska under an assumed name.

RECIPROCITY WITH CUBA.

Spain Accepts the Proposition Made by the United States.

MADRID, Jan. 27.—Spain has accepted the proposal of the United States government for the negotiation at Washington of a reciprocity treaty relating to American trade with Cuba. In political circles it is said, that the only serious difficulty in the way of formulating and adopting such a treaty appears to be the American inflexibility on the tobacco question.

AN INTERVIEW WITH M'KINLEY.

BERLIN, Jan. 27.—A German newspaper in this city publishes an interview which its correspondent at Washington has had with Mr. McKinley. In this interview Mr. McKinley is represented to have said that Prince Bismarck's policy of limited protection, which had in twenty years brought Germany up to her present condition of prosperity, induced him to take up the tariff question in the United States. Mr. McKinley is also reported to have said that it was his intention to visit the ex-chancellor in order that he might personally express his admiration of that statesman and of his policy.

ALARMS THE SETTLERS.

Lake of the Woods Indians Now Performing the Ghost Dance.

HALLOCK, Minn., Special Telegram, Jan. 27.—A messenger has arrived from the Roseau country, seventy miles east of here, with a pressing petition to the governor asking for rifles and ammunition. They are in great fear of the Indians of the Lake of the Woods. The redskins are dancing and have their war paint on, and gather from all along the Rainy river and from the Canadian side. The report and petition is signed by fifty of the settlers near the scene of the excitement, and unless they are furnished with arms and ammunition it is to be feared that an outbreak will be disastrous.

Horrible Cruelty.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 27.—While skating on a pond, Freddie Hackbarth and August Priese, both aged twelve years, were seized by two older boys, who said they wanted to "make niggers out of them." After a fire had been lighted the little fellows' faces were held over the fire until the flesh rolled off, and both may lose their sight. They will at any rate be disfigured for life. No arrests have as yet been made. The cries of the youngsters brought workmen in the vicinity to their relief, but the older ones escaped.

Close of an Institute.

HASTINGS, Minn., Special, Jan. 27.—The state farmers' institute has closed its session. The attendance was large. In connection with the institute the cooking school was conducted by Mrs. W. M. Hays. The institute was conducted by Supt. O. C. Gregg.

Senator Hammer Recovering.

SPRING VALLEY, Minn., Special, Jan. 27.—Hon. E. D. Hammer, senator-elect from this county, is so far recovered from his illness as to be able to be out. He will probably report at the capitol in a day or two.

ONLY A FAKE.

No Truth in the Story of a Child Devil Near Howard Lake.

WAVERLY, Minn., Special, Jan. 27.—A short time ago communications appeared in the St. Paul Globe dated from Howard Lake, in which details were given of the alleged birth of a monstrosity near Plato, McLeod county. Reflections of a shameful character were cast upon the lady and it was represented that she gave birth to a child which bore a striking resemblance to the devil.

Your correspondent has taken pains to inquire into the actual facts, and for that purpose, interviewed a near relative in this village well acquainted with the people who have been so cruelly injured by these aspersions. It appears that the lady and her husband have a high standing in the community in which they live; that an early miscarriage is the only ground of the rumor, and that so far from being profane, they are exemplary Christian people.

The most curious feature of the business is that while in their immediate neighborhood no such rumors are prevalent, the dispatch in question dates from Howard Lake, over twenty miles north of where the incident is alleged to have occurred. Another suspicious feature is that the last name is given correctly, but the christian name is wrongly stated, a clear proof that the report was not sent by a well informed resident.

Letters of inquiry arrive daily at Howard, not only from this state, but also adjoining ones, and these villages are considerably worked up over the infamous scandal. Your correspondent is informed further that proceedings at law will be taken at an early day to secure an effectual vindication from the defamatory charges. Large numbers of people have visited Plato from the cities and adjoining parts who, after their abortive visit, have expressed their indignation in no measured terms.

It is understood that the fœtus has been preserved and can be used if necessary as an answer to this most unexampled and cowardly libel. The husband of the much maligned woman is determined to secure justice at whatever cost.

IT IS ALL OVER.

Gen. Miles and Staff Leave Pine Ridge for Chicago.

PINE RIDGE, S. D., Jan. 27.—Gen. Miles and staff left for Chicago to-day, leaving Col. Shafter in command at the agency.

Gen. Miles left orders for the Ninth cavalry to proceed to Fort Niobrara after the departure of the Brule Sioux for the Rosebud agency. They will be accompanied by a detachment of soldiers, as will also the Indians going to the Cheyenne River agency.

The work of disarming the Indians is to be continued. The Sixth cavalry, after conducting the Indians to Rosebud and Cheyenne River agencies is to proceed to Fort Niobrara and at the expiration of thirty days, if everything remains quiet, the First cavalry is to return to California, and at the end of sixty days Maj. Henry's command is to go to Fort Robinson.

Gen. Miles has selected the following named chiefs to go to Washington: Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Horses, American Horse, Fire Thunder and Hump, of the friendlies, and Little Wound, Big Road, He Dog, Two Strike, High Hawk and High Pipe, of the hostiles. Some surprise is expressed over the selection, as it was thought, Red Cloud would certainly go, and as Short Bull and Kicking Bear have been among the most prominent hostiles many expected them to be chosen.

Gen. Miles takes with him to Chicago forty Indians, who will go to Washington later on under the care of the war department. Gen Miles desires that they should go to the capital under the care of a military officer.

The slayer of Lieut. Casey was a graduate of the Carlisle Indian school in Pennsylvania, the son of a prominent Sioux known as No Water. The murderer was about to be turned over to the soldiers to be tried and punished when the news of the murder of the Indian Few Tails reached the Indians. They made a proposition that they would deliver the murderer of Lieut. Casey if the whites would bring the murderer of Few Tails and the two should be hanged together. The soldiers did not produce the slayer of Few Tails and the Indians continued to shield the son of No Water.

PROSTRATED WIRES.

Immense Damage Done by Sunday's Snow Storm.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Never before have the telegraph and telephone companies experienced such complete and absolute havoc. Out of 1,500 running out of this city the Western Union had but three wires working this afternoon. The Postal company has not a wire working from the city, while the Metropolitan Telegraph and Telephone company roughly estimates that 2,500 of its wires are laid low. The total damage to the companies mentioned which will result from this condition of affairs is estimated at $500,000. Two weeks' unceasing efforts will be required to get the wires back into the condition which existed before the storm. Between Philadelphia and New Brunswick, N. J., the wires are totally wrecked. All the Eastern wires are down between Williams' bridge and Stamford and all Western wires between Williams' Bridge and Croton Falls are in the same condition. At Pleasantville, just back of Sing Sing, every wire is down for a distance of two miles. The linemen working at Cos Cob report that all the wires at that point were found in the river. Every one of the Western Union wires which run along the line of the West Shore railroad is down south of Kingston. The Western Union wires which run through New Jersey are piled into small heaps on the Jersey flats.

The several telegraph and telephone companies which cover Brooklyn with their wires estimate their aggregate loss at $150,000. In Jersey City and Hoboken the telephone and telegraph wires hung in tangled masses from broken poles. In both these places the bell towers have again been pressed into service to be used in case of fire.

RUMORS OF A WRECK.

A Fatal Collision Reported on the Union Pacific.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 27.—Brief news was received here to-night of the wreck of the Union Pacific train on which the Seventh cavalry were passengers on their way from the Northern Indian country to the post at Fort Riley, Kan.

At Irving, Kan., the train collided with a passenger train. Both engineers and their firemen are reported killed and several passengers injured. It is not known whether any of the soldiers are among the injured. A train was made up for them and they were sent on their way to Fort Riley.

A Servant Girl Suffocated.

MITCHELL, S. D., Special Telegram, Jan. 27.—Louise Gerlach, a domestic in the home of T. C. Burns, was found dead in the kitchen this morning. It is supposed she fell in a faint and suffocated from gas that escaped from a gasoline stove.

Gamblers Captured.

ABERDEEN, S. D., Special Telegram, Jan. 27.—Early this morning the police raided a gambling den in the basement of Hotel Kennard, bagging six men, with tables and complete outfits. The gamblers were heavily fined. This is the second raid and more is to follow.

At the recent meeting of the board of commissioners in Wabasha county, it was decided to build a court house, the cost not to exceed $30,000. Plans will be submitted at as early a date as possible, and the work on the structure will begin as early in the spring as the weather will admit. A sinking fund, which has been accumulating for three years, amounts to about $20,000.

Editor Buck, of the Henderson Independent, was arrested on a charge of criminal libel preferred by Horace Soper of Gaylord. He was taken to Gibbon for trial, but made no defense and was found guilty and fined $25. An appeal was immediately taken to the district court and the case will likely come on at the May term. The whole matter grew out of the county seat fight.

As to the World's fair, it is recommended that Minnesota should make a creditable exhibit, and that $100,000 be appropriated therefor. This should be done by all means. Let us have an exhibit that will be worthy of our great state. Let there be no opposition to this. We failed in this regard at the Philadelphia centennial. We cannot afford to repeat the error.—St. Cloud Times.

In less than one hour after the audience which attended the entertainment of Maggie Mitchell's company at the opera house in Winona had left the building, it was found to be a mass of flames, and an hour later a small portion of the walls only remained. The origin of the fire is unknown, although it is supposed that the hangings over the stage caught in the gas and were smouldering unseen when the occupants left.

"The unanimous passage by the house of Axvig's resolution indorsing the bill in congress to provide $500,000 worth of seed wheat to farmers in North Dakota whose crops were destroyed by drouth was considerable of a victory for Hansbrough as well as Axvig," says the Bismarck Tribune.

Gov. Burke received the Gatling gun sent by the war department for the use of the state militia. He has asked the department to detail an officer to instruct the various companies in its use, and intends to send it to every company in the state that all may become expert in handling it. The 1,000 stand of arms are also expected very soon.

The Methodist college committee has been in session for the past few days in Wahpeton, receiving bids for the location of its college. An agreement was reached and Wahpeton's bid was nearly double that of any other, being $23,000 in cash and 120 acres of land. The committee adjourned to meet in Wahpeton Feb. 5.

Bill Erwin, the St. Paul criminal lawyer, is over at Bismarck helping the independents elect a United States senator. The other evening, the Bismarck Tribune reports, he called Senator Haggart to prove that he was a farmer. "Yes," said the senator, "he is an expert in the agricultural line. Once, a good many years ago, at my place in Cass county, we had a balky horse and a seeder that wouldn't work. Erwin came along. He made the horse go and fixed up the seeder all right. I think he's a farmer."

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Resume of the Important Measures Consined by Congress the Past Week.

What is Being Done by the Senate and House of Representatives at Washington.

Tuesday Jan., 20th.

SENATE.

Mr. Harris rose to a question of order and quoted Rule 40, which provides that no motion to modify, amend or suspend a rule, or part thereof, shall be in order except on one day's notice, in writing, specifying precisely the rule or part proposed to be suspended, modified or amended, and the parts thereof.

HOUSE.

The clerk having concluded the reading, Mr. Bland made the point that the journal had not been read in full, and demanded that the description of the various executive communications, resolutions, bills and petitions, which are referred under the rules and not in open house, be read.

The speaker directed the clerk to read this portion of the journal, which is ordinarily omitted. This was by far the longest portion of the journal, and its reading was not completed until 1 o'clock.

Mr. Mills then expressed his wish to debate the question of approving the journal, but the speaker declined to recognize him, on the ground that the house was dividing. With excited gestures, Mr. Mills strode down the aisle, and shaking his fist at the speaker, poured out a volume of denunciation, accusing him of practising a fraud on the house.

"You are perpetrating a fraud upon the house," he thundered, "and you know it." And his party colleagues burst into a round of applause and cheers and gathered around the champion.

But the speaker was immovable, and, amid the excitement, requested those opposed to the approving of the journal to rise. Phlegmatically he counted "one, two, three," and announced the motion carried—97 to 3.

By this time affairs had approached so near to personal rupture between the gentlemen on the opposing sides that the speaker was obliged to call upon the sergeat-at-arms for assistance, and that officer, bearing the mace in front of him, induced Mr. Mills to take his seat, and the storm passed away for the time. The journal was approved—144 to 103.

Wednesday Jan., 21.

SENATE.

It is doubtful if the situation in the senate has ever been more hopelessly tangled than it appeared to be at 6 o'clock to-night. There were few external evidences of the real estate of the case to the unpracticed eye, for matters seemed to be proceeding in the usual routine fashion, a senator was reading in a monotonous tone of voice from long columns of printed clippings, and no one of his dozen colleagues who retained their seats in the senate chamber appeared to be paying him the slightest attention and there were no signs of the bitter struggle that is going on.

HOUSE.

The house was in a wrangle again to-day during the discussion of the approval of the journal. The journal was finally approved, after which Mr. Bland offered a substitute for a resolution to limit debate on the appropriation bills, making the free coinage silver bill a continual order from and after Jan. 27. He should, he said, insist upon that motion until the fourth of March.

Thursday Jan. 22.

SENATE.

The resolution now before the senate (the closure) will probably be debated until the Republicans secure the attendance of more of the absentees, and this they expect will be early next week. It is believed that by that time Senators Squire, Pettigrew, Pierce, Cameron, Quay, Moody and perhaps Ingalls will find their affairs in such shape that they can return to the capital.

HOUSE.

Within three or four days there has been a decided change in the temper of the house on the question of free coinage. There is not so much enthusiasm in favor of it, and instead of a general feeling that the senate bill will pass the house considerable doubt exists.

Two Democrats who have been counted as sure to favor free coinage—Mr. Vaux and Mr. Mutchler of Pennsylvania—will so far come into line with their Eastern colleagues as to refrain from voting. There are others who have been counted as sure supporters of free coinage who are now classed as doubtful.

Friday Jan. 23.

SENATE.

The senate met in connection of yesterday's session, Mr. Cockrell resumed the floor to continue his argument against the closure rule.

He yielded to Mr. Hoar, who spoke against the action of the minority in preventing legislation, after which Mr. Cockrell concludes his speech.

HOUSE.

Mr. Cooper, of Indiana, rising to a question of privilege, sent to the clerk's desk and had read a resolution offered by him in September last, making certain charges against the pension commissioner, and asking for a broadening of the investigation of that official. This resolution had been referred to the select committee examining previous charges, and on the 11 of September the chairman of that committee (Mr. Morrill, of Kansas) had been directed to report the resolution, but he had never performed that duty.

After considerable debate the matter was settled amicably by Mr. Morrill obtaining the original resolution from the files of the house, reporting it from his committee and having it referred to his committee on rules.

Monday Jan. 26.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The senate met at noon in continuation of the legislative day of Thursday, the pending question being the resolution to amend the rules by providing a method of closing debate.

Mr. Morgan resumed the floor and continued his argument, begun on Saturday, in opposition to the proposed rule and to the elections bill, both of which measures he claimed (on the authority of the New York Times) to be for the advancement of Mr. Harrison's project for re-election.

HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The usual skirmish took place as to the reading and approval of the journal.

Mr. Boutelle of Maine moved that the house go into committee of the whole on the navy appropriation bill. The yeas and nays were ordered, and the clerk had called but a few names when Messrs. Mansur and Heard of Missouri, returning from the senate side, spoke a few words to their colleagues, whereupon Mr. Rogers of Arkansas rose, and, interrupting the call, informed the house that the force bill had been defeated.

Froze Out a Rival.

DES MOINES, Jan. 27.—Two young colored men, John Watson and Robert Nash, courted the same girl, and last night both of them called on her at the same time. Watson possessed the greatest staying power and froze out Nash. Watson left about midnight, and, as he was approaching his employer's house, a shot was fired at him by some one concealed in the shadow of the porch, the bullet striking him in the forehead and inflicting a serious wound. Nash has been arrested, but denied having done the shooting.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. W. A. Sorsoliel wishes to express his sincere thanks to the many friends in St. Hilaire who so kindly assisted at the funeral of his wife last Friday.

The Red Lake Falls News intimates that the farmers in this vicinity are in favor of county division. This is strange indeed considering the fact that the St. Hilaire Farmer's Alliance at their meeting last Friday unanimously adopted a resolution condemning the division scheme and ordered a copy of the resolution forwarded to Senator Lommen. This certainly looks as if the farmers were heartily in favor of the scheme, don't it?

While the whole county has been more or less excited about the Indian dances, and the village authorities of Thief River Falls felt called upon to ask the governor for aid, it seems strange that last Saturday's Thief River Falls Press should have no comment on the trouble. It must be that Editor White has been gently slumbering the past week or else he has became so absorbed in that girl of his that he is deaf to rumors of all kinds.

The scheme to divide Polk county into four county seats is receiving a severe mauling from the press and it is safe to say that when the townsite owners present their measure to the legislature, that the Polk county representatives will not father the bill, but present it as a matter of courtesy. The division fever only rages in the heads of a few boomers while those persons who are compelled to pay taxes are satisfied with the present area and management of the county, and are not anxious to encounter any additional strain on their purse strings.—Fisher Bulletin.

DIED:—At Stillwater Minn., January 22nd, Mrs. Anna Sorsoliel, of childbirth, wife of Wm. A. Sorsoliel.

Mr. W. A. Sorsoliel accompanied by Mrs. E. T. Morgan, Miss May Morgan and Mrs. J. M, Blakely arrived with the remains on last Friday's train, A large number of friends of the deceased assembled at the M. E. Church at 2 p. m. and listened to an excellent funeral sermon by Rev. Chapman. Mrs. Sorsoliel was well and favorably known here having lived here nearly ten years and her sudden death greatly shocked a large number of very warm friends. She left three small children to mourn with her husband an irreparable loss.

Out of the 114 members of the Minne House 62 are farmers, their political preference of these 62 being: Republicans 20, alliance 16, democrats 13, alliance democrats 9, republican-alliance 3 prohibition 1. It has been arranged to hold occasional meetings of those farmer members, in which politics will be ignored, for the purpose of agreeing upon what measures shall be given their support. In the senate there are only 17 farmers, out of a body of 54 members.

The Red Lake Falls News registers the following vicious kick at St. Hilaire because we are opposed to increasing our taxation to make that town a county seat and thereby help boom that slumbering berg:

"St. Hilaire is opposed to granting the people of Polk county the right to voice their sentiments in the matter of county division That berg partakes of the nature of the mule, not only in its manner of kicking but it has no pride in it's past history and no hopes of future increase."

We will now take occasion to inform the News that at the proper time we may favor county division but not on the lines proposed in the present scheme and when we do you may be sure it will not be in the interest of Red Lake Falls. We intend when the proper time comes to have the county seat of the new county up in this neck of the woods, and we are compelled to notify Red Lake Falls that every voter in this part of the county will fight the present scheme.

"ETHERIAL MILDNESS."

That is what Thompson the poet called the sort of weather regnant in the Red River Valley this winter. On Monday the old inhabitants were coaxing their memories for precedents and some were found. Axel Walstrom of Polk County, the great farmers' alliance organizer, was interviewed on the subject. He said that 17 years ago it was so mild that the farmers between Crookston and Fisher got out their oxen and plowed on Christmas. Twelve years ago the same experiance was had in this valley and boats began to run on the Red and Red Lake Rivers between Fisher and Winnipeg. There are many others who can recollect those marvelous winters. If this weather keeps up, farmers will sow in March this year and reap in July.—Grand Forks News.

Washington Special Telegram Jan 24. The house committee on appropriations agreed to-day to allow $25,000 for the survey of that part of the Chippewa reservation which will remain after the present allowance for surveys exhausted. This amount will not provide for one quarter of the work yet to be done.

Representative Comstock was before the committee today and made an emphatic statement of what work yet remains, the possibility of doing it promptly and the needs of more money with which to do it. He asked for $250,000 and the returns from the surveying division of the land office indicate that that amount would be none too large. The department favored an appropriation of at least $100,000 Mr. Comstock will make an attempt to have the figure increased when the bill comes up in the house, If he fails there the senate will be asked to increase the amount.

At the rate of appropriation favored by the committee it would be many years before the affairs of the reservations in Minnesota could be closed up and the valuable timber lands put on the market under the terms of the Nelson bill.

The adjourned meeting of the Polk County Bar Association was held on Saturday evening last an a bill was drafted providing for the appointment of an additional judge for this district According to the provisions of the bill the person appointed must reside north of the Norman county line, and continue to so reside during the whole time of holding the position. The appointment is to hold good until the next general election when his successor is to be elected. The bill has been sent to Senator Lommen with the request that it be introduced as early as possible. The object of requiring the judge to be a resident of the territory north of Norman County is to permit his holding court in the northern part of the district while Judge Mills presides in the southern portion. The district is much too large for one man to do the work, and it is very probable that if the matter is properly presented to the legislature by the local members an additional judge will be provided,—Crookston Times.

INDIAN SCARE.

The country has been badly scared the past week over the dancing of the Indians, but things have quieted down the past day or two. The village authorities of Thief River Falls wrote to the governor for aid last week and last Friday J. L. Wickstrom a farmer living northeast of here, telegraphed the governor that the farmers were in danger. Adjt, Gen. Mullen and Col. Chantler of St. Paul, were detailed to look the matter up and arrived last Saturday. They visited Thief River Falls and after looking the situation over and becoming fully convinced that there was no danger left for home the following day. The farmers living near the reservation northeast of here are still badly scared and with good reason, They have been stealing large quantities of timber from the reservation, The Indians have determined to stop the thieving and have made several threats. While watching the timber they thought they would have some fun and commenced dancing. The reports widely circulated that there was a band of Sioux and a band of Canadian Indians among them was wholly false. The Indians near here number less than seventy-five including squaws and papooses and will trouble no one except timber thieves.

FOR THE SPOILS ONLY.

A leading Alliance member unburdens himself to an Evening Tribune Reporter as follows:

"The combine effected by Ignatus Donnelly with the Democrats in the legislature will prove an awful setback to our new party. I can perceive the bad effects of it already in disgust of the Alliance voters whom I meet. It will set us back two years and perhaps four The proper thing for the Alliance men in the legislature to do was, to stand aloof and let the two old parties combine and divide the spoiles. That would have shown that we were standing for principle and at the next election the people would have seen to it that we had enough votes in both houses to control without being obliged to fuse with anybody. As it is now the Donnelly bargain creates the impression that the few places to be distributed are the most important in our eyes. At least two thirds of the alliance voters came from the republican party, and only one third from the democratic party. Now what does Donnelly do but go to work and make a trade which surrenders almost everything to the democrats Are former republicans, who cut loose from their party and went with the alliance for the sake of principle, going to be content to see the old democratic party reap the fruit of the new party's triumph? I fear not. It will be hard work to hold a good many of them in line for the alliance next time."

A committee appointed by the Polk County Farmers Alliance met this week and outlined a bill which it is proposed to introduce in the legislature and which provides for a radical reduction in the saleries of county officers of this county The following resolutions were recommended.

COUNTY AUDITOR.
Present salery	$2,000	Clerks $1500
Salery suggested	1,000	Clerks 2,500
COUNTY TREASURER.
Present salery	$1,800	Clerk $1,000

Rec'd last year $7035.80
Salery suggested	$1,500	Clerks $1500
CLERK OF COURT.
Present salery	$1,800	Clerks $1,000
Salery suggested	1,300	Clerk 700
SUPT. OF SCHOOLS.
Present salery	$1,800
Salery suggested	$1,400	Clerk $800
COUNTY ATTORNEY.
Present salery		$1,800
Salery suggested		2,200
JUDGE OF PROBATE.
Present salery		$1,350
Salery suggested		1,200
SHERIFF.
Estimate of last year's receipts		$7,500
Salery suggested		1,500

In the case of the sheriff it is recommended that the county pay [illegible] and car fare and allow $2.00 per day for expences while on the road; deputies are [illegible] allowed $2.00 per day while in actual service. The reduction suggested above with the exception of that of sheriff are about in a line with the recommendations of the county commissioners. It is not believed that the proposed change in the sheriffs office will be beneficial to the county for obvious reasons, but principally because it furnishes an incentive to dishonesty as there is no way of checking up the office, and because it will have a tendency to decrease the efficiency of the service. The committee also recommended that the confirmation of all appointments be taken out of the hands of the County Board. The bill is being prepared by the County Attorney in accordance with these recommendations and will be forwarded to Senator Lommen next week.—Crookston Times.

A Remarkable Plea.

Col. John Van Arman is said to have been the only lawyer in America who, while assuming the guilt of defendant at the bar, dared to demand his acquittal on the ground of public policy. This was in the stock yards case in which Rider was on trial. It seemed that the stock yards company had sent messengers to the penitentiary at Joliet to obtain incriminating evidence, and had been afforded every facility for that purpose. In his argument to the jury Col. Van Arman devoted considerable time to a discussion of the growth and development of corporations and monopolies, and the power they had acquired over offices and officers at the expense of the people.

He inquired if a crime had been committed against a private citizen whether such citizen would have been permitted the privileges exercised by the prosecution to secure a conviction as had been done in the case under consideration. In concluding he demanded that though Rider might be guilty as charged in the indictment, the jury should find him innocent, as a lesson to corporations to respect the rights of the people.—Chicago Journal.

Two Odd Coincidences.

Capt. A. E. Anderson of the Hudson river steamer Mary Powell tells of two odd coincidences which he "ran up against" one day. His steamer was lying at the foot of Vestry street, Poughkeepsie, when a man boarded her and said to the captain: "I have lost my trunk. I don't know whether it was taken off this boat or not." "What is your name?" asked Capt. Anderson quite naturally. "A. E. Anderson," was the reply. "My initials and surname exactly," returned the captain. "My full name is Ambrose Eltinge Anderson," said the stranger, almost dumfounded to find the captain's name the same, letter for letter.

The same afternoon Capt. Anderson was treated to another surprise. An elderly lady boarded the Mary Powell at Newburg, remarking to the captain as she handed in her ticket that her name was Mary Powell, and that she lived in Philadelphia. This was too much for Anderson, who related to the lady the coincidence of the morning, whereupon the two spent a full hour discussing coincidences, strange and otherwise.—St. Louis Republic.

After Thirty Years.

Nearly thirty years ago a young Englishman named Robert Brown left his native town, Surrey, and came to America. For several years he corresponded with his sister at home, then the letters grew infrequent and finally ceased. When last heard from he was in Boston. The sister wrote, only to have her letters returned through the dead letter office marked "Not found." Finally, as a last resort, she addressed a letter to "President Harrison, Washington, D. C., U. S. A.," relating those facts and imploring his aid in finding her brother. This letter found its address. Instead of going to the waste basket it was forwarded to Mayor Hart, of Boston with a request that he look Mr. Brown up. In a short time response came that Robert Brown was dead, and had left two sons, both prosperous young business men in Boston, and the news was sent to their aunt in Surrey.—Washington Post.

Arcadian Simplicity.

At Saint-Ouen is a family of gardeners. More than a century ago they leased wide fields of rich landlords. During the Reign of Terror, when the rich had everything to fear and the poor everything to hope for, these landlords fled. Since that time they have not been heard from.

Until their leases expired these gardeners, named Compoint, religiously laid by the rent due, and afterward no claimant appearing, found themselves in possession of large funds.

They have built expensive villas and on fete days indulge in all the luxuries which wealth can buy. On ordinary days, however, they don blouses and work as though they had no penny laid by for a rainy day. That is to say, a dozen times a year they dress in broadcloth and their wives in expensive costumes; the rest of the time in the ordinary habits of workpeople.—Cor. New York Herald.

Instance of an Earlier Condition.

The Opistho comus, a bird of the Island of Marajo, in the Amazon, is four footed when young. Its wing has two fingers, each with a claw, which drops off after a time, and these are used in scrambling about. As the wings of birds are supposed to have been evolved from prehensile hands, this is as Mr. F. E. Beddard states, "a curious instance of a partial retention of an earlier condition."—New Orleans Picayune.

George Schweich, of the firm of Ringquist & Schweich, Richmond, Mo., owns the table upon which the book of Mormon was written. David Whitmer, the grandfather of Mr. Schweich, formerly owner of the table, was one of the three witnesses to the divine authenticity of the book above named.

For a long time the stealings of the operatives in the diamond mines of South Africa were, it is estimated, one-half of the production. Very stringent regulations have of late been put in force, and although the loss from this source has been greatly reduced, it is still believed to amount to $750,000 a year.

Mr. John Keowan, the worthy post master at Keown, Allegheny County, Penn., says: Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sells better than any other." The reason of this is because it can always be depended upon. Let any one troubled with a severe cold give it a trial and they will find that the first dose will relieve the lungs and make breathing easier, and that its continued use will free the system of all symptoms of the cold. The promptness and certainty of this remedy in the relief and cure of colds, has won for it many sincere friends and made it very popular. For sale by Julius L. Johnson.

Not Quite.

New York Sun: As he entered the car at East Buffalo he saw at a glance that there was one seat with a young lady in it, and he marched straight down the aisle, deposited his grip and overcoat, sat down and familiarly observed:

"I entirely forgot to ask your permission."

"That's of no consequence." she replied.

"Thanks. Traveling alone, eh?"

"Almost, but not quite. My husband is in the smoker, my father and brother are in the seat back of us, and the two gentlemen across the aisle are my uncles. The conductor, who is a cousin of mine, has just gone forward, but will return soon, and I will introduce you to my aunt if you will go back a few seats.

"Aw! Aw! I see!" gasped the man, and the floor of the car suddenly became so red hot that he picked up his baggage and his feet and lit out for the next one ahead.

Suspended by a Finger.

One of the most singular accidents on record befell Mrs. S. Hardy, of Madison, one day recently. She went into the stable to see about her hens, and stepping upon the feed trough in one of the stalls, reached up with her right hand and drew herself up. An iron garden rake hung there, and she placed her hand on that. In doing so her foot slipped from under her and she fell, catching one of the teeth of the rake into the flesh of the second finger, above the joint, and there she hung, just high enough for her feet to rest on the floor. In this trying position she concluded she might die before any one could come to her assistance, but with a rare presence of mind she caught the handle of a hoe which hung beside the rake with her left hand, drew herself up so as to unhook her finger and fell unconscious to the floor. After a time she recovered and went into the house.—Bangor News.

"A month ago I was happy!" is the declaration of Bryan W. Proctor the poet. So were lots of other folks, who are now telling people in decided nasal tones: "Got a toad in my head." But there is still happiness to be secured; a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure any cough or cold.

Don't worry; it interferes with the action of the stomach.

Reputations Made in a Day

Are precious scarce. Time tries the worth of a man or a medicine. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a thirty years' growth, and like those hardy lichens that garnish the crevices of Alaska's rocks, it flourishes perennially. And its reputation has as firm a base as the rocks themselves. No medicine is more highly regarded as a remedy for fever and ague, billious remittent, constipation, liver and kidney disorders, nervousness and rheumatism.

An Illustration.

Of the value of extensive and judicious advertising of any article of undoubted merit is found in the remarkable success of the California Fig Syrup Co., which has simply been phenomenal, even in this age of great enterprises.

Organized a few years ago to manufacture a new and more perfect remedy than had ever been produced, a laxative with original and attractive features, prepared from delicious fruits and health-giving plants, one which would be pleasant and refreshing to the taste, as well as really beneficial to the system, the management very wisely concluded to select the leading newspapers throughout the United States to make known to the public the merits of the new remedy, Syrup of Figs.

As happens with every valuable remedy, cheap substitutes are being offered to the public, but with the general diffusion of knowledge it is becoming more difficult each day to impose on the public. Health is too important to be trifled with, and reputable druggists will not attempt to deceive the public, as they all know that Syrup of Figs, is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. of San Francisco, Cal., Louisville, Ky., New York, N. Y. Do not accept any cheap non-advertised imitations if offered.

The Engineer's Report.

"In the early days of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad," said a railroad man the other day, "stock was so frequently killed on the road that Manager Clark found it necessary to require the locomotive engineer to make a note of whatever they killed. The engineers had to fill out a form stating when, where and what kind of an animal had been killed, and turn the report in to the superintendent of stock claims.

"One day a complaint from a farmer was received by Manager Clark, in which the killing of a valuable cow by the Santa Fe engine was related. The letter was referred to the stock claim department, but no report from the engineer of the train could be found. Mr. Clark sent for the engineer, an old employe of the road named John Norton, and asked him why he had not reported the collision with the cow.

"'Didn't know I hurt the cow,' said Norton.

"'You remember hitting the cow?'

"'Certainly—and I slowed up when she rolled over on her back, but she waved her feet for me to go ahead, and I concluded she was all right.'"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

MINNESOTA SOLONS.

Condensed Proceedings of Both Branches of the Minnesota Legislature.

What is Being Attempted in the Way of Legislation by Our Lawmakers.

Monday, Jan. 19th.

SENATE.

Senator Lienau introduced a bill providing for state teachers' certificates. By its provisions there is to be an examining board, to consist of the state superintendent and four members appointed by the governor. This board will have charge of the examination for state certificates and the granting of the same. It may revoke a certificate at any time. There shall be two grades of these state certificates.

The bill introduced by Senator March relating to trust companies gives such corporations power to receive money on deposit and issue time certificates of deposit of same.

Senator Allen wants the alien real estate law amended. By the provisions of his bill no alien or corporation is permitted to own more than 5,000 acres of land in the state, except railway and other roadway corporations, and those engaged in the manufacture of lumber.

HOUSE.

The speaker announced his appointment of committees. An examination of the list shows that the Democrats are given a representation of 132 upon the various committees, the Alliance 90, the Republicans 103, and the one Prohibition member four places.

Mr. Currier of Blue Earth introduced H. F. 68, which is a bill to govern and regulate the rates of railroad companies in the state. This bill is modeled on the Iowa state railway law to a certain extent, and extends and defines the powers of the railroad commissioners of this state. It contains many proposed changes of an extremely radical nature, giving the railroad commissioners power to make the rates for the railroads, and providing heavy penalties for any breach of the sections of the act.

Tuesday, Jan. 20.

SENATE.

Mr. Donnelly presented a long and vigorous protest, signed by twenty-seven democratic and Alliance Senators, against the action of the president of the senate in relation to the protest of the Republican senators who objected to the novel method of selecting the committees.

Senator Phillips presented a bill which proposes an amendment to the constitution which is a step toward the realization of the single tax idea.

The bill of Senator Tawney amending the jury law does away with the practice of securing "struck" juries in ordinary cases. Ramsey and Hennepin counties are excepted from the provisions of the bill.

Senator Hompe's bill regarding land within the meandered line of lakes provides that such lands may be sold in the same manner as school lands, and the proceeds shall be devoted to school purposes.

Senator Hompe introduced bills providing for erection of private elevators upon the right of way of railroads, and also that any person may build a side track to any private elevator, warehouse or other property, at his own expense, and the railroad companies must allow the construction of switches connecting such side tracks with the main lines.

HOUSE.

Mr. Cross of Goodhue introduced an important railroad bill, granting to railroad companies the right to use the right of way of other companies under certain conditions.

Mr. Currier of Blue Earth submitted a resolution the other day to the effect that the house and senate concurring, the legislature petition congress to so amend the constitution of the United States as to have the United States senators elected by the people. This resolution was called up by Mr. Lomen of Ramsey, and in a vigorous speech Mr. Lomen opposed the passage of the resolution. Mr. Feig took an opposite view, and declared the present system of electing United States senators to be a most fertile source of corruption, alluding to the last senatorial election. Mr. Reeve spoke against the resolution, but a vote being taken it was carried by 81 to 11.

Wednesday, Jan. 21.

SENATE.

Senator March introduced a joint resolution calling for the appointment of a joint committee of two senators and three members of the house to consider the question of waterways. The idea is to have the committee investigate the feasibility of establishing waterways connecting those already in existence.

Senator Davis presented a bill which allowed all grand or petit jurors the sum of $2 and coroners and justice court jurors $1 per day and all of them 10 cents per mile for traveling expenses.

Senator Daugherty's bill relating to steam boilers provides for an inspector in each congressional district who shall inspect all boilers not subject to United States inspection.

Senator McMillan presented a bill providing for an amendment to the constitution creating a court of pardons, which court shall exercise the pardoning power now vested in the governor.

HOUSE.

Mr. Feig introduced a bill to reduce the salary of the secretary of the state board of health from $2,500 to $1,000 per annum.

Mr. Bell introduced a bill authorizing corporations organized under the laws of the state to renew at the end of the time for which they have been organized. The present law places the limit at thirty years, after which time they expire.

The question of abolishing the wolf bounties, which has been brought up by a bill introduced by Mr. Bell of Ramsey into the house, is likely to create considerable excitement. The pay of these bounties has for the past seven or eight years been a serious strain upon the state treasury. Since 1885 the amount paid out in bounties has been largely increased each year, until the annual appropriation has become entirely inadequate to meet the demands. During certain months of the year the bounty is only $3 per scalp, while during other months it is $5. It is alleged that in certain counties certain persons have been in the habit of farming wolves, and also of keeping the wolf cubs in captivity during the months when their scalps have been only $3 until the $5 months came around. It is also alleged that wolf scalps have been imported from other states and that generally speaking the bounty system has been grossly abused.

Thursday, Jan. 22.

SENATE.

Senator Mayo's joint resolution calls upon the judiciary committee to investigate the condition of the railroads of the state and to collect full information as to the mileage; amount paid for construction and for rights of way and depot grounds; value of all property; salaries paid to officers, attorneys and agents; number of persons employed and salaries paid; amount of operating expenses; amount of stock issued and on what accounts, with the names of the present holders; the forms of contracts used by the companies; whether the managers or other officers are in any way interested in the shipment of freight or passengers over their respective roads, and all other information obtainable.

Senator Searles' bill providing for a monument for the First Minnesota on the Gettysburg battlefield appropriates $20,000 for the purpose.

The house bill authorizing the county of Lake to issue bonds for the construction of roads, was passed by the senate under suspension of the rules.

HOUSE.

Mr. Gildea, of Pipestone, offered a resolution making provision for the appointment of a committee of three to investigate the railroads of the state as to cost, watered stock, etc., being in substance the same as that introduced by Mr. Wagoner.
